U. S. Seizes 14 French Ships; Roosevelt Rebukes Vichy for Agreeing to Collaborate With Axis; G. M. Accepts Mediators' Terms, Strike Averted

10-Cent-an-Hour Raise Granted; Union Foregoes Closed Shop

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Vice Chairman William H. Davis, of the Defense Mediation Board, early today announced that General Motors Corporation had accepted board recommendations providing for a flat 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for the company's 250,000 employes. Thus was averted what threatened to be the defense program's most serious strike.

Davis' announcement, dated 12:30 a. m., was based on a letter of acceptance from G. M. C. President C. E. Wilson, who declared he "decided it was the best thing to do in the interests of all concerned."

The acceptance came only a few hours before a deadline set by the board yesterday for 4:10 a. m. today, after the C. I. O. United Auto Workers' Union agreed to postpone for 24 hours its threatened strike of 61 plants where 161,000 are employed.

Company Declined at First

The 24-hour "ultimatum period" during which the board told the company either to accept or reject its proposals, appeared to have spelled the difference between labor war and peace. Davis had announced early yesterday that at that time the company had declined to agree to the board's proposals.

It was known that the action would have struck had the company's decision remained in the negative.

The board's recommendations, which the union had accepted by Thursday night, provided that there would be no closed shop, union shop, or maintenance of membership clause, which were included in the union's original demands.

Agreement to Run a Year

Other significant provisions:

The agreement is to run without change for a one-year period, as distinct from the contract which expired last month, and which was terminable on 60-day notice.

The impartial umpire provided for in the company-union grievance hearing system, is to be given wider discretion in reviewing penalties imposed by the company for violating rules or violating the contract.

In the advance of employes where ability, merit, and capacity are equal, those with the longest seniority will be given preference.

During the life of the agreement the company will not lock out employes. (The contract already had a prohibition against strike.)

Strike Postponed Once

The settlement was accomplished after negotiations which continued almost without interruption since May 1, two days after the case was certified to the board. On certification, the union agreed to postpone a strike threatened for two weeks ago, but last Sunday reset the strike date for Thursday.

This morning's action represents one of the board's most significant accomplishments, not only by reason of the settlement but also because the negotiations forestalled a major defense stoppage in which three-quarters of a billion dollars of orders for planes, plane parts, machine guns, trucks and other armament would have been involved.

Burko Cleared Of Conspiracy In 57 Hours

He Still Faces Trial On 11 Counts; Goes Free on $5,000 Bond

Joseph R. Burko, dismissed deputy clerk in the Police Court, was acquitted of criminal conspiracy last night by a District Court jury which deliberated 57 hours and 26 minutes.

Burko was accused of scheming with James E. Sullivan, ousted bailiff, to commit larceny, forgery, embezzlement and corruption and obstruction of justice in the court they served. Sullivan pleaded guilty and testified that he collected fines from citizens, split the money with Burko and that they escaped detection by altering the court's records.

Burko is still liable to trial on 11 indictments, which charge specific instances of theft, embezzlement or forgery. He was released on a $5,000 bond fixed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

Lays Prosecution to Plot

Burko, defended by Attorney James J. Laughlin, denied any wrongdoing and blamed his prosecution on a plot of District Attorney Edward M. Curran (a former police judge) and Police Judge Walter J. Casey. Burko claimed the two were trying to force him to incriminate Police Judge Hobart Newman, with whom, he said, they were at odds. Burko was clerk in Newman's court.

Justice Letts told the one woman and 11 men jurors that if the evidence satisfied them there was such a plot they might give the facts consideration in reaching their verdict.

Newman, as a witness for Burko, testified that his clerk was dismissed by the police judges with-

Hamilton Has Talk With Hess, Flies to London

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 16.—The Rudolf Hess riddle still gripped the bewildered British today in a suspense unbroken by Prime Minister Churchill, who deliberately reserved judgment as to whether Hess came as a peacemaker, a friend, or a Hitlerian "murderer" as charged by a war cabinet officer.

Hess' sports friend, the Duke of Hamilton, near whose Scottish home the beetle-browed Nazi Party leader parachuted last Saturday night, and Ivone Kirkpatrick, foreign office adviser, flew to London early today after again talking with Hess.

These men, who knew Hess long before the war, went into an immediate hour's conference with Alfred Duff-Cooper, minister of information, possibly foreshadowing new developments in the bizarre case.

The 38-year-old duke carried a bulky dispatch case into the conference, and it was at least the second time he had talked with the man described in Berlin as a deluded, messianic missionary who made an unauthorized flight to Scotland to talk peace with the duke.

After his talk with Hess early this week, the duke saw Prime Minister Churchill. The duke has been given a leave from his duties with the Royal Air Force to aid in unraveling the case.

It was Ernest Bevin, Socialist minister of labor, who declared yesterday that Hess was a calculating "murderer" bent on seeking peace with Britain—not out of a "mad sympathy" for the Britons but with "a very sane concern for the German people."

Moreover, Hess made the flight with the full knowledge of Adolf Hitler, in Bevin's opinion—an opinion which the minister emphasized was his personal one.

Since he was taken to a hospital,

Morgenthau To Offer New Tax Program

Congressional Row Begins Over Dinner Given by Secretary

Secretary Morgenthau indicated yesterday the Treasury will offer Congress a revised tax program next week and at the same time announced plans for $1,334,000,000 in large-scale borrowing.

In Congress, meanwhile, a row began over a dinner party the Treasury Secretary tendered certain Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee at his home Monday night.

A Republican charge that there had been "shennanigans" at the secret conference drew from Committee Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, a prompt denial of any improper action.

"If there are any conferences the minority will be represented," said Doughton. "There have been no shennanigans."

Sullivan to Be Spokesman

Morgenthau said at a press conference that Assistant Treasury Secretary John L. Sullivan "will be talking for the Administration" when he appears before the committee Monday with what is expected to be an alternative tax program designed to allay criticism of the original proposals.

Advance descriptions of the new tax program say that it will be along the following lines:

1. Higher levies on excess profits,

The Washington, Finest Battleship, Joins U. S. Navy

Philadelphia, May 15.—The powerful U. S. S. Washington, "finest warship ever built," formally joined the Navy today and Secretary Knox, in an interview at the brief ceremonies, declared it "and every other American ship should be used to insure the delivery of goods to England."

He did not comment directly on convoys, but asserted "if you ask me if I think we should insure the delivery of those things we make for England, I certainly do."

Thousands of workmen, who broke all construction records by completing the 35,000-ton Washington many months ahead of schedule and hundreds of guests cheered as Rear Admiral A. E. Watson, of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, transferred command of the dreadnaught to Capt. Howard Hartwell James Benson.

Secretary Knox congratulated the Washington's 75 officers and 1,200 bluejackets, asserting "it is a marvelous thing to be called to duty on one of the two greatest battleships that ply the ocean. . . ."

With heavy guns already mounted and virtually ready for duty, the sleek $70,000,000 warship will take its place with the fleet "probably by July 1," Admiral Watson disclosed.

Help Wanted

McCarran Accepts 'Mayoralty,' But Keeps Fingers Crossed

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, was Washington's new "mayor" last night—but with reservations.

The Senate Steering Committee yesterday named McCarran to succeed Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, as chairman of the Senate District Committee, at the same time moving Reynolds to the chairmanship of the Military Affairs Committee.

Long reluctant to take the job he once flatly refused, McCarran told reporters he had decided to take the post, provided Congress agrees to install in the Senate District Committee a "municipal clerk."

The clerk, McCarran said, should be a lawyer, a "tax economist" and an expert on public utilities and other phases of municipal administration.

In addition to his professional qualifications, McCarran stated, his clerk should have lived in the District long enough to have acquired an understanding of the city's problems.

"To make effective the work of the District Committee which touches on everyday lives in a community of nearly 700,000 persons, it is absolutely essential that the committee be served by an expert who can analyze bills, keep in contact with the District Commissioners and who, above all, has a well grounded understanding and sympathy with local problems," he said.

The Senator was understood to have assurances from Senate leaders of their support before the Appropriations Committee. Salary of a clerk of the required experience would be about $6,000 a year, it was said.

Senate Passes Bill to Take Over Alien Vessels By 59 to 20

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday voted 59 to 20 to empower President Roosevelt to take over 450,000 tons of foreign shipping in American waters for use on Western Hemisphere trade routes or in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Passage of the foreign ships requisition bill came after Administration forces won a 43-38 vote against the Vandenberg-Clark amendment, which would have banned the transfer to Britain of any of the 30 Axis vessels now in American ports.

The legislation, approved by the House last week, is expected to be ready for President Roosevelt's signature within a few days, after House action on minor amendments adopted by the Senate.

Under the bill, this Government can purchase, charter, requisition or seize for American or British use all the 84 foreign vessels now idle in American waters, including 70 already under "protective custody." Affected by the measure are 37 Danish, 28 Italian, 2 German and 14 French ships, among them the giant luxury liner Normandie.

Swift Senate action on the shipping bill followed the decision of isolationist leaders to defer efforts to force a convoy debate, probably until the Administration has indicated its stand on the issue.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who was to have offered an anticonvoy amendment as a rider to the shipping bill, maintained that Congress in the near future will be given an opportunity to voice the country's "overwhelming sentiment" against convoying.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a militant supporter of Administration foreign policy, took the floor during the shipping bill debate to demand "effective and courageous use" of American naval and air forces "to guarantee the defense of the Western Hemisphere."

Bailey Backs Vandenberg

"If more defense could be secured for the United States by delivering war materials to England, that should be done, and done at once," Lee said.

The young Oklahoman urged immediate declaration of a "war emergency" by President Roosevelt and establishment of a $500,000,000 "morale" and counterpropaganda agency.

The Senate roll call on passage of the shipping bill showed 48 Democrats, 10 Republicans and 1 Independent approving the measure. Recorded against passage were 15 Republicans, 4 Democrats and 1

Army, Navy Ready to Take Martinique if Ordered

CARIBBEAN 'POWDER KEG'—Map shows the French Caribbean holdings. The United States—if called for action—will be ready with plans for the invasion of Martinique, heavily fortified island just 1,260 miles from Panama canal

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

A show-down in the controversy over the French island of Martinique appeared near last night. The Army and the Navy were ready with plans if called upon for action.

Martinique, heavily fortified and possessing the finest harbor between Cuba and South America, has been a problem since the fall of France last June—a worrisome gap in the chain of island bases with which the United States seeks to fence in the Caribbean Sea and the Panama Canal.

In the hands of an unfriendly power, or of the ally of an unfriendly power, Martinique would be a downright menace. This would be particularly true if the Nazis took over Dakar in French West Africa, opposite the bulge of Brazil, and used it as a U-boat base.

Vichy could be expected, of course, to deny that its colonies in the Western Hemisphere will ever be used against the United States or Latin America. But the United States, it was pointed out last night, would have to judge the value of

Petain Casts Lot With Axis; Will Meet Hitler Again Soon

Marshal to Discuss Syrian Question, Bern Sources Say

Chief of State Calls on French Not to Question Him

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, May 15.—Another Hitler-Petain meeting within the next four or five days was foreshadowed in reports reaching usually well-informed sources here this evening.

The main purpose of the meeting will be once again to define in the light of Syrian developments the limits beyond which the marshal will not allow his government to go in exchange for any concessions whatsoever.

Such a meeting may also serve to disclose to the world the exact extent to which the German occupying authorities are laying the onus for their actions on France in face of world opinion.

That the question of German use of Syrian bases may also bring about a split between Vice Premier Admiral Darlan and Marshal Petain was also hinted in these same quarters, which intimated that from reports they had received, they learned the marshal, until this morning, was completely uninformed on the latest Syrian developments, beyond the demands made to Gen. Henri Dentz, French high commissioner for Syria, last week.

Reported to be "infuriated" with these latest developments, the marshal is understood to be conducting an inquiry to establish responsibility for these events

By Ralph E. Heinzen

Vichy, May 15.—Marshal Petain called upon the French people to follow him "without questioning" in his negotiations with Adolf Hitler in order to wipe out France's defeat and "conserve her rank as a European and colonial power in the world."

The 85-year-old chief of state spoke to the nation by radio following announcement that his cabinet had accepted unanimously the preliminary terms laid down by Hitler for a new scheme of "collaboration" between France and Germany, replacing the armistice agreement.

Petain intimated that France must come to an understanding with Germany and has chosen "collaboration" with the Axis new order both in Europe and Africa, convinced that Germany will win the war and that France's fate rests with Berlin.

The marshal's speech and yesterday's announcement of the preliminary agreement reached by Vice Premier Admiral Darlan and Hitler at Berchtesgaden carried a clear warning to most observers that France is turning her back on both the United States and Britain

British Move Swiftly to Crush German Air Forces in Syria

By the Associated Press

Cairo, May 15.—The British announced tonight that many German bombers and fighters were arriving on the airdromes of French Syria and warring Iraq, and stern orders went out to R. A. F. and navy planes to smash the Luftwaffe invaders on the landing fields of both these countries.

(Neutral sources in Vichy reported the British already had attacked one Syrian airdrome, but neither the British nor the French confirmed the report.)

Informed sources at this headquarters of the British Near East command said most of the German craft were bombers, that no troop-carrying planes had yet been sighted, but that fighters were transporting technicians, propagandists and other Nazi specialists to the Middle Eastern scenes of war or near-war.

Four large German planes—the first to pass through Syria—were escorted by French fighters said a Reuters British news agency, dispatch quoting A. F. I., the independent French news agency.

These landed on Syrian bases three days ago and were followed by 16 other planes in the next two days, the agency said. The planes were believed to have taken German military experts and technicians to Bagdad, capital of Iraq.

Italian and German staff officers, including two generals, were reported to have reached Bagdad, and a high Nazi personage was believed to have established himself

France Warned Not to Let Nazis Into West Africa; Dakar Involved

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, in a lightning diplomatic stroke, last night rebuked the government of unoccupied France for lending itself to a "voluntary alliance" with Germany and in the same moment ordered the Coast Guard to seize all French ships in United States harbors, including the palatial liner Normandie.

The President took action less than six hours after Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, Chief of State, had forecast closer French-German "collaboration" in a radio speech.

He warned flatly that delivery of the Coast of French West Africa to the Nazis would be a "menace" to the peace and safety of the Western Hemisphere.

While rebuking Petain, he at the same time appealed to the French people to cling to the principles of liberty and freedom. The statement was broadcast by short wave to the French nation.

The President's action demonstrated again the degree of collaboration being followed by the United States and Britain in their policies toward France. Both countries heretofore have insisted that any help given France should be bound with safeguards that it could not benefit Germany.

Reverses Attitude

The President's sudden move was held to warn of a complete reversal of this country's attitude toward France, which hitherto has been based on cooperation in the light of the French armistice agreement with Germany.

Coast Guard headquarters announced last night that armed guards had been placed aboard 14 French ships.

The President said in a formal statement that "it is inconceivable" that the French people will willingly accept any agreement which would in reality turn France into an ally of the Nazis.

The people of the United States can scarcely believe, said the Chief Executive, that France would enter an alliance which would put at Germany's disposal all of France and its empire, including the strategic coast of French West Africa.

Mr. Roosevelt's brief statement did not mention specifically Dakar, French possession on the "bulge" of Africa close to South America, but it was plain that he was aroused lest that vital base fall into Nazi hands.

The President's statement:

"The policy of this Government in its relations with the French Republic has been based upon the terms of the armistice between Germany and France and upon recognition of certain clear limitations imposed upon the French government by this armistice. Furthermore, we have had assurances given by the head of the French state on behalf of his government that it did not intend to agree to any collaboration with Germany which went beyond the requirements of that armistice agreement. This was the least that could be expected of a France which demanded respect for its integrity.

"The people of France, who cherish still the ideals of liberty and free institutions and guard that love of these priceless possessions in their minds and hearts can be counted on to hold out for these principles until the moment comes for their reestablishment. It is inconceivable they will willingly accept any agreement for so-called 'collaboration' which will in reality imply their alliance with a military power whose central and fundamental policy calls for the utter destruction of liberty, freedom and popular institutions everywhere.

"The people of the United States can hardly believe that the present government of France could be brought to lend itself to a plan of voluntary alliance implied or otherwise which would apparently deliver up France and its colonial empire, including French African colonies and their Atlantic coasts with the menace which that involves to the peace and safety of the Western Hemisphere."

Envoy Stands by Petain

French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye quickly came to the defense of Petain after seeing President Roosevelt's statement. He authorized the following comment:

"The French people, in their suffering and distress, have found a great leader behind whom they are standing united despite any attempt at dissidence manifested abroad.

"The people of France are wholly confident of the wisdom and high patriotism of Marshal Petain.

"The Ambassador of France to the United States has the honor to proclaim again his absolute devotion to the marshal."

The comment was made public through Charles Brousse, embassy press representative.

Sees Welles, Hull

The President acted after a long conference with Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles. They were summoned to the White House shortly after Petain had finished addressing the French nation.

Mr. Roosevelt's action apparently was based on information that Germany and France have just concluded or are about to conclude an agreement for "collaboration" going far beyond the terms of the armistice.

Further steps in the reversal of America's attitude toward France were expected to follow shortly.

The Treasury announced that Coast Guardsmen had boarded the French vessels even before President Roosevelt made public his statement.

The action was taken, presumably, to forestall sabotage such as occurred aboard the German and Italian ships seized late in March.

Dozen Under Guard

Coast Guard headquarters said more than a dozen ships had been placed under guard. The exact number was not known immediately, but all French ships in American harbors were boarded.

Ten of the vessels boarded and the ports where they were berthed, their tonnage and their home ports as listed by Lloyds were:

New York—The Normandie, 83,423 tons, Havre; Ile de Noirmoutier, 5,703 tons, and Mont Everest, 5,120 tons, Marseille; Fort Royal, 3,485 tons, Havre.

New Orleans—Angouleme (not listed); Michigan, 6,419 tons, Havre; Touraine, 6,589 tons, Havre.

San Pedro, Calif.—Vannes (not listed); Wisconsin, 8,062 tons, Havre.

San Francisco — Alencon (not listed).

Later the Ile de Quesant, which docked late in the day at New York, was boarded as were two small inter-island traders, the Fame and Bernadett, at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

The French vessels had been immobilized in U. S. harbors since the fall of France.

The luxury liner Normandie valued at $80,000,000 has been under the surveillance of New York police for many months.

Prior to last night's sudden action, the United States had been trying to win the confidence and cooperation of the French government.

French Ambassador Henri-Haye had succeeded in procuring an American gift of two shiploads of flour, embarked for France some weeks ago.

Conditions for the $1,000,000 gift were that none of the food should reach Germany or the German-controlled portion of France, either directly or indirectly by barter deals.

It was also reported at the time that the United States attached other conditions to the gift: that France should not collaborate with Germany further than was provided for in the armistice; that the French fleet should be transferred to North African posts; that filtration of Germans into French North Africa should be stopped.

Henri-Haye visited the State Department recently and said afterward that he had obtained Secretary Hull's agreement to a regular plan for sending two shiploads of food to France each month, but Hull told reporters later that any agreement depended on several conditions.

Early this week Vice Premier Admiral Francois Darlan conferred with Chancellor Hitler. The conference was closely watched by the State Department for what bearing it would have on France's course.

Admiral William D. Leahy, U. S. Ambassador to Vichy, attempted to obtain information on what had transpired between Hitler and Darlan. But he found that Petain had left Vichy and officials drew the conclusion that the aged marshal had left the French capital in order to avoid Leahy.

Normandie, France's Greatest Ship, Among Ones Boarded

SEIZED BY U. S.—The French Liner Normandie

New York, April 15 (AP).—The French liner Normandie, boarded tonight by Coast Guardsmen, has been tied up at a Hudson River pier since August 28, 1939. For several weeks after the outbreak of the war she was kept in first-rate running order, prepared to leave within 48 hours, but the opportunity never came for her to sail.

Ghostlike in appearance now, she has had only a skeleton crew aboard for many months.

The ship is outranged in tonnage only by the British liner Queen Elizabeth, which is listed at 85,000 tons.

The Normandie is a veritable steel and glass-encased floating city, of 83,423 gross tons. Her length, 1,029 feet, if upended, would bring her only 17 feet short of the top of the 77-story Chrysler Building. Two Washington Monuments, one atop the other, would be only 82 feet longer than the ship.

The ship can carry 2,170 passengers and normally is staffed by a crew of 1,300.

Her four propellers, each weighing 23 tons, are driven by engines producing 160,000 horsepower maximum. Her anchors weigh 17 tons each.

Her equipment includes more than 1,000 telephones, cabins with private terraces, a formal garden, a theater and a night club.

In March,, 1937, the liner recaptured the record for the fastest eastward Atlantic crossing from the British liner Queen Mary, 81,235 tons. The record speed was a 30.99-knot average for the crossing from Ambrose Light to Bishop's Rock. The elapsed time was 4 days, 6 minutes, 23 seconds for the 2,967 miles. Later the Queen Mary set new speed records for both eastbound and west-bound crossings.

It frequently has been reported that the Normandie was built with provisions for transforming her into an airplane carrier. The ship carried two giant elevators fore and aft. However, French Line officials have denied this.

Senate Passes Bill to Seize Foreign Ships

Progressive.

The Vandenberg-Clark amendment, which mustered more strength than any proposal advanced during the present session by Senate opponents of Administration foreign policy, was supported by 22 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 15 Democrats, including Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Commerce Committee and floor manager for the shipping bill.

Opposing the amendment were 39 Democrats, 3 Republicans and 1 Independent.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, head of the Foreign Relations Committee, conceded that the transfer of vessels of one belligerent to another belligerent by a neutral would be "an extraordinary act" and said he hoped all the foreign ships to be taken over under the legislation would be used in the Western Hemisphere.

He appealed for defeat of the Vandenberg-Clark amendment, however, on grounds that the United States was confronted with dangers "in some respects equivalent to a state of belligerency" and that no distinction between the possible uses of the Axis and neutral ships should be written into the law.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, contended that the amendment would eliminate "an entirely gratuitous provocation to war" without weakening the bill.

Transfer of Axis ships to Britain would be another instance of the United States "behaving like the boy who puts a chip on his shoulder," Clark said.

The most important of the Senate amendments to the shipping bill, none of which is expected to meet opposition in the House, would forbid acquisition, except by purchase, of ships belonging to foreign governments. (All 84 foreign ships immediately affected by the bill are privately owned.)

The House Rules Committee yesterday cleared the way for early action on a bill to authorize the Maritime Commission to speed movement of defense materials through a system of priorities in the use of port facilities.

Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, said he expected the bill to receive approval Tuesday, pointing out that it was reported unanimously by his committee and is "much milder" than similar legislation of the World War period.

Serum Sent to Brazil

MERCY FLIGHT TO RIO—An Army bomber taking off from Bolling Field yesterday carried $5,000 worth of serum, sent by the American Red Cross to flood-stricken areas of Brazil. Threat of an epidemic around Port Alegre, where the rising Guniba River has forced 50,000 persons from their homes, prompted Jefferson Caffery, United States Ambassador at Rio de Janeiro to wire for the serum. In the shipment was typhoid antitoxin for 3,250; antidysentery toxin for 350, and the necessary instruments for administering the doses. Maj. R. E. Koon, command pilot of the 22-ton B-17 bomber, is shown taking the last package of antitoxins from Mrs. Robert E. Hoyt, Red Cross Motor Corps volunteer

Radio, Cable Censorship Urged

By the Associated Press

New York, May 15.—George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information in the World War, today advocated censorship of cables and radio without restriction upon the press, in an article in Collier's.

He said such a censorship "will not touch opinion in any degree but . . . will prevent communication between potential enemies and their undercover agents in the United States."

With the adoption of his proposal, Creel said, "there will be no impairment of people's confidence in the news."

Referring to his World War experience and present censorship methods, Creel said "that was the result of the 'voluntary censorship' that hurt us most, just as it will work irreparable harm today if the foolish plan is not discontinued. When the public knew that something was being kept from them, the conviction grew that a great deal was being hidden, and this feeling lent itself to the manufacture and spread of every variety of wild and disintegrating rumor."

Creel said in the World War "virtually everything we asked the press not to print was seen or known by thousands, making secrecy a joke. As the present 'voluntary censorship' is a carbon copy of the old, the joke may be expected to persist."

He said the prohibitions in news reporting asked by Secretary of Navy Knox "are virtually the same prohibitions that we laid down in 1917 and every whit as unnecessary.

"The arrival and departure of ships and planes are about as secret as the trips of a sightseeing bus. Until war comes to these shores, or expeditionary forces are sent abroad, the movement of troops possess little significance, for the location of training camps is a matter of common knowledge.

"This holds good for new ships, new planes and Navy construction projects ashore, for shipyards and aviation factories are not of a size to be hidden, nor of a nature to be located in some remote mountain fastness. In addition to thousands of workmen, other thousands see these yards and factroies every day and have a fairly good idea of what is going on in them."

Mellett Soothes Fears

Columbia, Mo., May 15 (AP).—Lowell Mellett, director of the office of Government reports, says the American press need have little fear of censorship in the event the United States goes to war.

"I am quite positive there will be no censorship," he told a questioner during a panel discussion at the University of Missouri's thirty-second annual journalism dinner last night.

Army and Navy Are Ready to Take Martinique if Ordered

such assurances by what France does with Syria, Tunisia and French Africa in her "collaboration" with Germany.

Army and the Navy some time ago erfected lans for an invasion of Martinique—lans which it was hoed would never have to be translated into action. Not to have made such plans with respect to Martinique, and the neighboring French island of Guadaloupe, would have subjected the Nation's strategists to a charge of negligence if the French tricolor ever became an unfriendly flag.

An American expeditionary force against Martinique and Guadaloupe probably would leave from Puerto Rico, the Gibraltar of the Caribbean.

Would the French forces at Martinique resist the armed might of the United States?

The indications are that, unless given orders to the contrary by Vichy, they would fight.

This reporter interviewed Admiral Georges Robert, high commissioner of the French Antilles colonies, last October. The interview took place at his headquarters, a villa on the outskirts of Fort-de-France, capital of Martinique.

Two Warships There

On the way there, I had motored over a mountain road that looked down over Fort-de-France's superb harbor. There, a tricolor flying from their jackstaffs, were two of France's warships—the squat aircraft carrier, Bearn, and the sleek light cruiser, Emile Bertin.

The Bearn was half way across the Atlantic, with a cargo of 90 American warplanes, when she got orders to turn about and head for Martinique. This was in June, as France was going down.

The cruiser Bertin, a veteran of the naval warfare off Norway and said to be one of the fastest men-o'-war in he world, dashed across the Atlantic at about the same time, but with a much more interesting cargo.

The Bertin brought over a huge cargo of gold, sent thither by the French government to keep it out of the hands of the Nazis. The value of this treasure was the subject of much speculation. A conservativ eguess, I was told, would be $250,000,000. The gold—in both bullion and coins—was in old Fort Desaix, closely guarded by French regulars.

Bitter Against British

The bearded Admiral Robert, like other French naval officers in Martinique, was exxtremely bitter against the British. Still fresh in his mind was the British attack on the French fleet at Oran, and the more recent British bombardment of Dakar. He also was vexed because, he said, the British were stopping French mail at Bermuda.

Toward the United States, Admiral Robert expressed the most cordial sentiments. He said the aircraft carrier Bearn and the cruiser Bertin were there for the sole purpose of protecting a French colony. And the same, he said, went for the cruiser Jeanne d'Arc at Guadeloupe.

Had the armistice with Germany come later, he said, the warships would not be there, whereas if it had come earlier, four French submarines would be there. He said these had left Fort-de-France just two weeks before the armistice.

Admiral Robert, in discussing the much talked about American-made warplanes lying at Martinique, said he had ordered these unloaded from the Bearn. He pointed out that Martinique had no airfield and was planning none. In this connection, he assigned a French captain to show me the planes, and for the first time gave permission to have them photographed .

The planes, mostly fighters and dive bombers, were on a slope overlooking a lagoon about 2 miles outside of Fort de France. Some were erstwhile United States Army and Navy planes, which had been hurriedly turned into the factories and then sold to Belgium and France. Others were new Curtiss fighters.

The slope on which the planes were lined up, slowly deteriorating in the salt air of the Caribbean, was certainly not a flying field. A good pilot might be able to take off from it, but it would be a hazardous undertaking.

Intend to Stay French

Admiral Robert, talking through an interpreter, Capt. Du Massy, said:

"We are here true Frenchmen. Our sole desire is to create no trouble in this hemisphere."

Somewhat more grimly, then he said:

"Martinique is 100 per cent French. It intends to stay French."

Martinique has a population of something like 250,000, less than 3,000 of whom are white.

I was told by Fort-de-France businessmen and others that, if a referendum were taken, better than 75 per cent of the islanders would vote to exchange the beloved French tricolor for the American Stars and Stripes. The islanders, I was told, were devoted to the France that was, and would always want to retain the French language, culture and manners. But at the same time, they looked to the United States for protection against the Nazis who had overwhelmed the mother country and also for economic salvation.

However, the men who rule Martinique—Admiral Robert and his colleagues—take their orders not from the islanders, but from Vichy.

Roosevelt Well; Fetes Argentine

President Roosevelt was described as in excellent physical condition yesterday and for the first time since he became ill from an upset stomach more than a week ago, a social engagement was on his schedule—a luncheon for the Argentine foreign minister.

Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, the minister, and Secretary Hull had an appointment with the Chief Executive in his study preceding the luncheon.

Funds Voted To Guard U. S. Historic Relics

The Library of Congress will have completed by June 1 preparations to safeguard the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, George Washington's papers and other irreplacable documents, against the eventuality of war, it was learned yesterday.

At the same time the House approved expenditure of $30,000 for the purchase of packing cases in which the most valuable portions of the Library's collections may be removed from the Capital "in event of an enemy attack on this country."

For many weeks, the Library staff has been selecting, marking and listing material to be safeguarded in an emergency. For the priceless museum pieces of American history, the task already has been completed, Archibald MacLeish, the librarian, said yesterday.

Items not in the "absolutely unique" class of museum pieces, but still irreplaceable and having exceptional value, will be ready to be moved—when necessary—by June 1, MacLeish said.

The Declaration of Independence and other priceles items would be given maximum protection, MacLeish said, presumably by secret storage in some place where they could not be damaged.

In discussing plans with members of the Appropriations Subcommittee, MacLeish disclosed that storage space for rare, but slightly less valuable, materials has been found to be available in small town postoffices in Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

During debate on the legislative appropriation bill, approved with a total library budget of $3,825,927, Representative Emmet O'Neal (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the committee, praised MacLeish for "doing a wonderful job."

Appropriations approved for the library were $170,830 above its 1941 budget. Funds were provided for addition of 34 to the library staff and the general collection fund was increased by $130,000.

The additional money will permit, among other purchases, acquisition of a $50,000 collection of original papers of Abraham Lincoln put together by Herndon, his law partner. The collection was described by the committee as "constituting an important accretion to the Presidential papers in the library."

Treasury to Offer New Tax Program

perhaps doubling the revenue to be derived from that source.

2. Less severe taxes on lower income groups than the Treasury first proposed.

3. Abandonment of several of the proposed excise taxes, including possibly those on tobacco which have drawn violent opposition from the industry.

4. Higher rates on automobiles, perhaps 20 per cent, as suggested by Leon Henderson, administrator of prices and civilian supply.

5. Heavier levies on gifts and estates.

As criticism of the Morgenthau dinner party rose from Republican ranks, Doughton denied that taxes had been discussed, saying it was a "social function."

Morgenthau told his press conference, however, that taxes and economy were discussed and mentioned that Budget Director Harold Smith was present.

Another flurry of economy sentiment appeared in the House. Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, urged that $1,000,000,000 be sliced from budgeted relief and Civilian Conservation Corps expenditures during the coming fiscal year.

Asked for his suggestions for economy, Morgenthau, who recently told the Ways and Means Committee that $1,000,000,000 in savings could be effected in Government expenditures next year talked about roses in his garden but refused to be drawn into a discussion of economy.

Morgenthau revealed he planned to refund a $834,452,000 issue of 3¼ per cent Treasury bonds maturing in August and at least $500,000,000 in additional securities might be sold to raise "new money" to help finance current deficits.

The financing, which has not been definitely decided upon, would be the first since the Treasury began on May 1 to sell Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps.

The Treasury Secretary reported that the receipts for the first two weeks of this campaign have totaled $216,845,000, most of it from sale of the bonds.

Gibraltar Beasts, Except Monkeys, Put to Death

La Linea, Spain, May 15 (U.P.)—British military authorities today ordered the execution of every animal at Gibraltar, except the fortress' famous monkeys, explaining that the measure was an exigency of war.

Why the monkeys were saved was not explained. But old-timers recalled a legend that the British would lose Gibraltar when the last Simian occupant had disappeared from the "The Rock."

The blanket order, reaching down to the last cat, affected about 200 cows, more than 1,000 goats, and some sheep.

10 Motor Boat Owners Start Harbor Patrols

The Coast Guard disclosed yesterday that the first units of a fleet of militarized pleasure boats manned by their sportsman owners had begun patrolling major harbors against sabotage and performing other maritime duties.

More than ten motor boats, with their owners, have been enrolled in the newly authorized Coast Guard Reserve and called into active service, it was said. They are operating in Norfolk, New Orleans and San Francisco harbors.

The new service will help relieve the load on the Coast Guard resulting from the great enlargement of its duties under the emergency and transfer of sea-going units to the Navy.

French Jews Await New 'Alien' Laws

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, May 15.—Further measures relative to the status of Jews in France are expected in the near future.

It is understood that the new measures are intended to complete the law of October 3, which excluded Jews from high governmental posts, including the armed forces, as well as from journalism and the cinema.

It is declared in authorized circles that the intention now is to complete, enlarge and codify all the steps already taken regarding Jews, not because of ideological or religious considerations but because of the "necessities of national protection." Present indications are that the majority of Jews in France will be subjected to the laws regulating the presence of aliens on national soil.

A number of exemptions are likely to be included in the new law in favor of Jews who fought for France in the last two wars, those converted to a Christian faith before June 25, 1940, and those who have rendered signal service to the country or whose forebears have long lived here.

It may be recalled that at present the treatment of Jews differs in the occupied and unoccupied zones. In the latter the German authority has issued ordinances on the lines of the Nuremberg "Ghetto" laws. The latest of these comes into application on May 20; in brief, it excludes Jews from all commercial activities without compensation.

Reports from Paris tell of the rounding up there of 5,000 Jews between 18 and 40, mostly from central and southeastern Europe.

Auxiliary Police Plan to Be Studied Today

Plans for the immediate organization of an auxiliary civilian police force of 1,600 men and women for added protection of the city in case of an emergency will be considered today by the Commissioners and District Defense Council.

Recommendations for the civilian police unit were included in a report to the Commissioners by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent and chairman of a special subcommittee on police protection under the Defense Council.

Brown also urged the appointment of 282 additional privates to his department as a further means of bolstering the local law enforcement program. He estimated cost of the extra personnel at about $650,000.

Under proposals of Brown's committee, the auxiliary force would be selected to begin training at once. Members would be paid on an hourly basis comparable to salaries of Class 1 police privates, which range from $1,900 to $2,400 a year.

At least 100 members of the civilian force, the report suggested, should be women. They would be placed under command of Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau.

Of the men, 100 would come under the United States Park Police and the remainder would be distributed to the various precincts and divisions of the Metropolitan Police Department.

The report urged that selection of members of the civilian force as far as men are concerned be made from age groups beyond Selective Service limits. All members should be of "unquestionable character," the report added.

Training of the special force would be undertaken by the Metropolitan Police Department and its personnel would be provided with uniforms "sufficiently different to be distinguished from regular policemen."

An addition of 25 men to the park police force also was recommended and Brown urged that patrol cars of both departments be equipped with two-way radio sets.

Besides Brown, the report was signed by Capt. Henry Helms, of the park police; Culver B. Chamberlain, Dr. E. F. Harris, Odell Smith, Haywood Saunders and O. W. Hollingsworth.

The Commissioners said they planned to study the report with a view to launching an adequate protection program as soon as possible.

OPM 'Leans Too Heavily' On Aluminum Co., Meade Says

Copyright by New York Times

Charges that the Office of Production Management "leaned too heavily" on the Alumnium Company of America in its effort to get desperately needed increased supplies of this strategic defense metal were made at yesterday's hearing of the Senate committee investigating the defense effort.

The charge was made by Senator James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York after Grenville Holden, OPM consultant on light metals, admitted that his agency consistently gave preference to the outlet which at the present is the sole American source of supply, and after Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, testified that A. L. C. O. A. in 1942 can produce only about half of the supplies estimated to be needed for direct military purposes.

Holden told the committee that the OPM declined in April to consider the offer of a Detroit aluminum fabricator, the Bohn Aluminum Co., to operate a Government-financed production plant, although admitting that defense officials knew in January that "there was not enough aluminum," and had decided only in the last few days to consider the Detroit firm's proposal.

Olds asserted that A.L.C.O.A. has several times refused to expand its potential capacity by the construction of new hydro-power projects to supply the large quantities of cheap electricity required for aluminum production. He said this attitude "seems to us to fit in with the company's policy to restrict production to maintain monopoly."

Holden, a young economist from Harvard University who admitted he had no special knowledge of aluminum production, forcefully defended his preference for A. L. C. O. A. as a supplier of the defense metal on the ground that no one else ever produced it in this country and that other potential producers might not be able to deliver.

He was "not interested," he added, in response to Senator Mead, in whether this policy would result in making A. L. C. O. A. "a bigger monopoly than ever" when the war ended, but rather in getting supplies of the metal. He agreed that his chief sources of information on the problem had been A. L. C. O. A. representatives, defending this on the ground these were the only persons in the country who had experience in aluminum production.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved legislation designed to cut off exports of national defense materials or military supplies to the Axis nations from the Philippine Islands.

Members of the Senate Military Committee said that the measure would prevent exports of vital defense materials to Japan, Russia and other nations.

Similar legislation is pending in the House.

Hess Meant to Bring Peace Between 2 'Germanic Nations'

By Wallace Carroll

Copyright by United Press

London, May 15.—This is the true story—or as much of it as can be told now—of the reasons behind Rudolf Hess' flight.

Hess, it is possible to conclude, still is fanatically loyal to Adolf Hitler and there is not the slightest evidence that he has given or is prepared to give vital information to the British dealing with Germany's war secrets.

Hess undertook his bizarre venture because he believed, or pretended to believe, that if he could talk personally to "a few men of goodwill" in England he could end the war.

He was convinced that Adolf Hitler's Germany was invincible and he professed to believe that Prime Minister Churchill and a small "gang" around him were the only people in Britain who wanted to prolong the war.

Letters Tell Story

These assertions came in a series of letters to the Duke of Hamilton, premier earl of Scotland, on whose estate near Glasgow Hess landed by parachute from a German Messerschmitt warplane last Saturday night.

The story compares in many points with what already has been said by informed sources both in London and Berlin and, although it may be lacking in certain details, it is a true picture and definitely not guesswork.

It begins several months ago when Hess first sent a letter to the Duke of Hamilton whom he had met at the Berlin Olympic games in 1936 and with whom he formed a friendship inspired largely by their common interests in sports.

Hess came to Britain convinced, or pretending to be convinced, that if the war continued Britain would be annihilated.

Sought to Oust Churchill

Therefore he hoped, or pretended to hope, that if he could establish contact with a few "men of goodwill" whom he already knew, it would be possible to overcome the influence of Churchill and the men the Nazis call Britain's chief warmongers.

Then, Hess felt, it would be possible to establish peace "between the two great Germanic nations."

Either Hess sincerely held these beliefs, as indicated in his messages to the Duke of Hamilton, and came to Britain as a self-appointed apostle of peace, or he merely pretended to hold those beliefs.

If the latter is true and he came here as a Nazi agent it was one of the most subtle plots ever conceived in Hitler's brain.

There has not been the slightest evidence disclosed thus far, it may be stated, by either the British or the Germans, to support the theory that Hess fled to Britain as result of a split in the high Nazi ranks.

Nor is there any evidence that he is a traitor, prepared to give vital information to the enemy, although this theory naturally is the one which would be the most popular in Britain.

Therefore, the big question is whether Hess is what he claims to be—an apostle of peace—or whether he is the instrument of a Hitler plot.

The object of any such Hitler plot supposedly would be to start a peace movement in Britain by appealing to prominent Britons who before the war were friendly to Germany.

Hitler Sent Hess Over, Bevin Says

not a single line of consequential speech by the dour Nazi has been authorized by the Government. There have been monosyllabic pleasantries by Hess with his carefully chosen attendants, but no vital hint as to what he has tod foreign office representatives, the Duke of Hamilton, or intelligence officers.

Bevin sought to strike down as a blind, a deception, a "stunt," Berlin's insistence that Hess was a foolish, deluded self-appointed messianic missionary.

"We agree with the German propagandists," said the minister in a speech before the Holborn Chamber of Commerce, "that Hess wants peace for the German people. We agree that he possesses secret information.

"But is it not possible that his 'secret information' is about such matters as (German) Balkan casualties, the State of Kiel and Hamburg (Nazi naval bases long and heavily bombed)?"

In a sharp attack that was not the first demand, oblique or open, that Hess be regarded as 100 per cent villian and no scrap of hero. Bevin denounced the Nazi as "No man I would ever negotiate with."

"For a good many years," the minister went on, "I have had to deal with these totalitarian gentlemen and Communists and I have seen this kind of stunt over and over again. I am not going to be deceived by any of them.

"You can understand my feeling about Hess when I tell you he was the man who collected every index card of every trade union leader in Germany and (of) the Social Democrats and when the time came they were either sent to concentration camps or murdered."

Discussing the German contention that Hess was "off his head," Bevin remarked sardonically:

"If every German were certified mad who wanted peace you would easily put the sane into the madhouses without overcrowding."

He made it plain that the speech was only an expression of personal opinion.

Prime Minister Churchill postponed—until such time as it may be in "the public interest"—a statement on the affair before Parliament.

Incredible, Says Churchill

To the House, Churchill explained the 48-hour delay in announcing Hess' arrival in Britain by saying that his identity had to be established beyond question and pointing out that it was, after all, a rather incredible business.

Asked by a Scottish member whether German intelligence had been trying to create the impression that Scotland—where Hess landed—was "ready to make a separate peace with Germany," the prime minister retorted:

"Whatever delusions may exist, that is not among them."

There was some indication of a divergence of opinion as to how Hess should be treated. A hint of this was dropped by Herbert Morrison, the minister of home security, who said at a luncheon:

"There is a bit of demarcation dispute going on as to whose prisoner he is. I have ambitions myself but other people have too, and I cannot do better than say he will be well looked after."

Hess, guarded as rigidly as any ancient traitor ever housed in the Tower of London, is said to be getting his choice of good foods and a daily diet of "thriller" novels and magazines carrying fictional fantasies paled by his own untold story.

A report from the hospital said X-rays were taken to relieve him of his anxiety that he was suffering a digestive ailment.

The British radio, pursuing its policy of harassing the Germans to the limit, broadcast a transcription of Adolf Hitler's own voice—the speech made on September 1, 1939, by the Fueher in designating Hess as his political heir but once removed and bespeaking for him the full "loyalty, fidelity and duty" of the German people.

Norwegian circles here declared that even in occupied Norway Hess' flight, and the consequent reports of dissension in high Nazi circles, had caused a sensation.

At the same time they asserted that a long-standing quarrel between the Nazi politicians and Nazi military leadership in Norway had now reached such a point as to suggest the eventful liberation of that country.

Old Monarchy Is Revived For Croatia

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 15.—Restoration of a monarchy in Croatia was officially announced tonight.

A communique said:

"Yesterday, May 14, at 6 p. m. in Zagreb there was proclaimed the restoration of the Crown of Zvonimir, which rested on the heads of Croat kings and which now returns to represent the sovereignty of the independent Sate of Croatia."

Diplomatic circles yesterday heard that Croatia, formerly part of Yugoslavia, would become a kingdom under the reign of a prince of the House of Savoy, Italy's ruling family.

Among those mentioned were the Duke of Spoleto, the Duke of Aosta, Viceroy of Ethiopia, or even King Vittorio Emanuele himself.

Reports from Budapest said Vittorio Emanuele would refuse the crown and designate the Duke of Spoleto to accept it.

Ante Pavelic, who is a chief figure in the present Croatian rule, owes Italy a debt of gratitude for having sheltered him during the years he was a fugitive from France and Yugoslavia on accusation of complicity in assassinating Yugoslavia's King Alexander in Marseille.

Premier Mussolini's paper, Il Popolo d'Italia, said yesterday that restoration of Croatian independence had revived the "legendary tradition of the Crown of Zvonimir."

This crown was placed on the head of Tomislav on the field at Duvno in 925 A.D., after he had been elected Crotia's first king.

Japan Claims Trap Of 20,000 Chinese

Hongkong, May 15.—The Japanese claim that their offensive in the Chinese Province of Kwangtung, hitherto highly successful, has resulted in 20,000 Chinese troops being virtually trapped in the Waichow sector, who are being forced to surrender hundreds at a time.

The Japanese are reported to have seized a large quantity of goods, including tungsten, destined for export to America.

Plane Catches Marine Falling From Another

By the United Press

San Diego, Calif., May 15.—Walter Osipoff, marine parachutist, dangled upside down from a transport plane for 20 minutes today, his parachute shrouds tangled in the tail assembly, until fellow marines cut him loose so that he dropped into the cockpit of a little Navy scout plane flying below the big transport.

Osipoff was one of ten marines scheduled to bail out in a mass practice maneuver. Just before his turn came the crew tossed out cargo parachutes carrying guns and other supplies. One of these 'chutes caught Osipoff and swept him through the door.

As he fell an automatic device opened his parachute but the shrouds caught on a static line cable beneath the fuselage.

The transport pilot gained altitude and headed over the bay, on the edge of which crowds in downtown San Diego watched the difficult rescue.

Navy officials ordered an open scout plane to the rescue. In it were Lieut. W. W. Lowrey, 34, of Dallas, Tex., a test pilot, and J. R. McCants, 41, of Jordan, Mont., an aviation chief machinist's mate.

They approached the transport from beneath and tried to remain in level flight 20 feet below the big ship. Once, however, they came so close that the Navy plane's propeller chipped a piece out of the transport.

Men of the Parachute Corps carry a second parachute for emergency use if the first fails to open. Osipoff could not open the second parachute, however, because he was hanging dead down with his knees and the lower part of his body tangled in the shrouds of the first parachute, Lieut. Lowry said.

In any event, Osipoff was unconscious, it developed later, and, if he had dropped past the scout plane, he might not have recovered his senses in time to pull the second rip cord.

At long last, when the two planes were in position and flying smoothly, marines on the transport cut the shrouds. Osipoff's body dropped. McCants, in the observer's seat of the second plane, caught Osipoff neatly and eased him into the cockpit. Osipoff was still unconscious when they landed, but recovered at the Navy Base Hospital, where physicians said he was in good condition.

British Move To Crush Nazi Force in Syria

at Beirut, in the French mandate.

Already the R. A. F. was announcing that planes of the fleet air arm had entered the Iraq conflict and, in cooperation with regular R. A. F. squadrons, was reducing to ashes the remaining barracks, gasoline stores, munitions plants and other military objectives.

But a conflict far wider was implied in the day's official statements from London and Cairo regarding the arrival of Nazi planes and the British counteraction.

These statements gave substance to fears long expressed by the British that Adolf Hitler is using the mandated territory of the Vichy French government to gain a military grip on the oil fields of Iraq while helping the Iraqis in their war with Britain, and to obtain a springboard for a south and west onslaught on the Suez Canal.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons in London today:

"Detailed information at the disposal of His Majesty's government shows that French authorities in Syria are allowing German aircraft to use Syrian airdromes as staging posts for flights to Iraq.

"His Majesty's government have in consequence, given full authority for action against these German aircraft on Syrian airdromes.

Eden hinted the British now regard the French mandate over Syria as nonexistent, especially since France has quit the League of Nations.

He declared:

"The French government cannot escape responsibility for this situation. Their action under German orders in permitting these flights is a clear breach of the armistice terms and is inconsistent with the undertakings given by the French government."

The Syrian angle focused fresh attention on the neighboring British mandates of Palestine and Trans-Jordan, and it was acknowledged that some British women and children there may have been advised to leave. Reports of a general withdrawal were, however, denied.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, former commander of the army of the Nile, now has been made general officer commanding the British forces in Palestine and Trans-Jordan following Axis capture some weeks ago of the former G. O. C. M., Maj. Gen. Philip Neame, in Africa.

An Iraq communique, relayed through Vichy, accused the British of bombing two Iraq ambulances, said bombs had been dropped on Bagdad without damages or casualties, and reported patrol contacts with the British in the desert.

Surrender Demanded

New York, May 15 (AP).—Gen. Georges Catroux, leader of the Free French forces in the Middle East, has demanded the surrender of French authorities in Syria, the British radio declared tonight in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

The British radio, quoting advices just received from Cairo, Egypt, said Gen. Catroux had sent an emissary to the French authorities in Syria with his demand.

ernment suddenly clamped a severe censorship on all dispatches sent abroad dealing with the French-German negotiations.

American correspondents were told that henceforth all their dispatches will be censored "to circumvent publication of false or tendentious reports of a nature which might harm the (French and German) negotiations."

Petain said in his radio speech that he had approved the principle of Darlan's meeting with Hitler, meaning that he had reaffirmed his pledge of collaboration given to Hitler at Montoire last year.

"It is no longer a question today for public opinion, often anxious because it is badly informed, to weigh our chances, measure our risks and judge our gestures," Petain said.

"It is a question of you Frenchmen following me without question on the roads of honor and national interest.

"All I Have to Tell

"If, with rigid public discipline, we are able successfully to conclude these negotiations, France can overcome defeat and conserve her rank as a European and colonial power in the world.

"That, dear friends, is all I have to tell you today."

Berlin Optimistic

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—The Wilhelmstrasse exhibited optimism today over German-French relations as the German press took the view that the Vichy cabinet had dealt a blow to United States intervention.

Authorized sources suggested that it has been made clear to American Ambassador Leahy that France does not wish to be a colony of another continent and that neither Europe nor America has the right to impose on the other.

German Ration Of Meat Cut By One-Fifth

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—A 20 per cent reduction in Germany's weekly meat ration effective June 2 was announced today by the food distribution bureau.

Under the new decree, the normal ration will be cut from 500 grams (one pound) a person to 400 grams weekly. Workers, whose rations will be correspondingly reduced, will be allowed 800 to 1,000 grams a week according to their type of labor.

A spokesman said the new quotas would continue through the summer "because Germans eat less meat in summer and besides they have more vegetables."

Butter rations, the spokesman said, will be increased but allotments of other fats will be cut so that the fat allowance on the whole will remain unchanged.

R. A. F. Dive Bombers Attack 2 Convoys, Sink 4 Nazi Ships

By International News Service

London, May 15.—Destruction of at least four German supply ships off the Dutch coast in audacious Royal Air Force daylight attacks was claimed in London tonight.

Three of the Nazi vessels—displacing 5,000, 4,000 and 2,000 tons—were set afire this afternoon, the air ministry said, under a dive-bombing assault by an R. A. F. squadron on a German convoy in the North Sea near the Dutch Frisian Islands.

A lone British coastal command bomber yesterday struck a German supply vessel with an aerial torpedo, during an attack on a Nazi convoy.

The three ships hit this afternoon were declared to have been "left burning" after which German fighting planes attacked the R. A. F. bombers provoking a battle in which each side lost one machine.

Simultaneously, R. A. F. fighter squadrons during the day engaged in offensive sweeps against several Luftwaffe bases in northern France. Numerous parked German planes were machine-gunned from low altitudes and one R. A. F. fighter failed to return.

Two German planes were shot down over Britain during the day in a series of duels precipitated by Nazi thrusts at several British coastal areas where some bombs were dropped.

Describing the Nazi daylight attacks as "slight," the air and home security ministries announced that little damage and no casualties had resulted.

Destruction of one Luftwaffe bomber over England's south coast Wednesday night was confirmed officially.

London, May 15 (AP).—The bright flashes of German antiaircraft guns firing from bases near Calais were seen across the Straits of Dover tonight shortly after R. A. F. planes headed eastward from England.

Greek King Gets A Hope Deferred From Roosevelt

Canea, Crete, May 15 (AP).—Capt. James Roosevelt, received by King George II of Greece two days ago, delivered a letter from President Roosevelt which declared, "I so wish you could get more help from us and more quickly!"

The letter dated April 12—the Germans on that day were breaking through Bitolj Gap and driving into western Greece—said:

"Your Majestic, may I introduce my eldest son, James Roosevelt. He is captain of the United States Marine Corps and leaves as an observer in Greece and the Near East.

"For the magnificent fight for freedom you people of Greece are putting up you have all our praise, all our prayers.

"I so wish you could get more help from us and more quickly! All I can say is I am using every effort and—the best of luck to you and yours.

"Faithfully yours, "FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT."

The sessions will be resumed today at 10 a. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

90 Millions Worth Of Food Already Sent to Britain

Farm supplies worth $90,000,000 already have been "sent to ports" for Great Britain, Carl Robbins, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, said yesterday.

Robbins made the statement during a House Banking Committee discussion of corporation loans to other farm agencies for purchase of farm crops.

"Some emergency needs of the British have arisen for supplies that could only be met by the surplus marketing agency," Robbins said. "They were placed very promptly and were sent to ports.

"Reimbursement will come from lease-lend funds in case the British will not be able to pay out of their ordinary dollar exchange."

First Camp For Antiwar Selects Opens

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Relay, Md., May 15.—In a peaceful Maryland valley, America today opened its first encampment for men willing to work but not fight for their country.

By night 23 Selective Service registrants whose local boards had certified them as "conscientiously opposed to participation in either combatant or noncombatant service" because of their religions had moved into a one-time CCC camp 1 mile west of here and a bare 10 miles from the troop-crammed home of the Twenty-ninth Division, at Fort Meade.

But at Patapsco reservation, officially known as Civilian Public Service Camp No. 3, there will be no uniforms and no bugle calls. And the work to be performed by these men will not be dictated by any military regimen. It will be dictated, it was said, "by inner compulsion, rather than from the outside."

Officials of the camp staff and of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, the organization in charge of this and 20 more like camps to be opened soon, hailed the innovation. Here, said Paul C. French, executive secretary, National Service Board for Religious Objectors, which is supervising the national program, "individual conscience is being recognized in a world of centralization."

To Work on Park Projects

The war-opposed personnel of this encampment will work at Government national park pursuits for the year they otherwise might spend under arms or in penitentiaries. In 1917 and 1918, it was pointed out, 503 conscientious objectors were sentenced to terms ranging from three years in prison to execution. (President Wilson commuted the sentences of the 17 men receiving the death sentence.)

The camp, built beside a narrow winding stream, has this equipment: An administrative building which houses the office of Dr. Ernest A. Wildman, chemistry professor on leave from Earlham College, Ind., and prominent in Quaker social work; a dining hall, for 20-men barracks with regulation Army cots; a recreational hall and a small structure set aside for religious meditation.

All of these buildings, far less commodious than the buildings springing up at Army camps, are built of pine boards covered with tar paper.

The recreation building is an unfurnished room with a counter at one end which is to serve as headquarters of a cooperative store. The objectors are to make ping pong tables and other equipment. Also, there is a small library in one end of a sleeping hall and boasting two or three score books so far contributed by philanthropists sympathetic to the program.

Reactions Are Varied

Objectors displayed widely varying reactions to the experiment, in answer to questions of reporters. They ranged from enthusiasm to stoical acceptance. A few were glumly untalkative.

Proctor Twichell 26-year-old Amherst College graduate, of Greenbelt, Md., the son of a Presbyterian minister, declared; "This is fine. We'll be building for the country, not hurting or killing people." He added: "At home, when I said that, some people said I was crazy."

Displaying the intense religious sentiment of the majority of the objectors, Ivan Moore, 22, a Methodist, of Delanco, N. J., said: "I just couldn't see how we could follow Christ and still go to war. The way to settle Hitler is not with a gun."

Asked why he would not participate in even noncombatant service, Moore said: "I'm trying to stay as far from it as possible. Of course, I suppose just buying a loaf of bread with a defense tax on it goes to the same thing."

To the question of whether he would fight if this country were attacked, O'Brien Boldt, 23, a research assistant at New York University, thought long, then said: "I can't answer that. I know damn well I'd fight back myself, as an individual. But it's a matter of specific circumstance. Is defense defense, or is it conscious and deliberate fooling?"

Less weighty was the observation of Carroll O'Neil, 24, of Baltimore, while at lunch. Extending his coffee cup to be refilled, he asked: "Another cup of coffee, please, or is that a matter of national importance?"

In the daily routing of the objectors, it was emphasized, there will be none of the compulsion of the Army. Though the rising bell is at 5:30 a. m., a man will not be required to get up. He will merely miss his breakfast if he doesn't. Similarly, if he refuses to perform the work allotted to him, a camp staff member will do it, and so conspicuously as to shame him before his fellows.

It is estimated the camp will operate at an expense of $35 per man. If he is able, he is expected to pay this sum. If not, he is provided for out of sums collected by the three religious groups operating the Nation-wide program under the National Service Board—the American Friends Service Committee (Quaker), the Brethren Service Committee and the Mennonite Central Committee. In all however, young men representing 70 different faiths are registered among the 1,209 objectors to go into camps soon.

Sen. Reynolds Heads Military Affairs Group

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate's time-honored seniority rule operated yesterday to place an outspoken opponent of Administration foreign policy in a key position regarding defense legislation.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, was chosen by the Senate Democratic steering committee to succeed the late Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, as chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The vote was 12 to 3.

Reynolds, sharp critic of President Roosevelt's aid-to-Britain and other foreign policies, was entitled to the important post under the seniority rule, but was not immediately selected. Leaders were understood to be contemplating skipping over Reynolds in favor of Senator Thomas, of Utah, stanch Administration supporter on foreign affairs.

Dodged Senate Battle

Yesterday, however, the leadership group decided at a closed session to nominate Reynolds. An authoritative source disclosed that the committee agreed to the choice rather than face a long and probably losing battle on the Senate floor.

Reynolds had served notice he would fight for the post if the steering committee passed him over and the power of the seniority rule would have aided his battle. Senate ratification of the North Carolinian for the post now, however, is regarded as a mere formality.

The three Senators who voted against Reynold's selection were Glass, of Virginia; Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and Green, of Rhode Island.

ing personally against Reynolds but thought he was "not the man for position," while Senator Green declared he thought Senator Thomas would make a better choice.

Vote Expression Enough

When Senator Guffey, however, was asked to comment on his vote, he said:

"I voted against him. Isn't that expression enough?"

The steering committee also assigned the newly seated Senator Rosier (Democrat, of West Virginia, to the Committees on Labor, Claims and Pensions. Senator Spencer (Democrat), of Arkansas, was selected to serve on the Postoffice, Immigration and Rules Committees.

Morticians Told Of Ads' Value

Maytor H. McKinley, West Coast funeral director, declared yesterday the Advertising Funeral Directors of America would "support to the limit the Government's attempt to prevent price control by associations."

Speaking at the funeral directors convention at the Mayflower Hotel, McKinley discussed the use of newspaper advertising by funeral directors and said it helped "inform the public correctly as to fair charges for funeral services."

At an afternoon session yesterday the members were addressed by Edward Hoyne, president of the organization, and Allan B. Mays, advertising manager of the Hecht Co., who spoke on "Good and Bad Advertising."

D. C. Liquor Probe Will Open May 27

Suspected violations of the conspiracy and antitrust laws in the Washington liquor industry will be investigated by a special grand jury to be impaneled in the District Court May 27.

District Attorney Edward M. Curran, in his request for the extra jury, estimated that the investigation would take at least a month. Chiefly under scrutiny will be alleged retail price fixing among some of the dealers.

More than 100 witnesses, many of them holders of liquor permits, have been summoned to appear before the grand jurors.

Strasser Reports Anti-Hitler Plot

Montreal, May 15 (AP).—Dr. Otto Strasser, leader of the anti-Nazi Black Front movement, said tonight he had received from Germany just five weeks ago a secret report of a plan to overthrow Adolf Hitler.

He said his information came from a high official in the German foreign ministery, a personal friend.

Strasser's statement was made in a broadcast over the national network of the Canadian broadcasting corporation.

G. M. Accepts Mediation Board's Plan

crease, which company officials said would add $50,000,000 to the company's annual pay roll, represents a complete union victory in the achievement of its full original wage demand.

Union Concession

The union's major concession is the acceptance of the board's recommendation against a union shop or closed shop.

It was assumed that yesterday's unauthorized strikes which shut down five company plants would be immediately terminated.

Following the announcement, made in the crowded press room of the OPM building, union leaders including Walter Reuther, director of the General Motor division, seized telephones to spread the word of what they considered a major victory to union leaders in 22 States.

Reuther indicated he was seeking to have 39,000 employes on unauthorized strikes return to work immediately.

Wide Effect on Pay Seen

The board panel which met on the case every week day save one since May 1, and also on several evenings, includes, besides Davis, who represented the public, Gerard Swope, hdnorary chairman of General Electric Co., and Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of the Washington Post, representing employers; John Brophy, head of the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council, and James F. Carey, of the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, representing employes.

The 10-cent wage increase, observers predicted, would have a wide-spread effect on pay rates in the entire Detroit area. The union is expected to make similar demands of other auto concerns, also engaged on defense business, with whom bargaining negotiations are scheduled in the near future.

Strike Against Hudson

Taking second place to the G. M. strike threat, portentous because of its possible widening effect on the key defense center of Detroit and on other management-labor relations throughout the country, were the following labor developments yesterday in other quarters:

1. The C. I. O.-U. A. W. struck against three Hudson Motor Co. plants at Detroit, employing 8,500 men and holding $10,000,000 of defense orders for airplane parts. The union demanded a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase and declared that in previous negotiations the company had failed to make a "decent" offer.

2. In a redoubled Government effort to end the stoppage on $500,000,000 of naval construction in San Francisco Bay shipyards, Labor Secretary Perkins termed the machinists' strike responsible for the cessation of work "a most serious disloyalty to union principles and to the program of the labor movement." The statement, telegraphed to Arthur R. Fenimore, president of the San Francisco Downtown Association of Employers, said the A. F. of L. union had "wantonly disregarded" the recently negotiated master labor contract for West Coast shipyards, violated an agreement which was binding on them, and had failed to seek adjustment of their grievances by peaceful means.

3. Construction workers laid down their tools for a few moments at various defense projects in Hawaii yesterday and some of the more vociferous among them were ejected from the Pearl Harbor naval reservation by Marines, the Associated Pres reported.

The work stoppage—a union official said it was "definitely not a strike"—began as a more or less concerted effort to gain uniform wage and hour scales for all crafts. But when the time arrived to quit work, only a small percentage did so.

The plumbers laid down their tools en masse, and Marines promptly escorted them off the reservation and took away their passes. Other workmen watched the plumbers go, then picked up their tools and resumed work.

4. A few hours following the settlement of the Colt Patent Fire-arms Co. strike at Hartford, Conn., the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., manufacturers of Garand rifles and ammunition, forestalled a strike by granting a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

5. President Roosevelt signed a proclamation setting up an emergency board, which will operate under the Railway Mediation Board procedure, to investigate a strike set for today on the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast Railroad. Involved are two railway brotherhoods seeking pay boosts.

6. A strike at the New Haven Foundry Co. was settled, making possible the return to work of 12,000 employes of the Dodge division, Chrysler Corporation, Detroit plant. The auto workers had been laid off due to a shortage in the supply of materials.

7. Employes of the Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co., voting in a Labor Board election provided in a settlement of a strike at the plant in February, choose the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee as their collecting bargaining agent by a vote of 8,223 to 2,961. Only a few hundred eligible workers failed to cast their ballots. The election was seen as significant in its effect on votes scheduled in other plants of the giant company.

8. A General Motors spokesman announced from Detroit that a strike late yesterday closed the company's gray iron foundry at Saginaw, Mich., which employes 4,800 men and makes castings for Chevrolet automobiles.

9. From Radford, Va., the Associated Press reported that settlement if a wage-controversy at the smokeless powder bag loading plant being built at Dublin was announced yesterday by Frank J. Walsh, Federal Conciliator, following a conference between the contractors and A. F. of L. iron workers.

In his statement early yesterday on the G. M. C. dispute, Davis said that the 12-day conferences of the board had succeeded in settling many points in dispute. On the principal issue, however, the union's 10-cent-an-hour wage increase demand, the board's recommendation was apparently not acceptable to the company.

Given the choice of voluntary arbitration on the point, the union declined, although the company accepted, Davis said. Unable to dispose of the matter, therefore, by arbitration, the board made findings and formed recommendations. These were accepted by the union, the statement added, and the board thereupon offered the company an additional 24 hours before the expiration of which it will either accept or reject.

Lady Mendl Seeks Citizenship So U. S. May Gain in Taxes

By International News Service

Lady Elsie de Wolfe Mendl, who as Elsie de Wolfe had theatrical followers at her feet back in the gay nineties, wants to regain her American citizenship—so Uncle Sam, and not John Bull, can collect inheritance taxes from her estate when she dies.

Seventy-years-old and not knowing whether she will live the five more years necessary to regain her citizenship under present law, Lady Elsie requested Representative J. Clark Baldwin (Republican), of New York, to introduced a bill granting her citizenship. The bill was introduced in the House yesterday.

Bombers Damaged In Five-Plane Crash

Dallas, May 15 (AP).—Five airplanes, including two bombers bound for Britain, were damaged here today. A high wind drove two planes owned by an aviation school out of control on the municipal landing field.

One of the school's ships, attempting a takeoff, was whisked by the gale into a bomber, breaking its glass nose with a wing tip. Then it caved in the wing of another British plane nearby.

The second training ship plunged into a private plane staked down near a runway.

Welfare Board Accepts Bondy Resignation

The Board of Public Welfare late yesterday accepted the resignation of Director Robert E. Bondy and announced a successor would be selected "within the next few days."

Bondy will leave office May 31 to become director of services to the armed forces for the American Red Cross. The Welfare Board is known to be considering at least three local men for the position.

Paul Edwards Mentioned

Possibly the outstanding candidate is Paul Edwards, District director of WPA. Also on the list is Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions and Conrad Van Hyning, principal assistant welfare director, who recently has been acting as head of the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue Northwest.

Bondy has been welfare director since 1939. He was Red Cross director of disaster relief before entering District service.

His successor will be appointed by the Commissioners upon recommendation of the Board of Public Welfare.

Weigh Cassie's Successor

The Welfare Board announced that it had under consideration a successor to Earle Cassie, who recently resigned as head of the Industrial Home School, but refused further comment. Van Hyning has been taking Cassie's place.

The board was told that Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., suffered a heart attack earlier this week and is now in University Hospital, Baltimore. His condition was said to be not serious.

Duke Alumni Party

The District Chapter, Duke University Alumni Association, will hold its annual informal party at 8 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. J. Chisman Hanes, assistant general counsel, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is in charge of the program committee.

Work Harder For Defense, Batt Asks U. S.

Copyright by New York Times

W. L. Batt, deputy director of OPM's production division, said in a radio address tonight that "a radical change" of attitude on the part of "some people" in Government, labor and industry must take place "if we are to make good our promises to the defenders of freedom."

He called for longer hours and harder work by labor, curtailment of civilian production even to the detriment of the American standard of living, and said that business fears would have to be overridden in the expansion of productive facilities even if there is no practical use for these factories after the emergency.

Batt spoke over the Mutual Broadcasting network coincident with disclosure of a preliminary and confidential report by the National Planning Association, of which he is the head, indicating the need for boosting the present defense program of $40,000,000,000 to $100,000,000,000 and criticizing the present approach of OPM to defense problems as slow and inadequate. It was emphasized that Batt took no part in the defense group meeting of the Planning Association, from which the preliminary report came, but it was known that other Government employes concerned with defense had participated.

Batt himself told his radio audience that "at our present pace" the American people "cannot begin" to fulfill our promises to "provide all the weapons for the defeat of those who would destroy democracy."

"The time is here," he said, "when we can afford to ask only one question about any issue: "Does it help or hinder our efforts to build more equipment than the aggressors can build?" That is the only really pertinent question today.

"Even if this involves building factories for which there will be no practical use after the emergency, then those factories must be built—business fears to the contrary. If this involves the curtailment of civilian production, then that production must be curtailed, our standard of living to the contrary. If this involves longer hours and harder work, then that work must be endured, labor standards to the contrary."

Ex-Newspapermen Win an Ovation

Three former newspapermen yesterday brought a standing ovation from the House with speeches in tribute to three employes of the press gallery.

Honored by the tributes were William J. Donaldson, press gallery superintendent, who will complete 30 years' service tomorrow; Chester Thrift, assistant superintendent, who has been employed in the gallery for 24 years, and Anthony P. Demma, another gallery veteran.

Representatives Louis Ludlow, of Indiana; William R. Thom, of Ohio, and Winder Harris, of Virginia, all former Washington correspondents, delivered the testimonial speeches.

Scout Leaders Open Meeting In D. C. Today

The National Council of the Boy Scouts of America will open its thirty-first annual meeting today at 9 a. m. in the Willard Hotel, with more than 1,000 Scout leaders from all parts of the country in attendance.

Representing more than 1,485,613 members of the Scout movement throughout the Nation the National Council has taken as its theme this year a part of the Scout oath: "Physically strong, Mentally awake and morally straight."

Captain Chester Wells, president of the National Capital Area Council will welcome members at the morning session today. Walter W. Head, resident of the Boy Scouts of America will speak and Senator Arthur Capper, will deliver a tribute to the memory of the late Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo, honorary vice president of the Boy Scouts of America.

At the noon luncheon meeting the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Washington, Protestant Episcopal Church, will deliver the invocation and Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will speak.

Following afternoon discussion periods the annual dinner will take place at 7 p. m. tonight. Local Scouts will stage a series of dramatic sketches, depicting the highlights of Scouting in historical review.

Presentation of the Silver Buffalo award, highest honor of its kind in the Boy Scouts, will be given at the dinner to persons whose names will not be announced, in accordance with tradition, until the dinner.

Speakers of the evening will be Hon. Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator; Frank J. Hogan, past president, American Bar Association, and Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive.

Christine Cromwell Elopes to Elkton

CHRISTINE CROMWELL, 18-year-old daughter of James H. R. Cromwell, former minister to Canada, was married to Frederick P. White, a freshman at Brown University, at Elkton, Md., on Tuesday

Tomorrow Norman H. Davis, chairman, American Red Cross, and Gale F. Johnston, president, St. Louis Council, will speak at the 12:30 p. m. luncheon meeting.

The annual meeting of the National Council concludes tomorrow at 4 p. m., when it meets at the Washington City Orphan Asylum, 4119 Nebraska Avenue Northwest, to dedicate a 40-foot steel flagpole with the 12 points of scout law inscribed on its bronze base to Dr. James E. West.

Monarchist Sentiment Gains Rapidly in Spain, Writer Finds

By John Lloyd

(Associated Press writer who has just returned after six months in Spain.)

New York, May 15.—Observers making a study of Spain have noted a large increase in monarchist sentiment in the last year, perhaps pointing the way to the ultimate form of government of the land of the dons.

But this question, they say, like many others affecting the peninsula, depends largely on the outcome of the European war—a British victory might open up possibilities for a return of the republic: a German victory certainly would not.

The "in between" would be a monarchy. It might come if England won. It might come if Germany won. It could very well come even in a stalemate.

Monarchists say that sentiment—which they term widespread—in favor of the monarchy, arises from a feeling of compromise and a desire to go back to what harried minds picture as a relatively happy past. The long civil war and unhappiness brought on by the present international conflict give the preceding era a rosy tint, they say.

Persons who look for a return of the monarchy do not set a definite time. Likewise, they do not risk predictions as to the manner in which it would be brought about.

There appears to be little doubt that sentiment of monarchists is crystalized in favor of Don Juan, son of Alfonso and Alfonso's own choice as a successor. The government, however, has not been in a position or has not been of a mind to restore the monarchy up to now. Neither is there any assurance that Juan would accept the conditions that might be attached to a restoration.

But compare the sentiment in besieged Madrid during the civil war and the capital today.

During the war there was the natural feeling by a large mass of Madrilenos against the enemy that was crushing what those people called the republic and what the Nationalists called a Red administration. But as the war wore on and the siege grew more trying, the number of people who wished for an outcome—any outcome—steadily mounted.

When the war did end and Franco marched his victorious legions through the capital, there was widespread rejoicing, not only by his active followers but by all the people who had had enough of strife.

Some partisans suggest that the Franco government could have issued a general pardon and called upon the people for union and brotherhood in the interest of a rebuilt nation and a better future, and that thereby the people might have united and the present might have been happier.

Franco took the stand that crimes on a wholesale plane had been committed against the more respectable part of the population, that the criminals must be hunted down or sorted out and punished severely. People whose loved ones perished had a right to demand such justice, he declared.

When it is considered that Franco estimates place the number of persons slain in Madrid alone at several tens of thousands, the extent covered by this inexorable punishment can be perceived. It has been going on for a period of years and brings bitter resentment on the part of an element of the population from which Franco courts draw their guilty.

So there still is tension and there are taut feelings in Spain. Discipline during a period of the kind that now exists must be severe, and severe it is—as in Germany, in Italy and Russia.

Due to this, or to the international and other circumstances that have retarded recovery—or possibly to both—a considerable feeling of disappointment exists. This penetrates the ranks of the old passive Fifth Columnists. Many are the people who say "We didn't know it was coming to this."

G. M. Accepts Mediation Board's Plan

crease, which company officials said would add $50,000,000 to the company's annual pay roll, represents a complete union victory in the achievement of its full original wage demand.

Union Concession

The union's major concession is the acceptance of the board's recommendation against a union shop or closed shop.

It was assumed that yesterday's unauthorized strikes which shut down five company plants would be immediately terminated.

Following the announcement, made in the crowded press room of the OPM building, union leaders including Walter Reuther, director of the General Motor division, seized telephones to spread the word of what they considered a major victory to union leaders in 22 States.

Reuther indicated he was seeking to have 39,000 employes on unauthorized strikes return to work immediately.

Wide Effect on Pay Seen

The board panel which met on the case every week day save one since May 1, and also on several evenings, includes, besides Davis, who represented the public, Gerard Swope, hdnorary chairman of General Electric Co., and Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of the Washington Post, representing employers; John Brophy, head of the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council, and James F. Carey, of the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, representing employes.

The 10-cent wage increase, observers predicted, would have a wide-spread effect on pay rates in the entire Detroit area. The union is expected to make similar demands of other auto concerns, also engaged on defense business, with whom bargaining negotiations are scheduled in the near future.

Strike Against Hudson

Taking second place to the G. M. strike threat, portentous because of its possible widening effect on the key defense center of Detroit and on other management-labor relations throughout the country, were the following labor developments yesterday in other quarters:

1. The C. I. O.-U. A. W. struck against three Hudson Motor Co. plants at Detroit, employing 8,500 men and holding $10,000,000 of defense orders for airplane parts. The union demanded a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase and declared that in previous negotiations the company had failed to make a "decent" offer.

2. In a redoubled Government effort to end the stoppage on $500,000,000 of naval construction in San Francisco Bay shipyards, Labor Secretary Perkins termed the machinists' strike responsible for the cessation of work "a most serious disloyalty to union principles and to the program of the labor movement." The statement, telegraphed to Arthur R. Fenimore, president of the San Francisco Downtown Association of Employers, said the A. F. of L. union had "wantonly disregarded" the recently negotiated master labor contract for West Coast shipyards, violated an agreement which was binding on them, and had failed to seek adjustment of their grievances by peaceful means.

3. Construction workers laid down their tools for a few moments at various defense projects in Hawaii yesterday and some of the more vociferous among them were ejected from the Pearl Harbor naval reservation by Marines, the Associated Pres reported.

The work stoppage—a union official said it was "definitely not a strike"—began as a more or less concerted effort to gain uniform wage and hour scales for all crafts. But when the time arrived to quit work, only a small percentage did so.

The plumbers laid down their tools en masse, and Marines promptly escorted them off the reservation and took away their passes. Other workmen watched the plumbers go, then picked up their tools and resumed work.

4. A few hours following the settlement of the Colt Patent Firearms Co. strike at Hartford, Conn., the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., manufacturers of Garand rifles and ammunition, forestalled a strike by granting a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

5. President Roosevelt signed a proclamation setting up an emergency board, which will operate under the Railway Mediation Board procedure, to investigate a strike set for today on the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast Railroad. Involved are two railway brotherhoods seeking pay boosts.

6. A strike at the New Haven Foundry Co. was settled, making possible the return to work of 12,000 employes of the Dodge division, Chrysler Corporation, Detroit plant. The auto workers had been laid off due to a shortage in the supply of materials.

7. Employes of the Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co., voting in a Labor Board election provided in a settlement of a strike at the plant in February, choose the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee as their collecting bargaining agent by a vote of 3,223 to 2,961. Only a few hundred eligible workers failed to cast their ballots. The election was seen as significant in its effect on votes scheduled in other plants of the giant company.

8. A General Motors spokesman announced from Detroit that a strike late yesterday closed the company's gray iron foundry at Saginaw, Mich., which employes 4,800 men and makes castings for Chevrolet automobiles.

9. From Radford, Va., the Associated Press reported that settlement if a wage-controversy at the smokeless powder bag loading plant being built at Dublin was announced yesterday by Frank J. Walsh, Federal Conciliator, following a conference between the contractors and A. F. of L. iron workers.

In his statement early yesterday on the G. M. C. dispute, Davis said that the 12-day conferences of the board had succeeded in settling many points in dispute. On the principal issue, however, the union's 10-cent-an-hour wage increase demand, the board's recommendation was apparently not acceptable to the company.

Given the choice of voluntary arbitration on the point, the union declined, although the company accepted, Davis said. Unable to dispose of the matter, therefore, by arbitration, the board made findings and formed recommendations. These were accepted by the union, the statement added, and the board thereupon offered the company an additional 24 hours before the expiration of which it will either accept or reject.

Lady Mendl Seeks Citizenship So U. S. May Gain in Taxes

By International News Service

Lady Elsie de Wolfe Mendl, who as Elsie de Wolfe had theatrical followers at her feet back in the gay nineties, wants to regain her American citizenship—so Uncle Sam, and not John Bull, can collect inheritance taxes from her estate when she dies.

Seventy-years-old and not knowing whether she will live the five more years necessary to regain her citizenship under present law, Lady Elsie requested Representative J. Clark Baldwin (Republican), of New York, to introduced a bill granting her citizenship. The bill was introduced in the House yesterday.

Bombers Damaged In Five-Plane Crash

Dallas, May 15 (AP).—Five airplanes, including two bombers bound for Britain, were damaged here today. A high wind drove two planes owned by an aviation school out of control on the municipal landing field.

One of the school's ships, attempting a takeoff, was whisked by the gale into a bomber, breaking its glass nose with a wing tip. Then it caved in the wing of another British plane nearby.

The second training ship plunged into a private plane staked down near a runway.

Welfare Board Accepts Bondy Resignation

The Board of Public Welfare late yesterday accepted the resignation of Director Robert E. Bondy and announced a successor would be selected "within the next few days."

Bondy will leave office May 31 to become director of services to the armed forces for the American Red Cross. The Welfare Board is known to be considering at least three local men for the position.

Paul Edwards Mentioned

Possibly the outstanding candidate is Paul Edwards, District director of WPA. Also on the list is Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions and Conrad Van Hyning, principal assistant welfare director, who recently has been acting as head of the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue Northwest.

Bondy has been welfare director since 1939. He was Red Cross director of disaster relief before entering District service.

His successor will be appointed by the Commissioners upon recommendation of the Board of Public Welfare.

Weigh Cassie's Successor

The Welfare Board announced that it had under consideration a successor to Earle Cassie, who recently resigned as head of the Industrial Home School, but refused further comment. Van Hyning has been taking Cassie's place.

The board was told that Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., suffered a heart attack earlier this week and is now in University Hospital, Baltimore. His condition was said to be not serious.

Duke Alumni Party

The District Chapter, Duke University Alumni Association, will hold its annual informal party at 8 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. J. Chisman Hanes, assistant general counsel, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is in charge of the program committee.

Work Harder For Defense, Batt Asks U. S.

Copyright by New York Times

W. L. Batt, deputy director of OPM's production division, said in a radio address tonight that "a radical change" of attitude on the part of "some people" in Government, labor and industry must take place "if we are to make good our promises to the defenders of freedom."

He called for longer hours and harder work by labor, curtailment of civilian production even to the detriment of the American standard of living, and said that business fears would have to be overridden in the expansion of productive facilities even if there is no practical use for these factories after the emergency.

Batt spoke over the Mutual Broadcasting network coincident with disclosure of a preliminary and confidential report by the National Planning Association, of which he is the head, indicating the need for boosting the present defense program of $40,000,000,000 to $100,000,000,000 and criticizing the present approach of OPM to defense problems as slow and inadequate. It was emphasized that Batt took no part in the defense group meeting of the Planning Association, from which the preliminary report came, but it was known that other Government employes concerned with defense had participated.

Batt himself told his radio audience that "at our present pace" the American people "cannot begin" to fulfill our promises to "provide all the weapons for the defeat of those who would destroy democracy."

"The time is here," he said, "when we can afford to ask only one question about any issue: 'Does it help or hinder our efforts to build more equipment than the aggressors can build?' That is the only really pertinent question today.

"Even if this involves building factories for which there will be no practical use after the emergency, then those factories must be built—business fears to the contrary. If this involves the curtailment of civilian production, then that production must be curtailed, our standard of living to the contrary. If this involves longer hours and harder work, then that work must be endured, labor standards to the contrary."

Ex-Newspapermen Win an Ovation

Three former newspapermen yesterday brought a standing ovation from the House with speeches in tribute to three employes of the press gallery.

Honored by the tributes were William J. Donaldson, press gallery superintendent, who will complete 30 years' service tomorrow; Chester Thrift, assistant superintendent, who has been employed in the gallery for 24 years, and Anthony P. Demma, another gallery veteran.

Representatives Louis Ludlow, of Indiana; William R. Thom, of Ohio, and Winder Harris, of Virginia, all former Washington correspondents, delivered the testimonial speeches.

Monarchist Sentiment Gains Rapidly in Spain, Writer Finds

By John Lloyd

(Associated Press writer who has just returned after six months in Spain.)

New York, May 15.—Observers making a study of Spain have noted a large increase in monarchist sentiment in the last year, perhaps pointing the way to the ultimate form of government of the land of the dons.

But this question, they say, like many others affecting the peninsula, depends largely on the outcome of the European war—a British victory might open up possibilities for a return of the republic; a German victory certainly would not.

The "in between" would be a monarchy. It might come if England won. It might come if Germany won. It could very well come even in a stalemate.

Monarchists say that sentiment—which they term widespread—in favor of the monarchy, arises from a feeling of compromise and a desire to go back to what harried minds picture as a relatively happy past. The long civil war and unhappiness brought on by the present international conflict give the preceding era a rosy tint, they say.

Persons who look for a return of the monarchy do not set a definite time. Likewise, they do not risk predictions as to the manner in which it would be brought about.

There appears to be little doubt that sentiment of monarchists is crystalized in favor of Don Juan, son of Alfonso and Alfonso's own choice as a successor. The government, however, has not been in a position or has not been of a mind to restore the monarchy up to now. Neither is there any assurance that Juan would accept the conditions that might be attached to a restoration.

But compare the sentiment in besieged Madrid during the civil war and the capital today.

During the war there was the natural feeling by a large mass of Madrilenos against the enemy that was crushing what those people called the republic and what the Nationalists called a Red administration. But as the war wore on and the siege grew more trying, the number of people who wished for an outcome—any outcome—steadily mounted.

When the war did end and Franco marched his victorious legions through the capital, there was widespread rejoicing, not only by his active followers but by all the people who had had enough of strife.

Some partisans suggest that the Franco government could have issued a general pardon and called upon the people for union and brotherhood in the interest of a rebuilt nation and a better future, and that thereby the people might have united and the present might have been happier.

Franco took the stand that crimes on a wholesale plane had been committed against the more respectable part of the population, that the criminals must be hunted down or sorted out and punished severely. People whose loved ones perished had a right to demand such justice, he declared.

When it is considered that Franco estimates place the number of persons slain in Madrid alone at several tens of thousands, the extent covered by this inexorable punishment can be perceived. It has been going on for a period of years and brings bitter resentment on the part of an element of the population from which Franco courts draw their guilty.

So there still is tension and there are taut feelings in Spain. Discipline during a period of the kind that now exists must be severe, and severe it is—as in Germany, in Italy and Russia.

Due to this, or to the international and other circumstances that have retarded recovery—or possibly to both—a considerable feeling of disappointment exists. This penetrates the ranks of the old passive Fifth Columnists. Many are the people who say "We didn't know it was coming to this."

Eleventh Hour

The President's statement on Vichy's negotiations with Nazi Germany is tantamount to a direct appeal to the people of France to prevent the Petain government from selling out France to Hitler. It comes at the eleventh hour. An ominous omen of the contents of the projected pact is the report that Nazi planes already are flying over French territory in Syria on their way to Iraq. Another such omen is Petain's sudden radio talk yesterday to the French people. Petain is plainly nervous. In no country has there hitherto been more respect for public opinion than in France. Even in Petain's France the theory has obtained that the chief of state was a prisoner of public opinion. That is to say, he could not pursue his own personal leanings to Naziism beyond the pace which the French people would allow. On this ground the chief of state's frequent appearances in public have been explained; he has been electioneering, as it were. But what are we to make of the sudden accession of full-blooded Fuehrer-prinzip in the aged marshal! Explaining the new negotiations with the Nazis, he told the French people "It is up to you . . . to follow me without mental reservations." Petain no doubt is venerated in France, but he is making a huge draft on faith (unless he is bent on using the Nazi medicine for creating public opinion) in addressing the individualistic French people in this dictatorial strain. It would be a revolution if even the hero of Verdun could get the French who have always been used to thinking for themselves to think with him. The Roosevelt statement will remind them that the decision which the Vichy crowd is making in their name may be fatal to their national survival.

New Chairman

Senator McCarran's appointment as chairman of the Senate District Committee is a happy event for this voteless community. The Senator from Nevada has followed District legislative affairs with diligence and understanding for a number of years. By all odds he is the best qualified legislator in line for the post. That point was emphasized by The Post several weeks ago when it first might make the vacancy by being elevated to the chairmanship of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. So we are especially pleased to note that Mr. McCarran has reconsidered his refusal of last January to accept the District Committee chairmanship.

By all means the Senator's request for a municipal expert to keep the committee advised on District legislation should be granted. The committee needs such an aide regardless of who is chairman. So long as Congress insists upon jamming ordinances for the Capital City through the congested legislative mills at the Capitol, it should certainly provide the District Committees with experts to keep them informed as to local issues and legislative requirements. The need of such an expert serving the House District Committee should be considered along with Senator McCarran's request.

The elevation of Senator Reynolds to the chairmanship of the Military Affairs Committee arouses no such enthusiasm as the McCarran appointment. Mr. Reynolds owes his promotion solely to the operation of the seniority rule. Neither his record, his training nor his temperament qualify him for that vital post in this critical period. Mr. Reynolds will have to summon all the discretion at his command if he is to avoid bringing the seniority rule into further discredit.

What Strikes Mean

A Government report just issued should put a quietus to the foolish efforts which have been made to minimize the disastrous effect of the wave of strikes upon our defense preparations. The report is the business index for April of the Department of Commerce. Therein it is recorded that the labor troubles involving coal, steel and automobiles broke the year-long rise in industrial output. With many industries going full speed ahead, and new production facilities being brought into use daily, the losses and delays resulting from strikes and lockouts may be entirely concealed by offsetting gains in output. But only for a time. Yet, though the initiated are not deceived by the failure of general production indices immediately to reflect the lost motion of labor troubles, the public at large is inclined to take a complacent attitude toward the strike menace as long as business in general appears to be booming. For that reason it is well to emphasize current evidences of business recession, such as the reduced output of coal, steel and automobiles, the drop in freight-car loadings and in electric power output; for they are indubitably linked to labor disturbances.

Sour Fruit

Mark Ethridge, former president of the National Association of Broadcasters, had good reason to throw overboard his projected study of the radio industry, but he puts the fault in the wrong place. President Roosevelt had asked Mr. Ethridge to survey the concentration of control in radio. Soon after his study got under way the Federal Communications Commission ordered sweeping changes in the rules governing chain broadcasting as a result of its own study extending over three years. Mr. Ethridge thus seems to be justified in questioning the "good faith" of the request made of him. But he obviously goes off at a tangent when he assumes that the responsibility for this "breach of faith . . . can be pinned directly" on the FCC.

For the task of regulating interstate communications by radio has been assigned by law to the Federal Communications Commission. That responsibility does not fall upon the President. Mr. Roosevelt, to be sure, might properly ask for a study of monopoly in broadcasting with the object of recommending new legislation to Congress. But, of course, no special investigator appointed by him can supersede the FCC. It would be unreasonable to ask, moreover, that an FCC order be delayed while a special White House appointee was making an inquiry of his own. Instead of being condemned for its independent action, therefore, the FCC is to be highly commended for refusing to let ill-advised meddling on the part of the White House interfere with its order.

Mr. Ethridge suggests that Congressmen, radio operators or others attempting to put pressure upon the FCC in the disposition of licenses ought to be put in jail. In many respects pressure upon the commission from the White House would be even more inexcusable because of the enomous powers wielded by the President. We are not suggesting that Mr. Roosevelt had any intention of interfering with the commission's work when he asked Mr. Ethridge to look into the problems of chain broadcasting. It is reasonable to assume that, as is his wont in similar situations, he was merely trying to pacify the broadcasters with his usual urbanity. But good will thus acquired is certain to turn sour. Moreover, this kind of practice is detrimental to orderly Government procedure.

This experience should teach the broadcasters that nothing is to be gained by trying to obtain regulation of their industry from the White House. And it ought to show the President the grave dangers of his indirect and informal methods of meeting such problems while they are under treatment by the responsible administrative agency. Certainly the effect of the FCC order has not been softened by Mr. Roosevelt's sideline activities. And the natural irritation of many broadcasters has been magnified into active hostility because of a feeling that official Washington has acted in bad faith.

No Hits, One Error

It is no secret, of course, that the British at this stage of their history are very eager for closer relations with the people of this country. But apparently there are still some matters at which they insist on drawing the line, and one of these came to light last week.

It seems that an epidemic of nostalgia swept through the American and Canadian correspondents in London after the arrival from home of newspapers containing accounts of the opening of the big league season. But the nearest ballpark was several thousand miles across the Atlantic. So the correspondents decided that the next best thing to watching a baseball game would be to play one. Teams representing, respectively, the Canadian Press and the Associated Press were hastily organized, and they proceeded, first of all, to explore the possibilities of London for bats, balls, gloves, masks and so on. Such objects, of course, were scarce as swastikas in London. However, one of the boys managed to borrow the stuff from a Canadian regiment. This problem having been solved, the next was to find a baseball field, and this was even more of a poser, and one which engaged long and earnest deliberation. Eventually somebody thought of the ancient Lord's cricket grounds at St. John's Wood. This is the home of the famous Marylebone Club, having been established by Thomas Lord, illustrious eighteenth century bowler. Lord's is the scene of the traditional "Players versus Gentlemen" matches, and is hallowed by its association with such famous names as W. G. Grace, Fry, Steel and the Brothers Lyttleton.

Had the correspondents proposed to play stud poker in the nave of Westminster Abbey, it could not have aroused more consternation than their proposal to play baseball at Lord's. Indeed, if we can trust the melancholy story cabled here the other day by Eddy Gilmore of the A. P., the request for the use of the grounds almost precipitated the gravest crisis in Anglo-American relations since the Venezuelan boundary affair. The crisis was averted only by one of those tours de force of diplomacy for which the British were once so celebrated. Refusal was made utterly polite. The custodians of Lord's suddenly remembered that the grounds had been reserved for the cricket team of the London police.

Just what the moral of the incident is, we scarcely know. Offhand the action of the people at Lord's seems rather inhospitable. We are quite certain that if twenty-two homesick lads at the British Embassy wanted Griffith Stadium for a spot of cricket some morning, they would have no difficulty. However, it is well to remember the still widely prevalent impression among the English about baseball—that it is a crude sort of game, played with a soft rubber ball called the pitcher's rubber, for a sort of trophy called a home plate. They couldn't allow that sort of thing at Lord's, you know.

X Equals Zero

On this page yesterday some attention was given to the rumors that the reason for the elevation of Lord Beaverbrook to the post of minister without portfolio was to permit him to look after the important but hitherto ineptly managed job of British propaganda. Now, in spite of the fact that at home the British propagandists are still getting a panning, we must hand them a bouquet for the handling to date of the extraordinary case of Rudolf Hess. We have counted, and our readers have no doubt read avidly, at least 20 different reports, each more extraordinary than the other, which have come from one London source or another in the past 62 hours.

Meanwhile on this side of the ocean Lord Halifax suggests that Hess fled Germany because he "saw the handwriting on the wall." From Canada, Herr Otto Strasser, generalissimo (by remote control) of the Black Front, explains that Hess lammed out because he knew that Goering and the army leaders are getting ready to shoot Goebbels and Hitler and to liquidate National Socialism. A military columnist thinks that Hess fled to England as the last stronghold of the Aryan race (!) because Hitler has sold out Germany to the non-Aryan Bolsheviks. A magazine editor lately returned from Europe says that Herr Hess has been converted to Buchmanism and flew to England publicly to confess his own sins and Hitler's sins, too.

If you will take the trouble to arrange all these "authoritative," "official," "inspired" and "informed" statements and "true stories" in the form of an equation, you will notice that they cancel out pretty neatly. But the main thing to observe is how they have come so thick and fast as to provide new and more startling headlines for each successive edition of the American newspapers. Without revealing anything of importance, anything really trustworthy, they have served to drive everything out of Berlin and Rome to more obscure corners of the front page or even inside. In so doing they have served to keep American apprehensions at high pitch. They have scattered as much distrust as possible within Germany. They have forced the German broadcasters into worse and worse contradictions and absurdities in their explanations—by taking the ball wherever the Nazis have attempted to pass it. The Germans were the first to mention Hess, the duke, hallucinations and the "messianic mission," but each time it is the British who have provided the sensation. There are reasons to believe that the biggest sensation is yet to come. At any rate, in this game of building hopes, suspense, fears and surprise the British have for once out-Goebbeled Goebbels!

Loss To D. C.

The resignation of Robert E. Bondy as director of public welfare centers attention upon the numerous changes which are taking place in the personnel of the District government. Only this week the Commissioners named Arthur R. Pilkerton auditor and Walter L. Fowler budget director to succeed the late Daniel J. Donovan. Various other important posts are vacant, or soon will be vacant, because of forthcoming retirements. In addition a search must now be conducted for an expert in public welfare administration to succeed Mr. Bondy. While he has served the District for less than two years, Mr. Bondy has won the confidence of both officials and the public. His efforts to improve the lot of Washington's underprivileged thousands have been handicapped by lack of funds. Yet notable progress in the development of various welfare institutions and plans for new institutions has been made. Mr. Bondy's resignation will be widely regretted, even though he is returning to an important assignment in the American Red Cross.

LOST LAMBS

O shepherd of remembered sheep,
Turn back by long-untrodden ways
And lead those quiet flocks to graze
Upon the meadows of my sleep.

Bring back lost lambs of seasons fair,
The happy thoughts I used to know,
As if my boughs, instead of snow,
The bloom of April still might bear.

Urban Defense

Many things are being done and said these days in regard to national defense. But what is being done about protecting our water, gas, electric and telephone systems in the large cities? For example, take our own city of Washington which is the heart of the Government.

Our utilities are all underground, it's true, but easily reached through the thousands of manholes housing the vital connections. For instance, it would be an easy matter for a spy or saboteur to enter a manhole and destroy the neighborhood telephone system or, by using oxgygen and staying down for hours unnoticed, tap in on all state or national secrets and get advance information of vital importance. An organized crew could very easily cover the entire city, open hundreds of manholes, drop bombs, hand grenades or time explosives in them and drive on.

The result would be terrible. Water mains broken, gas mains destroyed, electric power and light indefinitely shut down and the telephone system demoralized.

This danger should be remedied without delay. I think something should be done to cause all manholes to be completely locked by a device of unusual dependability, not the kind of make-shift fastenings now used, which are all right to keep out children, but one which cannot be pried open, the lock picked or opened in any way, with special keys and tools in possession of authorized employes.

Measles Or No Measles

Anent the following excerpt from Jerry Klutz's Federal Diary in The Post of May 8: "Some officials have wondered what has happened to Ed Flynn, Democratic National Committee chairman, and his demands for Federal jobs. Flynn has been delayed by a case of measles."

Will you kindly explain why it is necessary for Mr. Ed Flynn to mix up in appointments to Federal positions, either with or without benefit of measles? The President has just issued an executive order stating the procedure to be followed, and at a time like this the less politics the better. Do we wish unity or chaos?

What Conclusion?

When the United States sent soldiers to help England during the last war, Germany was tottering. Now Germany owns nearly all of Europe! What conclusion should common sense now reach?

Reader Reaction To L'Affaire Hess

It occurs to me that an effective way to test the status of Rudolf Hess, the unheralded visitor from Germany, is to publish the fact that he is confined, as a prisoner of war, somewhere in the British Isles. Indiscriminate bombing throughout Britain would no doubt cease if Hess is an emissary of Adolf Hitler, but would be intensified if he is a traitor to the Axis. FRED D. JACOBS.
Alexandria, Va., May 13.

At last Hitler seems to realize that the invasion of England by sea and air is not practicable; so he has decided to return to his early way of gaining entrance to the land of his would-be victims. The old method of infiltration has failed, so now a new one is to be tried. Inside the "Trojan Horse," not a crowd of tourists, but one of Hitler's trusted partners in crime, one who has proved himself many times by carrying out very many gruesome tasks. So Herr Hess appears as a hunted refugee, fleeing from the coming wrath of his Fuehrer and—of all places—to the only spot that his chief has not been able to conquer, but which should be in the next few weeks, according to plan.

Herr Hess with all his powers in Germany could not have left without the knowledge and tacit consent of the Gestapo, nor would he have left his wife and child to the "tender" mercies of the Gestapo to "plead the cause of humanity" in England. Herr Hess, being in a powerful position in Germany, will receive special consideration and under the guise of a humbled refugee will be able to undermine the resistance of England by helping to build up and make strong a "Peace at any Price" party and so save civilization. If this plan succeeds, Hess will receive as part of his reward the post of chief gauleiter for the British Isles and, as his home, what remains of Buckingham Palace.

Reports coming from Germany that those who helped him to escape have been severely punished are mere eyewash meant to bolster up his case—certainly a devilish clever scheme which will undoubtedly raise a cloud of dust which will blind part of the population and so prepare the way for more direct attack on the last citadel of democracy standing in Europe. His place is in a concentration camp where he can do no harm and be kept under constant supervision.

S. I. BONDHINDS.
Washington, May 13.

Fantastic though it may seem, the culmination of this Hess-flight affair may well be the vantage point of a well-planned sinister scheme in which Hess was more than willing to risk his life for the fatherland and for his Fuehrer. The flight Hess took has all the earmarks of being well premeditated. But, if we analyze for a moment, is that too great a task for the devilish mind of the Teuton? Indeed, no. The fact is that in a few days we will undoubtedly hear (if my suspicions are correct) about this and that attempt by unknown causes to take Hess' life and, of course, almost but never succeeding. The ground which must thoroughly be established in the minds of the Briton is that this flight was on the level. England must be led to believe, without a tinge of doubt in her mind, that Hess is positively sick of Hitler and his tactics and is more than ready to help England beat the tar out of him. On the other hand, cunning fox Adolf must give the impression that he is well aware of Mr. Hess' intention to inform, so that in order to counteract anything the No. 3 man may say detrimental to the fatherland, Adolf is handing out the information that Mr. Hess is "slightly goofy." This contention, however, contradicts the Fuehrer's modus operandi, for if he had known that Hess' alleged state of mind was indeed a reality, he certainly would have put at least digit one in front of the No. 3 title. The world gives Adolf that much credit. Furthermore, if Hess was actually abandoning Adolf, he would certainly not leave his family behind, knowing full well from his own experience the treatment they would receive.

JAMES A. NICOLAS.

It doesn't seem possible that wishfulfillment could carry both Britain and America to the point of blindness. Hess is, of course, the 1941 Trojan Horse sent into the enemy country to be ready when his fellow Nazis hidden about the British Isles will have the courage to fly forth from their "magot" world and revolt.

The Nazis, to say nothing of Hitler himself, will be amused at the credulity of a gulleless world which could believe the cock and bull story of Hess's being deranged, or think for a moment that he would leave his wife and child to the mercies of a disillusioned Hitler.

Hitler, by this move now knows that England will stretch out her hands at a straw, if she could believe for even a split second that Hess was not sent to them by Hitler.

Of Delay

As the days go by and the battle England is fighting for democracy grows steadily more serious, I cannot understand why our Government takes no decisive action. In so doing it is living up to Hitler's expectations and desires.

It is true that Mr. Roosevelt was reelected to a great extent because he promised that we would not enter the European War. But in my opinion that is only part of the reason why he was reelected. I feel that in November the people of the country felt that, although at that time it did not appear that it would be necessary for us to enter the war, events might come about which would make our aid imperative. If that happened, the people wanted to be led by a man of experience and wisdom, the experience of the last war and the wisdom acquired during eight years in the White House and during the political career which preceded it.

Although we all hate and dread war, the people of this country have never yet sacrificed their self-respect to save their skins. And in this case they wouldn't even be able to do that. I feel that we should enter the war immediately. England's constantly increasing shipping losses make it evident that she simply cannot survive without our active participation. If we declare war immediately, I am sure many of the strikers would stop clamoring for more money and would put their shoulders to the wheel quietly and with determination.

A declaration of war would, I believe, end the confusion of the people, who are in a war yet not in it, and put into active channels the energy which is now dammed up because of present confusion. Every moment that we procrastinate, we are helping Hitler. I think it's time to stop talking about "democracy" and get busy at the job of making sure there is a democracy for our children to grow up in.

MILLICENT A. MILETO.
Annapolis, Md., May 13.

The people of the United States should realize by this time that it is not a case of keeping out of war. We are actually in this war now—as we should be—and it will not be us but Hitler who will decide whether or not he will actually fight us. We could sit quietly on the side lines and watch the world blaze on, determined to "keep out of it all," but that would not insure peace. In fact that attitude would much more likely bring on actual warfare than the active part we are playing now. An indifferent nation would encourage Hitler; an aggressive nation would make him think twice before challenging it, especially if it were a very powerful one. He has more than sufficient enemies already. C. L. COLLINS.

War And Defense Aims

It is time to make a clear distinction between British and American war and defense aims. We want to crush Hitlerism and to preserve the fundamental rights of men and citizens. The British want to regain their mercantile position in Europe; they did not fight Hitlerism until it began to narrow their fields of commercial activity. Both standpoints, namely the standpoint of the idealist and the one of the profiteer, cannot be harmonized. A clear statement on war and defense aims probably will prevent useless bloodshed in an extended war.

It was with emotion that I read your editorial, "The Irish Of It." Dublin, Belfast, Dundalk. All familiar places to me. Today Dundalk looms as big in my mind as the two larger cities; naturally she got there first and I am proud of her.

About those bases, if Eire releases them. Hitler's men would come over with fury. That would mean the end of Ireland.

The Post Impressionist

Solanum Tuberosum

Although I know that Maine and Idaho are great potato States, it will always be hard for me to believe that there is any place in the world that produces more spuds than New York. Agricultural statistics tell me otherwise, but the memory of those gargantuan potato patches of my childhood, those interminable rows of awkward vines, or, later, after the tops had died down, the sere brown fields to be laboriously emptied of their tuberous burden—the memory of these is not to be eclipsed by mere fact.

Actually, of course, the patches weren't so big. Down east in Wyoming County, I was told, they really raised potatoes on a scale that would make our crop look pretty sick. I wondered who in the world could eat so many potatoes, but I had then never been to the big city whose name was the same as our State. It is hard to imagine what I would have thought had I known that there were thousands in that city who never saw a potato vine, and that some of them no doubt thought that potatoes grew on trees like apples. But all of them ate potatoes every day, and somebody had a grow them.

Potatoes were a mainstay in more ways than one. They were, to be sure, the staff of life—fried for breakfast, boiled for dinner, and warmed over for supper. But they were also a crop to bring in a little cash during the long northern winter, and cash is a commodity that on every farm has a way of running awfully low about the time of the January thaw. All winter we used to haul them to the city market, along with what other salable stuff could be assembled—winter apples, butter, "Dutch" cheese, or half a hog. Some years the potatoes brought 50 cents a bushel, other times as much as a dollar.

My father always planned to have a few new potatoes by the Fourth of July, and that meant early planting. There were some farmers who planted their potatoes "by the moon," but we were an unsuperstitious lot and planted ours regardless of any lunar oracle or astrological folderol. A certain intuitive judgment, founded very likely on the cumulative experience of a long line of potato-growers, told us, for example, that our neighbor had planted too soon, or too late. "His seed will rot in the ground," we said, or, "Lucky if Miller has new potatoes in time this year to feed to his thrashers."

There was always something to be done to potatoes. All spring they had to be kept sprouted so that they wouldn't waste away. It was a job for boys my age on Saturdays and nights after school. It was easy work. When planting time came, the seed potatoes had to be cut to make the seed go farther. It was a waste, they said, to plant a whole potato in every hill. Cutting was done with a big jackknife. You had to know how many eyes to leave in each piece. It seems that every piece had to have at least one eye left, which even to this day sounds like a logical enough principle.

The planting, which we called "dropping potatoes," since that was the part assigned to us kids, was simple enough. But after the plants had come up and the vines were 4 or 5 or more inches tall, the fun really started. One day someone would announce, "The bugs are on the potatoes!" We knew what that meant. The next day out we'd go with sticks, and row by row knock off the pesky beetle larvae into buckets. Once in a while you'd have to give the bucket a whack with the stick to keep the insects from crawling out. Later they were dispatched with boiling water.

Probably the modern farmer would, as we sometimes did then, use poison spray against the bugs. It is undoubtedly a more efficacious method, if not so picturesque, but people then were more "leery" of poison sprays than they are now. I remember one cautious old lady who refused to buy our cherries when she learned that they had been sprayed against worms. And I remember my father's rejoinder. "Well," he said, "you buy my milk, don't you? And I spray my cows against flies!"

I mention these things merely to show what a bushel of grief goes into the growing of the plebeian potato, in addition to such ordinary processes as hoeing, cultivating and digging.

Did I say plebeian? Well, perhaps. But really the potato has come up in the world considerably during the less than 400 years it has been cultivated. A writer as late as 1792 said, "As to potatoes, it would be idle to consider them in the same view as an article of human food which ninety-nine hundredths of the human species will not touch." And Dr. Johnson in his famous dictionary quotes Swift as saying, "The families of farmers live in filth and nastiness, upon buttermilk and potatoes." And Waller had this to say:

"On choicest melons and sweet grapes they dine,
And with potatoes fat their wanton swine."

Swine indeed! Nothing so well illustrates the wonders of the science of agriculture. Horticulturists say that the potato was introduced into Europe by the Spaniards from Quito, South America, about 1580. Later it was brought to North America. In 1939, I read, 360,923,000 bushels were arvest . in the United States; in Germany three times that many. Potatoes may be plebeian, but they feed the world, and we wonder what we would be eating in their place today had those ancient Spaniards been content to leave this strange special of nightshade (Solanum tuberosum as named by Linnaeus) to grow wild forever on the slopes of the Andes.

Defense Finance

By Ernest K. Lindley

New Tax Devices Needed

THE MORE the defense tax problem is examined, the more it becomes apparent that some new tax devices would be useful.

LINDLEY

One is a flexible tax on automobiles, refrigerators and other articles which compete with national defense for materials, skilled labor and machines. The automobile industry already has agreed to reduce output 20 per cent during the coming production year. But the reduction is from the exceptionally high level of this year. It is not enough, in the opinion of several Government economists connected with national defense. A secondary reduction of 20 per cent, or more, probably, will be requested or imposed.

LEON HENDERSON, OPACS Administrator, and Marriner Eccles, Federal Reserve Board Chairman, have taken the lead in advocating stiff excise taxes on articles competing with defense production. Such taxes are not necessary to reduce production. This can be done by priorities, denying the automobile industry, for example, the steel and other raw materials needed to make more than 50 or 60 per cent of this year's output. What is not produced cannot be consumed.

The excise tax on such articles becomes, rather, a convenient way of allocating among consumers the smaller supply of new automobiles. The way of classical theoretical economics would be to permit the automobile companies to raise their prices high enough to dissuade some 40 or 50 per cent of potential customers from buying new cars next year. This would put a lot of money into the treasuries of the automobile companies—some of which would be recovered by the Government through corporation taxes.

A SECOND WAY is to hold automobile prices approximately where they are but to increase the cost to the buyer by a tax. This puts more money into the Treasury and avoids other complications. A third way is to tighten or suspend installment buying of automobiles. A fourth, almost impossible of equitable enforcement, is to issue permits to buy cars to those who can establish the greatest need, by one test or another.

On the whole, a healthy excise tax, combined with stiffer terms for installment buyers, seems to be the best method of distributing the smaller supply of automobiles, or refrigerators, or what not. It is impossible, however, to calculate now by how much the output of these articles will need to be reduced. And it is impossible to calculate how much of an excise tax will be needed to balance consumption with production.

FLEXIBLE excise taxes which can be moved up or down by the Government, therefore, recommend themselves. They should apply not only to automoblies, but to many other articles which compete with national defense production. Congress could set the formula according to which the excise taxes should be moved up or down and the limits within which adjustments could be made. The flexible taxes should be administered—not by the Treasury alone—but by the Treasury in collaboration with Henderson, as head of OPACS, and perhaps one or two other agencies.

The need for a flexible extraordinary tax was set forth more than two months ago by Gerhard Colm, a fiscal expert attached to the Budget Bureau, in a public address. Mr. Colm said:

"A special extraordinary tax measure should be applied as a brake whenever purchasing power increases too much; this tax brake should be released once friction in the development of productive capacities are overcome. In other words, we would have a dormant tax power coming into action in specific conditions just long enough to correct them or restrain their effects until they are dissolved by other means. Only by equipping our financial machinery with such a device can we boldly pursue a policy of expansion and still be certain the situation will be kept in strict control."

ANOTHER new device which may be needed eventually is compulsory saving, by which a certain percentage of every wage and salary within certain ranges is paid in Treasury notes or bonds. A comparable plan has been adopted in England, along with severe income taxes. Part of the pay of middle and low income groups is deducted by employers and deposited with the government. The government opens a savings account in the worker's name and at the end of the war he is supposed to be able to withdraw his deferred pay.

Deferred pay, like a sales tax, reduces consumption generally by curtailing buying power. The big advantage of deferred pay is that it builds up a backlog of buying power to be drawn upon in the postwar period. The rate of withdrawal of the forced savings could be regulated. And so could the rate at which pay is deferred. To keep the economic system in balance a 5 per cent deferment might be needed during one six-month period and a 10 or 15 per cent deferment during the next six months.

FLEXIBLE excise taxes and compusory savings are only two of the devices which might be useful in putting our defense finance on sound basis. Perhaps neither will make much headway yet, but the fact that they are being discussed by economists in business as well as in the Government is a sign of the trend away from orthodox notions of taxation for revenue only.

Gala Occasion

YOU CAN'T tell but that this idea could be the means of financing a great part of the war effort. It popped up in an idle conversation when one guy said he would gladly pay $5 right now for a ticket to the funeral—when as and if held—of the dirtiest individual in the history of the United States, and another one said, "Why, you chiseler! You have paid as much as $25 in your time to see punk fights in the Garden, but when it comes to an occasion of national purification and rejoicing, the like of which the country has never known, you want to come in on practically a pass."

"Well, that is just a nominal figure," the first guy said, "because, even though I have held no pair for years, and it has been nothing but nickel-nickel in my life since I hate to tell you when, still I think I would be willing to save, beg or borrow as much as $100 for a ticket to this gladsome occasion and, if necessary, go out and get it with a gun. I think any American jury would acquit me on patriotic grounds, considering the motive."

"That much might get you a bleacher seat in Double Z, out by the flagpole," another guy said. "Ringside would be around a thousand bucks, and I don't know but that the demand would be so great that you could raffle off ringside seats and get a lot more. The public demand would be something fabulous, and, after all, the little guys woud feel pretty sore if they didn't have some chance of sitting down front."

AS FIRST ONE, then another guy recalled the unclean influence on American morals of the dirtiest individual in the United States, the nasty rumors about the intimate life of married people, the degradation of love, the low gossip piped out of flashy dives run by criminals, the indiscriminate lies and the sudden access of passionate patriotism in a gutter ignoramus who carried two guns and a bodyguard for fear of a slap in the face, the funeral project glowed brighter and brighter as a national service of thanksgiving and reform, attended by possibilities of a great advantage to the Treasury.

"There must be 50,000 decent newspapermen who would pay at least a couple of months' salary to celebrate the cleansing of the profession," one guy said, "and every respectable woman would want to be there to realize that henceforth she could have a baby in decent privacy. And how about the hundreds of thousands of people who would rejoice in the fact that they could now go to a hotel or a restaurant without feeling that some bellhop was spying through a keyhole or frisking their private papers for information to sell about their private life or that some waiter was running straight to the gents' room to report their personal conversation? Or that some slimy sneak of a press agent for the hotel or night club was telephoning dirty whispers about them for publication in return for a mention of the place? I tell you this would be a colossal funeral. It would be a national celebration."

"WE COULD take it on the road," another guy said. "After all, they took Lincoln and Harding on the road, but that was mourning. This would be a national fete. People would feel that the country had been relieved of something shameful to the American character and a source of spiritual, moral and cultural pollution which had degraded them insidiously. Chicago should be good for a week's play twice a day in Soldier Field, and you have a big, clean American population on the Pacific Coast that would book the attraction solid for months. All the decent Americans would go for it."

"But," said another guy, "it might not happen for years."

"That would be all the better," the first guy said. "It would give more time for the build-up. People would buy tickets and leave them to their heirs, but the Government would get the money now for war financing, and no obligation to pay it back. But I would not want to take a chance on the Yankee Stadium for the premiere. That holds only 80,000, and your overflow would tear down the joint. You would have to get some airport where you could handle around 500,000 head. I will bet plenty of decent American business firms would bid their heads off for the radio rights."

"Well," said the guy who had the original idea, "it looks like I dig up a wonderful thought and then it gets so big I can't get within half a mile of it. I'll probably be behind a stanchion in the next county, but I will be there. That is one that the United States Marines can't keep me away from, if I live."

Washington Scene

By Mark Sullivan

The Increasing Divisions In Thought

IF YOU ATTEMPT to picture this Washington scene in the simplest possible terms, you might divide it into two fields—one, our progress toward war; the other, our progress toward a changed form of society, which, if it comes about, would lead inevitably to a changed relation of the branches of Government to each other, including greatly increased power in the Executive. This division into two fields is, of course, far too simple; but it may serve as an artificial device for clarity.

SULLIVAN

As respects progress toward war, it is not fast, but it moves, and it goes on over a wide front. Further steps toward an increased degree of intervention are advocated, in differing degrees, in public addresses by the three Cabinet members most concerned with foreign relations—Mr. Hull of State, Mr. Stimson of War, Mr. Knox of the Navy. Messrs. Stimson and Knox, heads of the two armed forces, go farther in their advocacy of increased action than Mr. Hull. A fourth Cabinet member, Mr. Wickard of Agriculture, makes public addresses advocating increased action. Presumably Mr. Wickard's addresses are supposed to be persuasive with farmers, a class which is not, as a rule, sympathetic toward further intervention. The American Ambassador to London, Mr. Winant, makes public statements advocating further intervention. Mrs. Roosevelt publicly states that the President never made any promise to keep America out of war. (This statement, incidentally, is seriously incorrect.)

IT GOES without saying that persons so close to the President would not take steps so important if they felt that their chief would disapprove them. A common assumption is that these things are done at the instigation of the President, as a build-up preparing the public for action by him later on. This might be. Yet the fact is, persons in Washington, outside the President's official circle, who most wish for participation in the war by America, do not feel confident that the President is with them at this time.

They speak peevishly about him, complain that he is relying too much on his art of estimating public opinion, and on his sense of timing. They admit that in the past the President has been successful in this sort of thing; but they add that in the present case there is not merely the factor of time, but the factor of Hitler. They argue that if Mr. Roosevelt waits until the time when public opinion is sufficiently favorable, Hitler may, in the meantime, have done that which would make Mr. Roosevelt's action too late. The ardent interventionists want Mr. Roosevelt to, as they put it, "lead public opinion"—meaning, that he should come out for greater intervention, and trust his action in doing this to itself bring about a sufficient support by public opinion.

AS TO THE other broad field in which important actions take place and strong tides run, the change in our form of society, all the conditions favor those who wish change brought about. In the organization of the country's industrial activities and resources for war purposes, there are two groups. One consists of businessmen, experienced in the organization of industry and in the art of management. The other consists of New Dealers who have long been here. Between the two groups there is struggle.

The businessmen wish to organize the country's industrial structure for the greatest possible efficiency in war—yet at the same time in such a way as to leave it possible, after the war effort is over, to go back to the familiar pattern of private ownership of industry. Some, at least, of the more radical New Dealers either ignore what may happen after the war effort is over, or in some cases perhaps wish consciously to set up the defense organization of industry in such a way as to have, after the war effort is over, a more or less collectivist or socialist framework.

AS BETWEEN the two groups, the New Dealers almost invariably win. Their great leverage is their influence with the President. In the key places where policy is made, they either have their own men or have men equal in power to the business chiefs, or have able and alert subordinates to see that the working out of policies does not operate against what they wish.

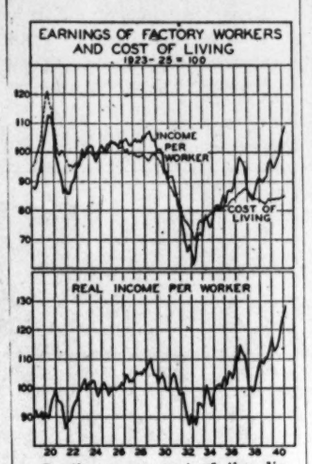
Most of this struggle goes on outside Congress. So far as Congress affects it, the disposition of that body is to check the New Dealers. Congress knows that the pattern toward which the New Dealers work would result in a great increase of power in the Presidency and the executive departments under the Presidency. To check this, Congress is always watchful. It put a time limit of some two years on the powers granted the President under the lease-lend bill and provided further that Congress could end the powers at any time by its own action. When an additional office was set up in the War Department, Congress provided that the new office should exist for the period of the defense emergency only. But again and again Congress is persuaded out of steps of this sort by the plea that limitations set up by them might result in awkwardness in the conduct of the defense effort.

Wage Earnings

(Reproduced by permission of the Cleveland Trust Co. Business Bulletin.)

Rising Incomes

THE STANDARD of living of the average factory worker now is substantially higher than it has been in any previous period. Data published by Federal statistical agencies in Washington show the monthly earnings of factory workers each month since the World War. The National Industrial Conference Board publishes monthly figures of the cost of living in wage-earning families for this same period. In both indexes the average for 1923-25 equals 100. By dividing the series of monthly earnings by the data of the cost of living, an index is derived that measures the volume of the necessities and amenities of life that the factory worker could have purchased in each month since January of 1919. This index reflects the real income per worker, or the changing standard of living of these employes, during the last 22 years.



In the upper part of the diagram the heavy solid line shows monthly changes since 1919 in the pay-roll disbursement per factory worker. The dashed line shows the monthly changes in the cost of living. It is noteworthy that at the peak in 1920 the cost of living was nearly 10 per cent higher than the pay per worker, but in 1929 the relationship was reversed and the cost of living line was 10 per cent lower than the income line. The two lines move together fairly well up to 1938. In the last three years, however, earnings per worker have increased 28 per cent while the cost of living has remained almost unchanged.

IN THE LOWER section of the diagram the irregular line shows the real income per worker. The best test of income is its purchasing power. When earnings are adjusted for the cost of living the purchasing power of current earnings of factory workers is 12 per cent higher than the 1937 peak, 17 per cent higher than the 1929 peak and 30 per cent higher than the 1920 peak. The rising trend of real income shows the factory workers have participated in the benefits that resulted from the growth and increased efficiency of our manufacturing industry in the last two decades.

It is interesting to note that the average pay of factory workers in February was at the highest level since 1920. It is only 5 per cent below the peak month of the World War period of exceptionally high prices. Basic hourly rates of pay have increased substantially more in recent years than have monthly earnings. The average number of hours worked per week is now about 20 per cent smaller than it was prior to the great depression. Monthly earnings in recent months have been substantially boosted by increased overtime payments of hours worked in excess of the basic 40-hour week. The number of workers now employed in factories is larger than ever before.

The French Tragedy

By Barnet Nover

Darlan Sells The Pass

THE STORY of Rudolf Hess and his flight to Scotland beggars the imagination. But it is no more fantastic than other things that have been happening in the world. Consider, for instance, the deal which the Vichy government has just made with Hitler.

NOVER

It is best told, perhaps, in the form of a parable.

A rich man's house is broken into by a bandit. The occupant, a man known and respected for his high ideals and distinguished record, is beaten unmercifully by the intruder, who also robs him of his purse, deprives him of most of his food, clothing and furniture, and makes the house headquarters for raids on the rich man's friendly neighbor.

THE RICH MAN has a chance to escape to continue with his neighbor the strugggle against the bandit. He does not choose to do so. Instead, he pleads with the bandit for permission to let him stay on in the house. The bandit readily agrees and assigns to his victim a couple of rooms in the attic. In return, the bandit holds the rich man for ransom. He can thus get at the rich man's assets that are in safe hiding away from the house. Each day the rich man writes a check for a very large sum by way of tribute. The exactions become increasingly onerous. The rich man's living conditions get worse and worse. The bandit is a hard taskmaster, diabolically ingenious in the invention and application of physical and mental tortures he practices on his victim.

Finally, the bandit, in what he wants the rich man to believe is a show of generosity, agrees to give his victim another room, a sandwich and a cuff link. Overwhelmed, the rich man agrees in return to become a member of the bandit's gang and join in the assault on the neighbor.

THE STORY is incredible. But it happens to be true. It is the story of France and Germany in the period between the collapse of the French army and the approval by the Vichy regime of the Hitler-Darlan agreement.

When the majority of the last republican cabinet in France overruled the wishes of the courageous and far-sighted minority and agreed to conclude an armistice with Germany whereby a corner of France would not be occupied by Nazi troops, they placed a noose around the neck of France and gave the rope ends to Hitler.

France could have followed the example set by Poland, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium. The fleet and empire were intact. Had these been thrown into the scales on Britain's side, the Mediterranean picture today would be far different from what it is. With French North Africa as a base, Libya could have been swept clean of Italians long ago; Italy herself would in all probability have been knocked out of the war; there might have been no Italian and German invasion of Greece, and if there had been anyway, the army which Weygand had assembled in the Near East might have made all the difference between victory and defeat.

THE PETAINS, the Darlans, the Lavals would not have it that way, however. They thought France could clear out of the fight and nurse her wounds in peace. The possession of the fleet, the presence of an army in North Africa placed in their hands, they believed, a card they could play if the Nazis became too demanding. That proved an illusion. And slowly but steadily Hitler and his French Quislings sapped the stamina and moral fiber of the men of Vichy.

For a time Petain resisted. But Petain is an octogenarian. And having jailed all the men who had shown a disposition to continue the fight against Germany he has from the outset perforce been surrounded by men who were either out-and-out pro-Nazis, like Laval, or Darlan, or men who, like himself, were prisoners of the tragic miscalculation that because France fell Great Britain would soon fall, too. Now even he has capitulated. But having put his signature to an agreement which constitutes one of the most shameful pages in French history he dare not tell his people the truth. All he dared say to them is that "it is no longer up to public opinion, often worried because ill-informed, to weigh our chances, measure our risks, judge our actions. It is up to you, the French, to follow me without mental reservations on the road of honor and of national interest."

The road of honor! France fighting for her life was stabbed in the back by Mussolini. Great Britain, fighting not only for her life but for the life of France and of civilization, is being stabbed in the back by the men of Vichy.

WE HAVE NOT yet been vouchsafed the terms of the Hitler-Darlan agreement. We probably will not know them until after they have been carried out. But there appears to be no doubt whatever that France has now agreed to "collaborate" with Hitler not only in the economic sphere (such collaboration has been taking place for a long time) but also in the sphere of politics, which means in making war on Great Britain. And it does not much matter whether such participation on Germany's side is active or passive. The possession of bases on the French Mediterranean coast, the right to send planes and tanks and men through Syria, and to Iraq and French North Africa to Dakar, possibly the transfer of portions of the French fleet to Hitler—that will be enough for the Third Reich at the moment.

In return for this betrayal of Great Britain what will Vichy get? The reports have it that Hitler will agree to reduce the costs of the army of occupation, release perhaps a quarter of a million of the million and a half French prisoners in Germany, permit the Vichy regime to move to Paris, ease the present restrictions on traffic between occupied and unoccupied France and perhaps cede to Vichy additional territory now garrisoned by Nazi troops.

Petain hasn't taken the French people into his confidence or consulted their wishes. He did not do so because he didn't dare. Since they are being betrayed, since their deepest feelings are certain to be controlled by what is about to happen, they must first be presented with an accomplished fact. The men who murdered the French republic are now flinging France's honor, too, into the grave.

The Gallup Poll

21% Desire U. S. War Entrance Now; Florida Most in Favor, Wisconsin Least So

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 15.—On the question of immediate United States entrance into the European War, Wisconsin emerges today as the most "isolationist" State in the Union and Florida as the most interventionist," a Nation-wide study by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates.

In Wisconsin, which is represented in Washington today by Senator Robert M. La Follette, Institute surveys find only 14 per cent—or about one person in seven—in favor of immediate United States entrance.

There is something of an historic echo in this Wisconsin vote, for it was Wisconsin's elder La Follette who staged a 17-hour filibuster against war in the United States Senate 24 years ago.

Most "Warlike" State

In Florida, however, the survey finds 35 per cent in favor of American entrance into the war at this time. Florida is not only the home of the "interventionist" Senator Claude Pepper but it is also the State nearest the Panama Canal and the strategic Caribbean and South Atlantic areas.

The Institute's findings are based on a series of studies of war sentiment which were begun in the first weeks of the war, and which have been brought up to date as of the end of the first week in May.

Analysis of more than 30,000 interviews with voters in all parts of the United States reveals that, in general, the number who favor immediate United States entrance are most numerous in the Southern States and in the Rocky Mountain area, while the largest proportions opposed to entrance now are in the Midwest and in some of the New England States.

The question was:

"If you were asked to vote today on the question of the United States entering the war against Germany and Italy, how would you vote—to go into the war or to stay out of the war?"

The State-by-State answers were:

War Initiative Opposed

The national totals show a great majority of Americans still opposed to taking the war initiative at this time, despite a slight increase in war sentiment in the last 60 days.

The following figures show the national trend since the Battle of the Balkans, with replies limited to those with definite opinions. In each case approximate 1 person in 20 had no opinion or was undecided:

March (before Balkan campaign)	17%	83%
April (during Balkan campaign)	19	81
May (after Balkans)	21	79

In every State but Wisconsin, the Institute has found majorities holding the belief that it is more important for the United States to aid Britain "even at the risk of getting into the war," than to concentrate on staying out of war.

Sea Roads Named After Roosevelt

Acting Secretary of the Navy Bard announced yesterday that the waters lying between Puerto Rico and Vieques Island had been named Roosevelt Roads.

The sea area is being developed by a protected anchorage for the entire United States fleet under a $40,000,000 appropriation.

Navy Seeks to Buy Bennett Airport

The Navy asked Congress yesterday for authority to buy the Floyd Bennett Airport, Long Island, New York, and some additional adjacent acreage.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Ralph A. Bard, said in a letter to Speaker Rayburn that the 379 acres of the airport and 250 additional acres fronting on Jamaica Bay were "essential" for the Navy's land plane training and for seaplane facilities needed in connection with the Atlantic patrol.

At the same time, the Navy asked for authority to buy 928 acres in Manchester and Jackson Townships, Ocean County, N. J., for use in connection with the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J.

G. U. Will Honor Dr. Ruiz-Guinazu

Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, foreign minister of Argentina, will receive an honorary degree of doctor of laws this afternoon from Georgetown University.

The degree will be conferred by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president, when the Argentine official pays an informal visit to the oldest Catholic school in this country.

The university directors are extending the honor as a token of Georgetown's friendship toward Latin America and also in recognition of Dr. Ruiz-Guinazu's services as former Argentine Ambassador to the Vatican.

A playwright who has suffered misfortunes telephoned a noted producer and asked for a chance to see him this week . . . "Wait, I want to look at my calendar of appointments," said the producer—and began turning the pages, muttering: "First week in May—tied up; all of the second week . . . all tied up the third" . . . "I'm sorry," he finally told the playwright, "but I have so many engagements on my calendar—I can see you on the morning of June 7" . . . The playwright hesitated and said, "I can't make it June 7" . . . "Why not?" asked the producer . . . "On June 7," was the explanation, "I've got to go to a funeral."

Two hunderd antique silver miniatures are being exhibited at the James Robinson galleries here, for Britain's War Relief. They were made in the seventeenth century, as furnishings for children's doll houses. One of the items is a tiny whisky still—consisting of stand, oven and tank . . . Four of last week's front-page stories—the FCC order that NBC dispose of its Blue Network; Jimmy Roosevelt's visit to Chiang Kai-shek; the indictment of officers of Esquire magazine; and the President's appointment of Federal Judge John Bright—appeared here May 2, April 7, April 12 and May 2 . . . When an American offered his sympathies, Pladner's cousin said: "The way France is today, perhaps the Spider is better off, not to be able to see it."

Leland Stowe, the foreign correspondent, relates this Bucharest incident: Clare Hollingsworth, the English writer, was residing at one of the hotels there, when the Iron Guard revolted, and flamed the Balkans into war . . . The Iron Guardsmen started rounding up all the British residents. They came to the room where Miss Hollingsworth was sleeping, told her she was under arrest, and ordered her to accompany them . . . Miss Hollingsworth tore off her dressing robe and nightgown. "If you want me to go with you," she told them, "you'll have to drag me as I am" . . . The Iron Guardsmen clicked their heels—and left.

The Senator answered: "No. He's walking around the walls, though."

ENTERPRISE—When Ferenc Molnar, the Hungarian playwright, came to this country he brought very few of his possessions with him—for he wanted no encounter with the customs men. But he secreted one small package on his person—a package containing some items he had acquired in Budapest and which he thought irreplaceable. The package contained 150 razor blades.

George White's "Scandals" will open, as usual, in Atlantic City, during the week following Labor Day.

Bob Hope and BingCrosby Still Toss 'Road to Zanzibar' Gags

Zanzibar-bound out of Singapore, those doughty lads, Bob Hope and Bing Crosby continue for a second week at the Palace in their latest assaults on things serious. This time it's the "Road to Zanzibar" the boys are traveling, with Dorothy Lamour and Una Merkel along as not so good companions.

One of the little customs—of the very rich, to be sure, but still a hoary custom—Hope and Crosby genially destroy is that of the "safari." Those fabulous jaunts of the leisure classes through hidden jungles, guided by grunting natives, with all the niceties of "civilization" neatly attended to can never be the same again—at least on celluloid. In the manner of the serious travelogues a dotted line follows them through the heart of Africa and what a course that dotted line pursues. The entire safari is wondrous funny.

The surprise twists characteristic of the Hope humor brighten the film, just as they did the "Road to Singapore" film and Hope's Tuesday broadcasts. Once again the two play amiable young Americans on the loose. Tent shows and carnivals in the Dark Continent are their livelihood and don't fail to relish the sight of the "freaks" crowd into a tent to watch the fearless Americans at their strange works: "Fearless" Hope is blown out of a cannon, is the electrical man and preps at all sorts of tricks for a life-death struggle with the ape of a cannibal colony.

It would hardly be sporting to lift any of Hope gags. Some of the settings he finds himself in for them, though, include crossing an Africa stream, entering a native drum chamber for an unrestrained jam session, locating a superb snake in bed and uttering a solemn elegy at the grave of Dorothy Lamour.

All of which adds up to a catalogue of virtues which the Hope-Crosby fans will understand and appreciate. All is much in the style of the immensely amusing "Road to Singapore" and it's safe assumption that those who laughed at the first will be laughing at this one.

Also on the Palace screen is an indication of the sensible road the short subjects have been taking of late. This one is a two-reeler with Paul Kelly and Victor Killian in two of the three roles. Titled "The Happiest Man on Earth," it is adapted from one of the O. Henry Memorial short stories and tells its story in dialogue alone in but one setting, a definite weakness for the pictorial medium, yet so promising a departure from the usual piffle of short subjects makes it vastly entertaining. If its ending seems indeterminate, remember it is in the manner of the modern short story, a slice of life with the gaps left open for the audience to fill in with its own experience.

Again British Mystery Rates Little Holdover

L'Affaire Hess only substantiates the Britisher's uncanny ability to become mixed in a mystery. While the empire defenders ponder the mazes of the week's most fascinating development, the British picture makers are doubtless thinking up their latest tricks for suspense in celluloid; one of their more surprising successes in this metier, "The Girl in the News," has entered its second week at the Little, following the path both stars and director made at the same theater in "Night Train."

Unlike the Hessian intrigue of fact, this fiction explores the channels of circumstantial evidence. By chance a young nurse is wrongfully involved in the death-by-too-many-sleeping-pills of an elderly employer. A suave butler spins the web of circumstances about her for another and with it the makings of a first-rate suspense yarn.

Margaret Lockwood is the nurse over whose head such dire fates swarm. Experienced in such hair-breadth escapades from "The Lady Vanishes" and "Night Train," this most attractive brunette is subtly skilled in her portrayal, while Director Carol Reed of "N.T." is immensely resourceful in his telling of a story that's not exactly new. His problem is to make it seem new and new it all seems.

How does Director Reed do this? Best example of all are his slowly deliberate courtroom sequences. The villain ambles freely about the halls of justice and the camera follows him tensely. The ceremonials of British justice are leisurely followed while the fate of a woman's life waits its turn. One of those dry judges—at whom American pictures are also skilled in portraying—remarks to an overly wordy witness: "If you can contrive to be less verbose, do so, doctor, do so."

Barry K. Barnes tops the efficient all-Blitzed supporting cast. He's the lawyer who believes in her, a pleasant chap who isn't a trifle stuffy. Completing the Little bill is a smacking camera dissection of the volcanic "Krakatoa."

Defy Omens, Jinx Still Strikes

Director Albert Rogell and his principals of "The Black Cat" are joining forces in one large, collective worry.

When the Universal picture started, they all agreed that it was just to sneer and scoff at superstition. With great glee and gusto, much bedlam and breakage, they went about crashing mirrors, throwing hats on the bed, whistling in dressing rooms, etc.

It was fun, but this is what's happened since:

Monday: Brod Crawford conked himself on the head of a jutting set beam, but good. Gale Sondergaard's car was marooned in the rain waters and they had to send a studio machine after her. It was marooned, too. They had to send tow cars to pull them both out.

Tuesday: Basil Rathbone got his finger slammed in a door so emphatically the digit required first aid attention.

Wednesday: The company had been waiting five days for one hour's shooting in the sun. It rained again.

Thursday: It rained again.

Friday: For days, Anne Gwynne had been waiting to wear the dripping lingerie ensemble Vera West especially designed for Anne to use in a bedroom scene. It took the wardrobe girl, the make-up expert and the hairdresser a good two hours to get Anne all dolled up in it. On her way from the dressing room to the stage someone stepped on the train by accident and ripped the whole thing. They changed the scene so that she wore a conventional dressing gown.

Saturday: It rained.

Gold Mine Found In Bette's Cactus

A Death Valley prospector has found gold in them thar cactus bristles that Bette Davis sat on.

He has been peddling cactus spines to tourists as "the genuine bristles that were removed from the person of Miss Davis while she was making a picture here."

Word of the enterprise came to Hollywood when Warner Brothers, producers of "The Bride Came C. O. D.," which Miss Davis was making when she sat on the cactus, received a letter from Edwin Strong, of Death Valley, asking if the bristles were genuine.

After Miss Davis' embarrassing mishap, 47 spines were removed by a doctor. None are in circulation.

Bashful Boy

Edward Everett Horton has supplied laughs to many screen offerings. His latest role is as John Carroll's bashful friend in "Sunny," Anna Neagle's new starring film, which also features Ray Bolger and the dancing Hartmans.

Pampas Filmusical

Hailed as a brilliantly entertaining picture as well as the first authentic film of Argentine life, "They Met in Argentina," stars Maureen O'Hara and James Ellison in a tuneful romance of the Pampas country directed by Les Goodwins.

'That Uncertain Feeling' Retains Lubitsch 'Touch'

Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas, Burgess Meredith Lift Capitol Film to 'Sophisticated' Heights; Marvelous Salici Puppets Top the Stage Bill

AMONG THE DIRECTORS of socalled "sophisticated" comedy, Ernst Lubitsch has no equal. In the long list of his film frolics of this character, "That Uncertain Feeling," disclosed yesterday for the first time in Washington on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, has many equals and a few superiors, but it still is one of the smartest, sprightliest and, at times, subtlest illuminations of the old, familiar, domestic "triangle" that has come along in recent months. It is opulently mounted and played with fine skill.

BELL

The basis of the fable, which Donald Ogden Stewart has fashioned so adroitly from a foreign original, is what usually is described as flagrantly "sexy." Larry Baker, a successful insurance executive, is kept so busy writing out those imposing policies during the day that he is of slight romantic interest to his wife, Jill, when he returns home in the evening. Her consequent nervous disturbances manifest themselves in the form of paroxysms of hiccoughs. So she goes to a psychoanalyst, of all people, to find out what it is that ails her. In his office, on a second visit, she encounters a thoroughly unpolished young misanthrope, who turns out to be one of the world's great concert pianists. He has a fine contempt for life and mankind in his heart. It does not, however, include Mrs. Jill Baker, of what the picture magazines describe as "The Happy Bakers." There you have the genesis of the social complications that Mr. Stewart and Mr. Lubitsch have woven into a carnival of lively dialogue, bizarre situations and a slightly fantastic contemplation of the marital state—or is it only a county or township?

Is Not Unfailingly Funny

Mr. Lubitsch, in this one, has gone to some pains to attenuate his comedy. Many of the brightest passages in the play are dragged in for no better reason than to afford a laugh, without regard to the directness or dramatic integrity of a story that might have been told in less time with less circumlocution.

The three principal protagonists of Mr. Stewart's charade have been chosen with admirable discretion. Melvyn Douglas has long since proved his proficiency in the enactment of roles of such baffled young husbands as are represented by his Larry Baker. It is not a certainty that so acute an insurance man could have been such a dullard as a husband, but the acceptable premise makes for good fun. Merle Oberon, as the hiccoughy wife, contributes one of the most engaging light comedy performances she ever has brought to the screen, and Burgess Meredith was a perfect selection for the role of the brilliant young artist who barged in where angels with whiter wings assuredly would have feared to tread.

There are numerous others in the cast whose portrayals add appreciably to the rounded and beautifully balanced effect of a screen diversion devised for no other purpose than to supply an interval of adult amusement. Foremost among these are Harry Davenport, as the elderly lawyer, whose schemes do not always work; Alan Mowbray, as the suave mental physician, whose diagnoses do not always prove bullet-proof, either; Olive Blakeney, as the social gossip, Marie Stallings; Eve Arden, as a nonplused secretary to Mr. Davenport, and Richard Carle, as an understanding butler. One of the most hilariously funny scenes in the picture is that of the dinner party tossed by Mr. Baker in honor of a group of prospective Hungarian clients. Sig Rumann, as Mr. Kofka, has a great deal to do with the comic success of this interlude.

Salici Puppets Top Stage Bill

The off-screen features of the new Capitol bill are notable. They begin with Mr. Kaufman's "Echoes of the East" overture, during which Sharma, an East Indian barytone, reveals an extraordinarily interesting voice, dedicated almost exclusively to fortissimos, in two of the always-welcome "Indian Love Lyrics"—"Pale Hands" and "Till I Awake." Art Brown comes along then with his baiting of the vocal customers and, after that, the stage show. Not addicted to the tricky art of the puppeteer, this department still must admit that the Salici Puppets have no peer in the modern theater. Their act is a marvel of coordination and vocal and comic artistry. Bea Saxton, inflammatory blonde songstress, comes next on the list with Don Rice clowning his way to a personal hit by methods that are not always as discreet as they should be. The Rhythm Rockets, of course, are in and out of there to complete a bill that the literate public should find to its liking.

The Principals in Frank Capra's Newest Picture

Columbia

The once happy French have a phrase—"quelque chose"—meaning something. With Gallic charm it is applied to most everything, but in its most general form it is followed by a sigh. And frequently preceded by a girl. And the Gallic gallants would have been kept busy "poussering soupirs" and "quelque choses" over the 1941 beauties now on the Columbia screen in "Ziegfeld Girl."

All of which is one more attempt to define the feminine allure that is so graceful a bulwark for a musical film which already has had its fortnight on F Street. With Lana Turner, Hedy Lamarr and Judy Garland to play the most focussed-upon ladies of the ensemble, the film is prescribed for that species once called "The Tired Businessman."

Though Ziggy the great has passed on, the T. B. M. never will and that is why such glorious collections of beauties as "Ziegfeld Girl" contains are amassed. They're all eye-catchers in this one.

Though filmed by the same company which made "The Great Ziegfeld" (M-G-M), the new film differs from the earlier one in that the great glorifier does not appear. The story is concerned with three of the girls to whom he brought fame; consequently those who were familiar with the colorful producer are not harassed by finding flaws in surface or character similarities. The girls have their boy friends, though, among them James Stewart, Tony Martin and Jackie Cooper, with fun from Charles Winninger as "Gallagher" to Al Shean's Shean and Edward Everett Horton.

Metropolitan

Like the buffoons who would play Hamlet, the stars of those madcap comedies, "The Awful Truth" and "My Favorite Wife," to name but two, have their innings at the somber in "Penny Serenade." Irene Dunne and Cary Grant are the pace-changers in question, and the fact that Johnny Q. Public isn't upset by the reversal is attested by two weeks at the Earle followed by an extra stanza beginning this morning at the Metropolitan.

So complete a reversal from their previous costarring vehicle is "Penny Serenade" that this highly sentimental drama seems consciously trying to relieve the harum-scarum cycle those earlier films launched. This time they are husband and wife, with no doubts attached. A disaster far from home robs them of their baby, and when they adopt another youngster similar catastrophe follows.

Music is important to "Penny Serenade." The phonograph records, which Miss Dunne sells at the beginning of the film, when she is a clerk in a music department, follow their scenes throughout the story and conjure memories with shrewd effect. Director George Stevens tells his romance with leisurely pace, emphasizing further the contrast between this picture and those the stars have previously filmed.

The erstwhile farceurs are ably convincing in their all-important roles, getting adequate support from a company whose names, with the exception of Beulah Bondi, are not theatrical bywords. Miss Bondi is agreeable as an adoption agency's director and Edgar Bunchanan is the amiable family friend. While the starring duo is blessed with a bright baby, it's an offspring that's a trifle too much in front of the camera. But such sentiment is in the style of "Penny Serenade."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 15 (INS).—Dalton Trumbo's controversial book, "The Remarkable Andrew," bought several months ago, will at last be filmed. Never has there been a current novel or play that has been so discussed and so often postponed. Paramount was rumored to have sold it after it seemed too politically dangerous for filming. Buddy de Sylva, who has pulled many other chestnuts out of the fire, has now invited Trumbo to write the adaptation.

PARSONS

If the next Hardy movie does as much for Pat Dane as it did for Kathryn Grayson, that young lady will be set for life. She checked in today, with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland and Mickey's "Hardy Family," Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Ann Rutherford, in the biggest part yet given her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Mabel Gillis, mother of cute little red-headed Ann, was married Sunday to Alan Lowell Marston; Jacqueline Dalya denies that she and Bill Conselman, jr., have had any matrimonial troubles and are occupying separate apartments; Tony Martin was at the airport to Kiss Lana Turner goodby when she flew to Estes Park to take some pictures for the Government; Buddy Westmore is now dating Betty Asher.

Jean Gabin and Marlene Dietrich engrossed in each other at a table for two at the Mocambo. Al Bloomingdale, who came out here to see Simone Simon, sitting at a nearby table; the Paul Munis leave at the end of the week for New York and Paul says it is for good; Norma Shearer, Jock Whitney, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Y. Frank Freeman have been selected as the hosts for the Navy dinner at Ciro's Saturday night. Earlier in the day M-G-M is giving the Navy bigwigs a luncheon.

Rita Hayworth, looking awfully cute in her rehearsal shorts, buying an ice cream soda at the drugstore in Cowboy Gulch (corner of Sunset and Gower); the gorgeous emeralds Dan Topping gave Sonja Henie are being made into a necklace and matching bracelet.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 15.

The Kid (and I don't mean "Billy"—he had to use guns)—I'm speaking about "Kid" Orson Kane—has finally arrived.

HOPPER

And the boy who was spat upon, jeered and ridiculed, has made the town swallow its words. That's the reason—and not the heat—there's so much indigestion in town. He's now our eight-star man. Four's been our graduating mark to date. He got four for "Kane" (I won't tell you about the other things he got for it), four for "Native Son." So we're hailing "King Kane," who's living up to his own publicity—terrific!

No, Hedy Lamarr didn't get that salary boost which she would have if she'd done "The Uniform" with Clark Gable. The studio and some others think she should have been suspended for turning him down. Don't worry, Hedy, it will all come out in the wash—and gold dust with it!

If golf courses throughout the country could book Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire, Randy Scott and Fred MacMurray for tournaments, they wouldn't have to give benefits. Routines between Fred and Bing are funnier than anything you'll get in the theaters.

Quick, Marie! The velvet choker! On second thought, I'll choke her myself! . . . Speaking about hair, I counted 18 varieties of whiskers in "The Bad Men of Missouri" set. Edmund Gwenn observes that while Hollywood women take their husbands for better or worse, they don't usually take them for long.

Nice of Pat O'Brien showing up on request for the Warners' workmen party, when none of the top executives came. In addressing the workers, Pat said, "I'm not under contract to this studio, but I'm under contract to all of you boys."

"The model marriage," says Curt Bois, "is the one in which the wife is a treasure and the husband the treasury."

When Rouben Mamoulian was directing "Blood and Sand," he advised the technical staff that a certain scene between Ty Power and Linda Darnell, which took place after Ty's death in a chapel, should have an El Greco atmosphere. The technical director came back and said, "I've gone through all the list of authorities on bull fighting and could find no mention of El Greco."

Mason Is Reported to Claim Faking Eleanor Dare Stones

By the United Press

Gainesville, Ga., May 15—Dr. H. J. Pearce, jr., vice president of Brenau College, today announced that authenticity of the Eleanor Dare stones, supposedly left by the "lost colony" of Roanoke Island 350 years ago, had been obscured by a stone mason's claim that he had faked them.

Pearce charged that the mason, William Eberhart, of Atlanta, had threatened to tell the Saturday Evening Post, which recently published an article on the Dare stones, that they were fakes unless he was paid $200.

Eberhart, in Atlanta, denied having admitted he had faked the stones or having asked any member of the Pearce family for money. He was instrumental in discovery of most of the 48 Dare stones now in a collection at Brenau. The stone mason said members of the Pearce family had told him where to look for the stones.

The vice president of the college and his parents, Dr. H. J. Pearce, sr., president of Brenau, and Mrs. Pearce have been collecting the Dare stones for four years.

Young Pearce, in a formal statement, said he and his parents did not believe Eberhart "faked all the 48 stones."

Pearce said Eberhart recently tried to sell him a forty-ninth stone which the college vice president and Prof. Count Gibson, Georgia Tech geologist, concluded was a fake.

Eberhart said that a few weeks ago he found and showed to Mrs. Pearce still another stone, upon which was carved:

"Pearce and Dare historical hoax. Our motto is—We dare anything."

This stone, Eberhart said, was stolen from under his bed in his cabin on the outskirts of Atlanta.

Gibson said he had recently examined again several of the stones at Brenau and still believed they were authentic.

Federal Aid Urged for D. C. Highway Plan

Voting approval of the major objectives of the highway and bridge improvement program outlined by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, the advisory board of the American Automobile Association in an executive meeting held yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel took strong exception to two proposed features of the report.

The board objected to saddling the entire cost of the program on the shoulders of D. C. motorists, contending that the Federal Government should pay a substantial portion of the costs and that the gasoline tax should not be increased by more than 1 cent.

The board criticized failure of the report to include plans for dealing with the downtown parking problem as a "negative attitude" and urged continued study of this problem.

The boards' action yesterday was based on a special report prepared following a recent joint meeting of the highway and bridges committee, the traffic and parking committee, and the taxation committee. The committees were unanimous in the belief that the highway facilities are needed.

Viewpoint of the A. A. A. on the Whitehurst program will be presented at a hearing before the District Commissioners scheduled for May 30.

Burko Cleared Of Conspiracy After 57 Hours

out a hearing on the charges against him.

Defense Attorney Laughlin announced last night that he would undertake immediate proceedings for his client's reinstatement with back pay.

The trial began Wednesday, May 7, and the jury started its long deliberation—one of the longest here in recent years—at 10:49 a. m. Tuesday, May 13.

BURKO

Hope that an agreement would be reached arose yesterday, after the jury had been locked up tonight, when the jurors filed into court to receive further instructions.

Foreman Amos E. Heath, 41, a salesmanager, cautioned by Justice Letts not to give any hint of the jury's action up to that point, told the court that more than a dozen ballots had been taken, the last five showing no change in the voting.

Justice Letts then slowly read to the jurors the "Allen charge," instructing the minority to listen to the colleagues with a disposition to be convinced and to reexamine their own convictions for mistakes.

Victor Kauffman Left Estate Of $910,000 to Widow, 2 Sons

Victor Kauffmann, treasurer and Sunday editor of the Evening Star, disposed of a $910,000 estate in his will, which was filed for probate at the District Court yesterday.

Named executors were the widow, Mrs. Jessie Christopher Kauffmann, and Samuel H. Kauffmann, a son. Their petition for letters of administration was filed by the law firm of Hamilton & Hamilton.

The bulk of the estate was given to Samuel H. Kauffmann and Attorney George E. Hamilton, jr., as trustees, with the usual powers, except that the will forbade them to resell Mr. Kauffmann's stock in the Star Publishing Co. unless they were participating in a sale agreed on by holders of a majority of the company's stock.

The trustees were directed to pay income from two shares of the Star stock to Samuel H. Kauffmann, or his descendants, income from two shares of Star stock to another son, Philip C. Kauffmann, and the remainder of the trust income for the widow.

Upon Mrs. Kauffmann's death, the trustees were directed to pay $50,000 of the principal (excluding the Star stock) to Samuel H. Kauffmann and to divide the rest (except the stock) equally among Samuel H. and Philip C. KaKuffmann, or their descendants if only one was alive.

The trustees were directed to continue to hold the Star stock until both sons were dead, paying Philip C. Kauffmann 8/15 of the income and Samuel H. Kauffmann 7/15 of the income. Upon the death of both sons the trustees were directed to divide the stock among their descendants in the same proportions as the income.

Mr. Kauffmann made these specific bequests: Little Sisters of the Poor, $1,000; Children's Hospital, $1,000; Miriam P. Kaube, a cousin, Pasadena, Calif., $10,000; May Fracker, a cousin, Zanesville, Ohio, $500; Hudson Grunewald, a friend, $500; Lane Kauffmann, a grandson, $10,000; eight other grandchildren, $1,000 each; Mary C. Mearns, a cousin, Chevy Chase, Md., $1,000; Harriet Quist, Long Beach, Calif., $500, and to Mrs. Kauffmann, all personal effects.

March 25. Application for ancillary letters of administration was filed in the District Court here by the executors, American Security and Trust Co.; his nephew, Montgomery Blair, jr., Bar Harbor, and a friend, Sidney St. F. Thaxter, Portland, Me.

The estate included the Blair House, which was valued at $142,200 and which Maj. Blair wished preserved as an historical museum; the nearby property at 712 Jackson Place Northwest, valued at $70,600; furnishings of the Blair House valued at $10,000; stocks and bonds valued at $405,087.11; realty notes valued at $40,000, and accounts receivable of $875. Debts were estimated at $29,700.

Maj. Blair left $10,000 to the Military Order to maintain his historical department.

Maj. Blair established a trust to hold the remainder of the property, paying the income chiefly to his daughter and his widow, Mrs. Laura Blair.

Mrs. Chieves Estate Left To Hospitals, Church Units

Mrs. Annie Walsh Chieves, late of 1657 Thirty-first Street Northwest, gave her $50,000 estate to charities and religious purposes, by her will, which was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Chieves had lived here since the death of her husband, William Chieves, Petersburg, Va., businessman. She named a friend, Clifton Maloney, president of the Philadelphia Life Insurance Co., as her executor.

The will was filed in behalf of Maloney by Attorney Robert F. Cogswell, who said Mrs. Chieves had no near-relatives.

Specific bequests were: Loudoun Hospital, Leesburg, Va., $1,000; Methodist Women's Home Missionary Society, $1,000; Methodist Women's Foreign Missionary Society, $1,000.

The remainder of the estate, Mrs. Chieves directed, is to be divided among 13 beneficiaries. Two twenty-firsts will go to each of the following:

Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, Sibley Memorial Hospital, Washington Home for Incurables, Methodist Home, Connecticut Avenue and Ellicott Street; Methodist Episcopal Home for the Aged, Philadelphia, Pa.; Home for Aged and Orphans, Baltimore; Conference Methodist Episcopal Church South, Inc., Gaithersburg, Md.; Children's Home Society of Virginia, Richmond, Va.; Swartzell Methodist Home for Children.

One twenty-first will go to each of these: Grenfell Association of America, Crossnore, N. C.; Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.; Society for Improvement of the Condition of the Poor, New York City; Fund for the Aid of Superannuated Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

$667,000 Estate Left by Maj. Blair

Maj. Gist Blair, historian general of the Military Order of the World War, left an estate of about $667,000 to his family and for historical and educational purposes.

Maj. Blair was 80 years old when he died at the Blair House, 1651 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, last December 16. His will and six codicils were probated at his legal residence, Bar Harbor, Me., on

$1,000,000 Fire Starts Inquiry Into Sabotage

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 15.—A huge store of lumber consigned to defense industries was destroyed today in a $1,000,000 fire that also endangered a Philadelphia shipyard, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced at once "there is a possibility of sabotage."

The fire, most disastrous in Philadelphia for a dozen years and one of the worst in the city's history, was discovered at 1:45 a. m. in the heart o fthe Wilson H. Lear Lumber Co. yard. The flames left the block-square yard a smoldering mass, destroyed 10 homes and damaged 25 others, gutted the five-story Erik Jannson Cabinet Making Factory, and leaped to the roof of the machine shop of the Cramp Shipbuilding Yard 2 blocks away.

Doctor Killed in Crash

En route to the scene, Dr. Pedro Carreras, 50, was killed in an automobile collision. Michael Regan, 71-year-old night watchman, was missing, apparently dead in the fire.

At least 60 of 400 firemen were overcome by smoke, exhaustion or heat. Deputy Fire Chief George Ferrier was stricken with a heart attack and was reported in serious condition.

Water Pours on Machines

The shipyard machine shop roof was badly damaged and water poured down on new machines recently moved in. H. Birchard Taylor, Cramp company vice president, insisted, however, that there would be no delay in preparations to fill a $120,000,000 naval contract, including six light cruisers.

The fire destroyed 22,000,000 feet of lumber. Wilson H. Lear, lumber yard owner, said it was intended for "the Army, Navy, arsenals and other defense agencies."

The fire spread quickly. Fire Chief William Cowden said it apparently started "at five points simultaneously, and the whole place seemed to blaze at once. It was the most peculiar fire I ever experienced."

How to Get A Husband— And Be a Heel

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 15.—Every woman of marriageable age in America, no matter how plain or ill favored she may be, can snare a husband—and a good one, too—if she'll follow the simple psychological principle of "moral dominance."

A psychologist, Dr. Robert W. McMurphy, married, today took up the matrimonial cudgels of the girls who fear becoming spinsters and let them in on this "almost escape-proof" formula:

Just pick the type of man over whom it's easy to achieve "moral dominance," and go to work in a businesslike manner — avoiding "unnecessary sentimentality" and concluding the campaign with a situation in which he's made to feel "like a dog."

"It is relatively easy," said Dr. McMurry, "to establish moral dominance over extremely conscientious individuals, those with feelings of inferiority, or those who have been dominated by their mothers, but generally speaking, they make good husbands—they're docile, steady and faithful.

"It's very difficult to become morally dominant over the very selfish and criminal types, but they don't make good husband's anyway."

Having picked your man, Dr. McMurry advises:

"On the pretense of being helpful, begin to point out some of his more obvious weaknesses.

"Take a leaf from Hitler's book—always take the offensive."

"Create situations in which the man will be led to make statements or indulge in acts (perhaps a kiss) which can be interpreted as compromising.

"Then apply moral pressure—with dignity and restraint. There should be no scenes. The prevailing note should be that of quiet bravery.

"If he demurs or attempts to escape, he should be made to feel like a dog."

Brown Denies He Offered to Retire as D. C. Police Head

Maj. Ernest W. Brown last night denied he offered to retire as superintendent of Metropolitan Police during a conference yesterday with Commissioner John Russell Young.

Maj. Brown appeared at the District Building at the request of the Commissioners to submit a medical report on all members of his department over 55. A report of the same nature also had been requested from Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter.

Commissioner Young said Brown appeared a bit perturbed over rumors that he might resign because of physical disabilities and asked point blank if the Commissioners "wanted him to retire."

"He made no offer to retire voluntarily," said Young, "and I told him we had no desire to see him go. But I further told him that we felt it was up to him to recommend retirements—from himself down—of all men in the Police Department whom he felt were not physically qualified to continue service."

Young accepted Brown's report on recent physical examinations of 79 members of the department over 55 and asked the police chief to make specific recommendations as soon as possible.

It is expected that Brown's statement in connection with the medical tests will await examination of Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent, who has been absent on leave.

Commenting on his reported offer to relinquish his post, Brown, who is 66, pointed out that he was "a little overweight," but otherwise in perfect health and "perfectly capable" to continue.

"I made no offer to retire," said Brown, "and I don't know where such a statement could have come from. I've given my best for the last nine years, and I feel I'm still able to carry on."

Commissioner Young said Maj. Brown "apparently wanted to know where he stood and I told him we were not 'gunning' for anyone."

The Commissioners' request to the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons to submit the medical reports gave rise to speculation that "shakeups" were imminent among older men in both departments.

Young said last night that no action by the Commissioners is contemplated until the medical reports have been studied and recommendations are received from both Brown and Fire Chief Porter.

Simplest Cookery Best At Picnics

Kabobs and Scrambled Corn Are Favorites, Easy to Prepare And Lots of Fun

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

Martha Ellyn.

WASHINGTON residents are picnic-minded and not at all afraid of finding bugs in the potato salad, ants in the cake and sand in sandwiches. This is evidenced by the large number of permits granted by the Recreation Center, National Park Service. Approximately 500 permits have been issued in the first half of May for picnic spots in the various groves under National Park Service supervision in the nearby Washington area.

No matter if the yen for eating out-of-doors takes you to one of the lovely groves in Rock Creek Park, or on a little excursion to a wooded glade, to a cabana by the seashore, to hiking and biking into new realms, or merely into your own back yard, there is always the matter of food.

There's something delightfully different about entertaining outdoors. The warmth and flicker of an open-air fire seems to put everyone right with the world. Few persons can resist the aroma of a sizzling steak or coffee. All kinds of ideas and recipes exist. But the big idea about outdoor cookery is to keep it simple and have fun doing it.

Kabobs A Favorite

Rustic cookery is a pastime enjoyed by the Mount Vernon Seminary girls. Parties of four to six with chaperons cook at the dutch oven built recently on their campus. The girls have a host of novel recipes brought from their home towns or States and delight in trying them out on their schoolmates. Kabobs is a favorite food prepared by the girls.

Kabobs—at least their version of this popular barbecue food—are made by cutting 2 inch squares of round steak, potatoes, carrots and onions placing them alternately on a stick pointed at the end. The stick should be freshly cut so that it will be too green to burn while the food is cooking. The "loaded" stick is then held over the glowing coals until food is done—usually about 20 minutes.

Dough Boys are a second choice in these girls' dutch oven cookery. These are made by wrapping biscuit batter around a stick (a green one, three fourths of an inch in diameter). The dough is cooked over the glowing coals. When finished cooking the dough boy is withdrawn and jam or brown sugar and butter used as a filling.

Indoors, a certain stew is called a ragout, but when this same dish is cooked in the open spaces it becomes Jungle Stew. If you are going to achieve this zestful dish in the outdoors, it will be necessary to soak the navy beans overnight, before you go on the picnic. Here is the process:

Jungle Stew—Soak 2 cups navy beans overnight and cook until half done. Then put into the kettle you will cook in at the open fire. Take along 8 slices minced bacon, 4 onions sliced, 8 small potatoes, 1 large can tomatoes, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cloves and 1 bay leaf. Brown the bacon with the onion and add with all other ingredients to which has been added 1 quart of water. Cook until the beans are tender. Add more water if necessary.

Scrambled Corn Good

Corn lends itself admirably to out-of-door cookery. Either canned corn or fresh corn in season can be used in making scrambled corn, which is a mixture of cubed bacon, whole kernel corn, eggs and seasoning. This dish can be tossed together and made ready to serve in 5 minutes. Take along tomatoes to slice, some French bread, olives and pickles and have plenty of hot coffee. If dessert is needed, that is a matter of personal choice. A luscious choclate cake will never go amiss. Make the scrambled corn this way:

Scrambled Corn — Brown ¼ pound cubed bacon, and 1 can whole kernel corn and when corn is hot scramble in 3 eggs. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Some persons like to prepare the food at home and take it to the picnic grounds keeping it hot either in some special cooking equipment or by wrapping the baking dish in a quantity of paper. The following menu lends itself to home preparation.

Picnic Menue

Scallion Soup
Scalloped Potatoes and Frankfurters
Tomatoes and Cucumbers
Buttered Bread
Cottage Cheese Sandwiches
Fruit Cookies
Coffee

The following is a recipe for making the Potato-Frankfurter dish:

Scalloped Potatoes and Frankfurters—Pare 6 medium sized potatoes and cut in thin slices. Place ½ of potatoes in a buttered baking dish and sprinkle with salt, pepper and 1½ tablespoons flour. Cut 1 pound frankfurters in half lengthwise, then in half-crosswise and place on the potatoes. Cover with the remaining potatoes. Sprinkle either salt, pepper and 1½ tablespoons flour and dot with 1 tablespoon butter. Pour 2 cups milk over ingredient, cover and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Remove cover and bake for 20 to 30 minutes longer or until the potatoes are tender. Serves 6.

If the casserole in which the potatoes are baked is wrapped in plenty of paper when taken from the oven, they will stay hot for several hours.

Ham Pinwheels

Ham pinwheels are grand for spring serving. They are easy on the family. Make up a regular biscuit dough, pat it out until about one-third inch thick. Spread with creamed ham, roll up quickly and cut off half inch slices. Arrange the slices, flat sides up, in shallow greased pan and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Slip onto a heated platter and surround with more creamed ham.

Summer Is a Cumin In

Food at Prenuptial Parties Can Be Attractive as the Bride

By the Post Food Editor

May is being a merry, merry month in many ways. For one thing, many of us are doing honor to brides-to-be by announcement teas, bridesmaids' luncheons or wedding breakfasts.

Wedding breakfasts may be of several kinds. If the wedding is very large and a caterer is to serve, it may be served sitting down. The menu might be after a similar pattern:

Breakfast Menu

Chilled Honeydew Melon
Clam Broth
Chicken Supreme or Squab
Asparagus Green Salad
Ices or Ice Cream
Coffee

If it is to be a stand-up wedding breakfast, which of course requires far less service, the breakfast may be served from a single long buffet table. Here is a pattern menu for a simple stand-up wedding breakfast:

Breakfast Menu

Chicken Salad
Hot Creamed Ham and Sweetbreads
Hot Buttered Rolls
Tiny Lettuce or Watercress Sandwiches
Tiny Frosted Cakes
Candies Mints Ices
Wedding Cake Coffee

If you would like to serve a different, mouth-watering pastry at a special announcement tea, try making crunchy, sweet-tart cranberry tea meringues. The bride-to-be will have to look to her laurels or the meringues might steal some of the glory of her hour. Here is the recipe for making them:

Cranberry Tea Meringues—Sift 2 cups flour, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon baking powder. Work in 1 cup shortening (all or part butter) with the fingers. Blend very thoroughly, as no liquid is used. Press into lightly greased shallow pan and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 20 to 25 minutes, or until delicately brown. Spread lightly with crushed cranberry sauce (about one-half of 17-ounce can). Top with a nut-cereal meringue made by beating egg whites, adding 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar, then folding in ½ cup chopped nuts and ½ cup flaked cereal, slightly crushed. Return to the oven and continue baking 15 to 20 minutes more to set and color meringue. When cooked cut in squares with a sharp knife.

As dainty as an old-fashioned nosegay is a bouquet cocktail.

Bouquet Cocktail—In sherbet glasses arrange fresh fruits such as sliced bananas, halved strawberries and orange sections with balls of cranberry sauce, made by cutting cranberry sauce with ball cutter. Insert mint leaves around edges of sherbet glasses. Cut opening in center of paper doily, then slip bottom of glass through opening. Draw doily up around the glass. Fasten underneath with a band of scotch tape. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Do House Cleaning One Step at Time To Avoid Disorder

There's no need to disrupt your entire household with spring housecleaning. Why not rejuvenate one room at a time, or better still, attend to each part in order?

For example, engage in a curtain washing bee, not doing them in with the weekly washing, but on another day, when you will use your household washer for that one purpose. On another day, schedule the soiled slip-covers for their regular visit to the household washer.

Then, after the various other elements of house-cleaning have been attended to, you will have your curtains and furniture covers ready to put back in immaculate rooms.

A little later, as the weather becomes warmer, set aside a time for blankets, spreads and comforts to go through the washer. Leading blanket manufacturers give detailed instructions on how to use the washer for blankets.

Work up rich suds with lukewarm water. Then put in one blanket. Wash it not more than three minutes and give it two or three rinses, same temperature. Put the blanket through a loosely adjusted wringer, or use an extractor. If it is still soiled, repeat the routine. Support the blanket with both hands when it is being moved about, for water adds much weight to the loosely woven material. Dry it evenly across two clotheslines, and always in a moderate temperature. Finally, fluff up the nap with a clean, soft brush. Cleansed according to these factory rules, blankets will be soft and sweet-smelling, ready to put away until next fall with the other heavy things that we soon will be retiring from summer use.

American Cheese Takes Big Lead In Consumption

With a 45 per cent increase in consumption from 1930 to 1940 American, or cheddar, cheese scored an impressive record of food popularity during the decade, says a statement by the National Dairy Council.

"American, or cheddar, cheese is the most important type produced in the United States," according to the council, "and the 45 per cent rise was a far larger percentage increase than for any of the foreign types. It now represents around 73 per cent of all cheese used. The development of process cheese has no doubt been a factor in stimulating the consumption of American cheese.

"About five quarts of milk are required to make one pound of American cheese. Cheese combines most of the nutritive factors in milk. Five ounces of American cheese is about equivalent to a quart of fresh fluid whole milk in calories, calcium, phosphorus, vitamin A and protein content.

Your Dieting Must Have A Fair Trial

By Ida Jean Kain

IT SEEMS we have a skeptic in our slimming circles. A young lady who did not reduce—diet and exercise to the contrary—writes somewhat huffily that she believes I make up those letters from the shining examples.

Lucky for me, I am in the habit of saving the good letters. Anyone who has her doubts as to their authenticity can drop around any time and see the originals. But I will admit that some of them do sound almost too good to be true. Here's one that may:

"This is to inform you that under the guidance of your column I have lost 64 pounds. Last June my weight was 214 pounds and today it is 150 pounds, which seems to be about right for a person of my build. I am 5 feet 6½ inches tall, and have a rather large frame.

"I used to wear a size 44 and am down to an 18. My husband is so thrilled because I have lost weight and so happy because I look better that he want- to buy me all kinds of clothes and even insisted on my purchasing a slack suit. So far, I have lacked courage to wear it before anyone, but maybe I'll get over that in time."

23 Pounds in 13 Weeks

She said several nice things, most of which I am leaving out, but just to keep the note of authenticity, I'll put this in: "Keep up the good work of helping women to overcome their physical faults. I, for one, will be grateful to you for the rest of my life."

A Chicagoan has done exceptionally well, too. She says: "I have been following your menus—although not to the lettter—and have lost 23 pounds in 13 weeks. I have slimmed down from a size 52 to a 48. You can see I still have quite a way to go. But I am taking it easy and expect to be buying my fall clothes in size 40 or 42. I feel grand. My biggest problem now is not my diet, but those kind people who just know I will go into a decline and die. My husband is dieting with me, and has lost 28 pounds. We look like new people."

Give It Fair Trial

There are so many letters from women who have lost weight that I wonder whether the few who can't lose really give their diets a fair trial. It sometimes happens that there is no reduction in weight for the first week or two, just when dieting is hardest. So perhaps they become discouraged and give up too soon. In spite of such delays, anyone can average a weight loss of 10 pounds per month by assiduously following the proper diet.

It's the Way You Look at It

So many of my friends are boors,
Their behavior's incredibly rude,
Yet when I call names and speak my mind,
It's just my "fine frank attitude."

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Notables in droves, herds and battalions turned out for the garden party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Skeffington Z. Skipwitch. Glimpsed here and there were:

Mrs. Slinker Hopping, chatting with her former husband, Reginald M. X. Hopping, and his former fiance, Mrs. Redingote-Burlap-Mink . . . Mrs. Leonidas Birdhaven in last summer's hat, cleverly remodeled . . . Livingston DeCrasher, bachelor and fortune hunter, getting a lemonade straw for Chickie Luker, subdeb daughter of the Rutherford Lukers . . . Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, eccentric dowager, armed with a flit gun to defend herself against insects . . . Mrs. Ditherton Doolittle 3d, whose husband has been called in the draft, being escorted by glamour boys Buzzie Bellwether and Sonny Nottbright . . . Mrs. Boxwood Maze, whose home, incidentally, is a museum . . . Mrs. Forsythe Bleakhouse holding court on a freshly painted bench . . . the Dartwood Diddles 3d, who expect the stork in December . . . Mrs. Abraham Lincoln DePeyster holding court in front of a small puddle (and incidentally, stepping back into it) . . . Mrs. Thornberry Flitt, just in from Bermuda and holding court beside the punch bowl . . . Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope telling the hostess it had been such a nice party . . . and scores of other doing the same.

Mistaken Identity

George Zither, head usher at the Taj Mahal Movie Palace, mistaken for a military officer, was given a rush by glamour debs Tuesday night at the premiere of "Why Was I Born?"

A brilliant assemblage of socialites including many officers in uniform turned out for the event. Debs and dowagers, to their chagrin, found photographers focusing cameras on the uniformed men. When the resplendent Zither appeared, he found himself the center of an admiring throng of debs who hung about him as the photographers snapped pictures.

Later, when the mistake was discovered, irate fathers of the debs rushed to the newspapers and news syndicates to prevent publication of the photographs.

Difficult Decisions

Whether to buy some flowered cottons, white shoes and a wide-brimmed hat and be frankly comfortable this summer, or to get some smart, dark, tailored things and be ready to face ritzy friends from New York and to step into a motor car or a train on a moment's notice.

Whether to be bold and splash the house with color and then worry about what your friends will say and what will happen when you get tired of it, or to be conservative in your decoration and worry because you never have any initiative or daring.

Whether to go on a vacation now when all your summer clothes are new and come back to face the heat of summer, or wait until you really want to go and then have to wear all your old, dowdy clothes.

Whether to buy the bride a gift you can't afford and feel guilty about it when you get home, or to buy her one you can afford and feel guilty when you get to her reception.

Whether to entertain all your friends of violently divergent political and economic faiths at one fell swoop, and let them fight it out in your drawing room, or to spend the summer taking them on one at a time.

Whether to accept the invitation to the party and probably be bored or to decline it and possibly be sorry.

Whether to ignore the strange telephone number left for you to call for fear it may be somebody who wants you to do something, or to call it on the chance it may be somebody who wants to do something for you.

Whether to put your money in your sock against tomorrows' uncertainties or to spend it on one last fling before Hitler gets here.

Girl Plans to Design Planes

Raleigh, N. C.—It is not enough that women be able to fly airplanes, they should be able to service them—even design them—believes Katharine Stinson, senior in aeronautical engineering at North Carolina State College.

Miss Stinson, 23, who is to receive her degree in aeronautical engineering, will be the first woman to graduate in this department.

As a child of 6, Miss Stinson began to take an interest in airplanes. By studying pictures and watching the few planes that passed overhead, she began to fashion crude models. Occasionally she would get a look at a grounded plane. By the time she entered high school, she was making models powered by rubber bands.

Prospect of Caring for Helpless Infant, When She Has Had No Previous Association With Babies, Mars Young Wife's Joyful Anticipation of Firstborn

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am expecting my first baby in October. As I am an only child and have no younger cousins, I have never been around any infants. So, as time passes, I have developed, along with the intense happiness of expectant motherhood, a feeling of nervousness, bordering on panic, at the prospect of having to take care of a helpless infant.

I imagine the first few months will be the hardest,—as I haven't the vaguest idea how, even, to hold a baby; let alone bathe, feed, dress and generally take care of him. Is there any place here in Washington where an expectant mother (or mothers of young infants) can go for a few instructions in baby care? I shall appreciate any suggestions. EUNICE G.

DEAR EUNICE G.: Most "first-time" mothers experience that sense of panicked inadequacy which you describe,—but not, usually, until they have actually come to grips with the necessity of caring for their firstborn, alone and unaided. I remember the first bath I gave my firstborn, who was then a month or more old. In order to take no chances of dropping that bewildering and unpredictable mite, while getting her into and out of the suds, I invented my own method of operation, to-wit: I got a wide, fat feather pillow, draped it with a rubber sheet and layers of towels, placed baby smack-dab in the carefully indented middle, and with much agitated sloshing of bathwater about, finally brought her through the ordeal, well scrubbed and unharmed.

Apologetically aware that my technique and my poise left much to be desired, and unable to remember much of the nurses' demonstrations of proper handling and bathing—I hastily sought the advices of a "motherly," middle-aged neighbor, whose sage remarks, on that occasion, took care of everything. "The baby won't break," she told me kindly. "You can handle her as if she were a rubber doll. You can toss her around like a bag of meal, almost, and she'll really enjoy it, as long as your grip is firm but easy. It is gingerly handling that makes a baby nervous."

After that, I had no trouble. Baby nd I got along splendidly,—she eyeing me placidly while I plunged her with nonchalant firmness into and out of the bath, wrestled her into and out of her garments, etc., etc., piling proof on proof that healthy infants are, indeed, miraculously tough enough to withstand and even thrive on vigorous handling.

Your previous lack of acquaintanceship with babies shouldn't worry you in the least. If you had been exposed in past years to dozens of babies, in the arms of their mothers or in the care of their respective nurses, you probably would have absorbed very little baby lore. Baby-tending is best learned by doing—(while following traditional common sense rules, of course)—and the average young mother takes to it like a duck to water, after her first breathless take-off as independent operator in that field of natural responsibility.

However, in the interim of waiting for your baby to be born, you might read, for instance, Dr. Josephine Kenyon's book entitled, "Healthy Babies are Happy Babies,"—which a local baby specialist recommends as the best up-to-late book on baby care. (Dr. Kenyon writes regularly for Good Housekeeping Magazine, by the way,—so you might find many useful pointers there.)

Also, the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor distributes, free on request, two splendid pamphlets—one titled "Pre-Natal Care," and the other "Infant Care." I happen to know that one of the city's leading obstetricians keeps a supply of these pamphlets in his office, as a convenience to his patients. (And this may be a customary courtesy in the profession).

It would be a good idea for you to discuss your fears with your physician, who is surely accustomed to such a reaction from women expecting a first child. By confessing your fears, you will get a load off your chest,—and undoubtedly many practical suggestions besides. One specialist with whom I discussed your query humorously informed me that, "It's amazing how little the modern young mother knows about baby care, in the beginning. Why, we even have to tell most of them how to cook the cereal. But it's surprising how quickly they catch on, when they once settle down to mastering the job.

Before you and the baby are discharged from the hospital, you will have been tutored—at one or perhaps several demonstrations—in the technique of infant bathing, dressing, etc. And later you may, if you like, obtain further instructions along the same line from the baby clinic division of the public dispensary at Children's Hospital. But I doubt that you will need it—if you solicit and follow your physician's advice and supplement his counsel with the above (or a comparable) course of reading. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Good Letters Hold Friends

BOYS will stop writing—and girls will wonder why! Of course, a beau may be lured by a brighter eye, but often his ardor cools because the girl doesn't know the simple but clever ways of writing letters that express her best self.

These phrases reveal such a dull self—"Things are much as usual . . . we stay pretty busy." Do you write them because pen and ink give you stage fright? You can easily snap out of it.

Pretend you're settling down for a good chat: "I've been saving up every little crumb of news for you, so here goes!"

Somewhere in your letter write a question, a request for advice: "I'd like to take that trip you made." See if that doesn't bring you a speedy answer. And don't be all "I's" and "me's!" Sound interested in HIM.

How to raise a smile? Say things vividly—not just "he walked down the street," but "he pranced," "meandered."

And he'll feel twice as proud of your letters if you write him on unlined paper.

Our 40-page booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," has dozens of sample letters to help you with your friendly, business and social correspondence. Gives tips on grammar, correct form.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Barbara Hunt Becomes Bride In Williamsburg

Wearing a frock of dusty rose sheer, instead of the traditional white, Miss Barbara Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marvin Hunt, of Greensboro, N. C., was married yesterday at noon to Edmund Stanley Van Brunt, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Brunt, of Washington.

The ceremony took place at historic Bruton Parish Church in Williamsburg, Va., the Rev. F. H. Craighill officiating. The bride, who dispensed with attendants, wore a long fitted coat of the same material as her dress, and a white pique hat with a draped veil.

A breakfast at the Williamsburg Lodge followed the ceremony. Mrs. Hunt wore a black and white printed sheer with white accessors and Mrs. Van Brunt, sr., had chosen a green print with a broadbrimmed white hat.

After a wedding trip to New York, the couple will live at 3028 Wisconsin Avenue. The bride attended the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina and her husband studied at George Washington and Cornell Universities.

Mrs. Wallace Is Honor Guest At Fete Given by Mrs. Hawes

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, was honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Harry B. Hawes at historic Stratford, former home of Robert E. Lee.

The 70 or more guests who came from Washington, Richmond and as far away as Connecticut and Alabama, found that their hostess had chosen a delightful setting for the fete, under the great old trees on the lawn surrounding the house.

First on the program was a cup or two of champagne punch served in silver punch cups from a quaint old silver punch bowl, in the log-cottage dining room, near the main house. Many of the guests wandered from there through the recently refurnished rooms of the old mansion or down to see the newly built mill.

When they finally collected on the lawn, it was to find that the luncheon had been arranged as a buffet. After being served from a long table (centered with an enormous bouquet of spring flowers), guests found places at tables-for-12 throughout the grounds. Protocol had been thrown to the winds, and, except for the fact that the hostess seated Mrs. Wallace at her right and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson at her left, guests grouped themselves just as they wished, without any thought of rank or precedence.

Ranking guests included Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Allen Ellender, Mrs. Richard M. Kelberg, Mrs. Robert O. Taft, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Harry Schwartz, Mrs. James F. Byrnes and Mrs. A. D. Chandler.

Also Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Sydney Cloman, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, Mrs. William Cabell Bruce, of Maryland, and Mrs. Jonathan Bryan, of Richmond, Va.

Still othhers included Mrs. R. B. Armstrong, Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Mrs. Edmund Burks Ball, Mrs. Harry Blair, Mrs. John Boyle Gordon, Mrs. Lewis S. Greene, Miss Anne Carter Greene, Mrs. Fank Griffin, Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Charles Hume, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Fordney Johnson, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Bernard Jones, Mrs. Egbert Jones, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Robert Copeland Jones.

Also Miss Helen Knox, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, of Greenwich, Conn., president of the Robert E. Lee Foundation; Mrs. John S. McDaniel, of Stamford, Conn.; Mrs. Hawes Moore, and Mrs. Hawes Dunn, daughters of the hostess; Mrs. Carl Ristine, Mrs. Walker Treat, and Mrs. Lloyd Shippen.

Capital's 'Petticoat Government' Feted by Mrs. Roosevelt at Tea

2,000 Women Executives Attend White House Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

"WELL, OF COURSE, Hess tried to land in Scotland—he knew the Scots wouldn't give him away!"

That's the latest I've heard on the "Trojan Hess." In fact, I heard it yesterday everywhere I went. First, at the White House, where Washington's "Petticoat Government"—2,000 strong—turned out for the annual tea given by Mrs. Roosevelt. Then again at the smaller party given by Mrs. Eldridge Jordan at her home on N Street.

Everywhere you went it seemed guests were still speculating about the world's greatest mystery, and practically everybody had his own pet theory about it. Most logical one I heard came from Mrs. George Barnett (at Mrs. Jordan's) who said she would be much more convinced that Hess had really broken with Hitler, and had therefore fled for his life—"if somebody could find out whether his wife and children were still in Germany. Any man of his position," she went on, "could certainly see that his family was safe before he took off to save his own life. Otherwise, it's fairly obvious he's up to no good," she concluded. Incidentally, Mrs. Barnett knows Lord Hamilton, too; met him years ago in Scotland before he was known by his current title.

To get back to the parties—well, the one at the White House was an annual affair, generally held on the sweeping lawn where hundreds may mill, and linger, without crowding in the least. Yesterday, however, because lowering clouds suggested that a few drops of rain might fall before the party drew to a close, the hostess decided that guests had better be received indoors. And so they were—with not only Mrs. Roosevelt, but also a number of Cabinet hostesses standing in line to receive, for hours, in the Blue Room.

Guests were limited to women executives in Government departments, but I never realized before that there were so many in that contingent. Not until I tried to get past the endless line in the east hall downstairs and the throng that filled the lobby upstairs, as well as the state dining room. Gold-braided aides trimly turned out in their "summer whites," were stationed at strategic points to keep the crowd back until all guests could file in orderly line through the East Room, the Green Room and into the Blue Room—to be received. The Marine Band Orchestra, under the direction of Capt. W. F. Santelmann, added an extra dash of color to the scene and played a variety of selections during the entire party.

Cabinet Wives Assist Hostess

Several guests slipped by the guards and went through the line twice. They wanted to be sure that all the Cabinet hostesses were receiving. And most of them were. Mrs. Roosevelt(who wore a black chiffon and lace frock, set off with an orchid corsage, had standing with her, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry Stimson, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, filling in for Mrs. Knox, who is out of town; and Mrs. Ebert K. Burlew, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, substituting for Mrs. Harold Ickes, who is in the hospital, following the birth of her second child.

Guests who came in by the east entrance—and all of them did—were permitted to walk out the front door, which was by way of being a very special privilege. But nobody seemed to leave early. Until almost 6 o'clock, the State dining room was a moving mass of women, dressed to the teeth, and prepared to stay until dinner time in order to see the party to the end. Endless quantities of pink punch and delicious cakes were consumed before the fete drew to a close. Everybody you saw, in fact, seemed either to be making her way toward the refreshment table or away from it.

Who was there? Well, if you really care, you'd better get down your Congressional Directory and thumb through the Government listings. Every woman executive seemed to be present, and if one was missing, I don't know who she was.

Meanwhile, over at Mrs. Jordan's Georgetown home, a much more informal party was well under way. Society with a capital "S" was well represented. A sizable company that gathered in the long drawing room soon overflowed to the garden, and stayed on long past the final hour for which guests were invited.

Mrs. Jordan, who was gowned in a gray frock with matching shoes—and looked exactly like an elegant portrait—received wherever she happened to be. Mrs. Jordan R. Williams and Mrs. Wallach Merriam took their seats in the drawing room and let the crowd-on-the-way-to-the-garden collect around them, before going on. Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. Stanley Reed, and Mrs. Warren Austin had their round-table talk about "the Hess affair" before most of the throng collected.

Many Notables At Jordan Party

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock were there, wandering from group to group in the garden . . . Mrs. Virginia Peters Salmon, smartly attired in a navy blue frock with a rippling white organdy collar, was telling friends she was returning to New York last night. She's a niece of the hostess . . . Miss Peggy Wagner, in a gay spring print, showed guests the way to the garden . . . Mrs. McCeney Werlich was there; also, Ralph Snowden Hill, who as usual seemed to know everybody there; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, who collected a number of the younger set around them, including Miss Eleanor Meem, Jock Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton and William Mitchell . . . Alfons Landa squired Mrs. Pearsons Rust through the garden . . . Mrs. Edward A. Mitchell entertained quite a circle of guests . . . Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege were there; as were Mme. Van Kaathoven, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, William Elmslie and Mr. and Mrs. Jean Delattre-Seguy.

Still others present—to mention only a few more at the very pleasant party—were the United States Minister to Latvia and Mrs. John C. Wiley, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Merritt Swift, Fred Roy, Mrs. Alfred Wilcox, arriving with Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, and the two of them having a flock of friends around them from the minute they came into the garden; Mrs. Robert E. Hoyt, Mrs. Herman Gasch and many, many more.

Albert Deweys Gather Friends For Cocktails and the View

"We've been admiring this 8-mile view alone for two months," said Mrs. Albert Dewey yesterday. "So we decided to ask some friends in to share it."

It wasn't the fault of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey that yesterday was slightly cloudy and that guests at their garden party couldn't see quite as far as on a clear day. But as one guest remarked, "It's too bad that every hostess at an outdoor party feels personally responsible for the weather." Mrs. Dewey was sheltered from the threatening elements in a sable jacket, but everybody else, most of them city-bound, were only too grateful for a whiff of fresh air.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey have Uplands, the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, until early September. Mr. Dewey says they will spend the summer in Washington. Mrs. Dewey says they won't. But if they should, they could have no better or cooler place to be.

Guests Gather On Terrace

Guests gathered on the terrace overlooking Washington and the Virginia hills beyond. Cocktails were served on the porch, and waiters handed around the usual thin sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres.

Justice Frank Murphy and Mrs. Stanley Reed represented the Supreme Court. Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, came in late. Baron James Baeyens and M. and Mme. Charles Lucet were others representing the French Embassy.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, smart in black, was telling Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth that she hoped she'd be on hand at the cocktail party Mrs. Gerry will give this afternoon. Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of the Senator from Vermont, was another member of the trio, before dashing off to a dinner.

Mrs. Charles Dewey, sister-in-law of the hostess, told friends she had just moved into her house near the Capitol. The house was built in 1791 and was at one time the home of "The Gorgeous Hussy," great and good friend of Andrew Jackson. La Hussy kept a printing press in the basement where she recorded all the goings-on of the Washington of that day. Mrs. Frederick Alger, daughter of Mrs. Dewey, accompanied her mother to the party. Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis told friends she would forecast fortunes at the Junior League Horse Show, which opens today. Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion squired Mrs. John Towers, who was pleased because she has finally found a home. Other recent house-hunters present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, whose home in Georgetown has just been sold over their heads.

Mrs. Dick Has Relief Plans

Mrs. S. Kent Legare chatted with Commander William Thomas. Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis were present, the latter wearing a black and white print and a large white straw hat. Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick came in, Mrs. Dick busy with plans for Belgian Week at the British War Relief headquarters on F Street. Starting a week from Monday Belgian articles will be sold there, with Mrs. Dick and many others taking turns as saleladies.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale dropped by for a cocktail, and others present included Mrs. Crosby Miller, who wore with her black frock a Breton's peasant's hat, which she had unearthed from a costume trunk in the attic; Capt. and Mrs. John J. Ide, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap (in a beige frock with a sable neckpiece), Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Etienne des Roziers, of the French Embassy; Mrs. George Pettengill and her sister, Mrs. Ernest Wagner, Clarence Hewes with Mrs. Foster Penick, and a few others.

First Lady Discusses Discrepancies in Draft

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

There should be agreement throughout the country on the application of the Selective Service Act, to make the provisions uniform, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday when she addressed the spring luncheon of the Seventy-sixth Club, composed of wives of members of Congress who came in with the seventy-sixth session. The club entertained in her honor at the Wardman Park Hotel with the president, Mrs. George W. Gillie, wife of Representative Gillie, of Indiana, presiding.

Pointing out that it was unfair that married men should be drafted in one part of the country and not in another, Mrs. Roosevelt declared it was important that such discrepancies in the application of the law be eliminated and hard feeling be avoided. She also mentioned the hardship imposed on a boy whose number appears likely to come up within a short time and who, for that reason, is unable to get a job, because no employer wants to spend time and money training him, only to have him leave in a few weeks or months.

On the other hand, she said, the military serivces also make an investment in giving a man a year's training and they desire one of an age that, for the next ten years, could be of use if needed.

Mrs. Roosevelt also discussed the provision that boys finishing college in 1941 be allowed to complete their schooling.

Ages should be carefully considered in revision of the Selective Service Act, said the First Lady. She suggested that the choice be given to boys who have completed their high school course, of taking their year's training then or after the end of the next period in their education, if they plan to go to college. A physical examination to determine whether or not the youths of 18 are strong enough to go into training should be one deciding factor, she said.

While the boys are in training there should also be provision for the girls to receive training that would make them "more useful in their own communities," Mrs. Roosevelt said. Urging the women to take a renewed interest in the problems of health and nutrition, whose neglect has been disclosed again and again by the draft rejections, she asserted that failure to do anything about conditions revealed by the draft in the first World War was probably due to the fact that women did not know where to begin.

Mrs. Roosevelt urged the women to attend the nutrition conference to be held in Washington the last week in May or, if they could not attend, to read all of the reports of it.

"We think that we give equal opportunity to every child for an education, and we don't," Mrs. Roosevelt declared. "On the physical side, as well as the mental, we have a lot to do to give our children a fair start."

She criticized the lack of opportunity under the present educational setup for the individual child to develop in the way best for his individual needs. In the city schools, classes are too large and in the rural schools one teacher has too many grades to handle, she said.

There's a Limit to Everything

Topeka, Kans. (AP).—A woman told the court her husband demanded a birthday cake but left her only one egg and locked the henhouse. "You simply can't bake a cake with one egg," she said, "so I put on a pair of his shoes, took a fishing pole, tied a tea sifter on it, reached through the wire mesh of the henhouse, and dipped out one egg at a time." She was granted a divorce.

Fort Meade.—One good baritone horn player will bring the 116th Infantry up to full war strength of 2,660 men.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agriculture to Lose Carl Robbins to Industry

Agriculture is about to lose one of its ablest administrators. Carl B. Robbins, president of the billion-dollar Commodity Credit Corporation, is expected to resign to become president of a Kentucky tobacco company. He is one of those rare public servants you hear about. Robbins, it's understood, has frequently turned down private offers several times his $9,500 Federal salary to remain with the Government. Agriculture officials credit Robbins with reducing the carrying charge for cotton loans alone by nearly $10,000,000 annually. They'll be sorry to see him leave.

The House yesterday appropriated funds for the Library of Congress which will permit it to increase its staff by 34 jobs on July 1. Budget Bureau estimates would have permitted the library to hire 86 more employes. Most of the new jobs will be low-paid, mainly junior librarians, clerks and messengers.

For weeks gossip has been circulated that several members of the Communist Party were working in the library. House members must have heard similar reports as Archibald MacLeish, the librarian, and Dr. Ernest Griffith, chief of the legislative reference service, were quizzed by Representative Powers on the rumors. MacLeish explained that he had received charges through the FBI that certain library employes were Communists or German Bund members. "I have followed the practice of saying to the FBI," explained MacLeish, "that if they attach weight to the charge I will be glad to investigate."

Powers questioned Dr. Griffith about a number of his employes, where they were from, who recommended them, and in general about their backgrounds. The New Jersey legislator wanted to know, for example, how much time a Dr. Schwartz spent on union labor work. Dr. Griffith said the employe stayed after work to attend to union business. The librarian added that it was a violation of regulations to engage in employe union activities on library time.

The House did adopt a rider which will prevent more than ten aliens being hired at the library. Twenty aliens are now on the library payroll. Librarian MacLeish pointed out that the library had collections of books which few, if any, Americans were able to service. Another rider was added which will prevent payment of salaries to Communists or German Bund members.

More about the sore arm trouble among Census punch card operators: Commerce officials have given notice that if a card punch operator can prove that his or her sore arm can be attributed to machine work, that employe will be transferred to a clerical job. The proof, however, must be in the form of a letter from a Public Health physician . . . Lend lease officials are working on plans to carry out the President's orders for greater production of bombers. It's likely that Congress will be asked to appropriate new billions for the project . . . Washington Navy Yard has had a 14 per cent turnover of employes since July 1, 1940. Officials blame much of the turnover on inadequate housing.

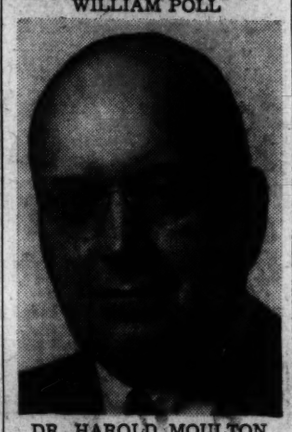
Federal employes living in Annapolis may now be candidates for and hold local office and participate in local campaigns. The Civil Service Commission decided to give employes the rights after an investigation revealed that 62 per cent of the registered voters and approximately 45 per cent of the total population were Federal employes . . . The first group of the accounting and auditing assistant applicants will be tested Saturday.

W. W. Butterworth, who until six weeks ago was commercial attache to our London embassy, has been loaned to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce where he is acting chief of the British Empire Unit . . . The office of export control administrator will be made a part of the new agency for economic warfare . . . The House was told yesterday that Government Printing Office charges are about 20 per cent lower than those of private printing firms.

Meat Cleaver, Bottle, Tongs Rout Bandits

CHARLES RACOOSIN

WILLIAM POLL



DR. HAROLD MOULTON

Bandits found the going rough here yesterday, despite getting away with $213 as a result of six robberies, two of which were successfully frustrated by the selected victims.

The day's high honors for foiling bandits perhaps should go to 62-year-old Charles Racoosin, who operates a grocery at 1800 Sixth Street Northwest.

Faced by two colored bandits, Racoosin charged them with a meat-cleaver. One of the thugs fired twice, but the gun failed to go off, so that both intruders fled. The grocery continued the chase for a block until one of the desperadoes turned and fired. The bullet went wild, the thugs fled up n alley, and Racoosin returned to the store.

Brandishing fire tongs, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, 57-year-old president of the Brookings Institution, early yesterday chased a burglar from his home with a pursuit so vigorous that the intruder, confusedly, took the hard way of leaving the premises.

Awakened by footsteps at 3:40 a. m., Dr. Moulton sprang from bed, discovered that he had a burglar in his house and set out in pursuit.

Round and round they went on the second floor of the house, at 3700 Oliver Street Northwest. Passing a fireplace, the doctor seized the fire tongs. The burglar dropped a purse belonging to Dr. Moulton's daughter, Barbara, graduate student in medicine at George Washington University.

Downstairs, Dr. Moulton saw the front door open—the way by which the intruder had entered—but the burglar, in departing, elected to unlock the back door and leap out into the night.

William Poll, proprietor of a grocery at 1723 Ninth Street Northwest, also put up a good scrap, but he lost $18 to a thug who got away only after the grocer had smashed a bottle of milk over the robber's head. The bandit, who had ordered the milk as a ruse, struck back with a blackjack and escaped.

While Marty Rubin, manager, was chasing after one colored gunman, a second calmly stood his ground and took $100 from Miss Marie Pleasant, 25, clerk at the Log Cabin liquor store, 1800 Seventh Street Northwest. Another thug got $93 from the grocery at 1835 Eighteenth Street Northwest, after threatening the clerk, Samuel Weinstein.

A colored man with a knife forced Samuel Rosenberg, of 3823 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, to give up $20 at his restaurant, Fourteenth and T Streets Northwest.

Clerk Found Dead On Porch, Bullet Through His Heart

A bullet through his heart, Earl Swetland, 27-year-old department store clerk, was found dead shortly after last midnight on the porch of his home at 707 D Street Northeast.

The body was discovered by a neighbor, Theodore Kettner, of 705 D Street, who saw it when he drove up to his home next door.

Only Swetland's two children, Dorothy, 18 months, and Earl, jr., 4 years, were in the house at the time of the discovery. His wife, Ethel, was at friends' home.

A pistol was found in the living room.

Roosevelt Orders Park Setup Study

Action Follows Delano's Criticism, Request to Resign As Board Head

Frederic A. Delano, only chairman the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has ever had, has told President Roosevelt he wants to resign and Mr. Roosevelt, asking him to stay a few months longer, has ordered a study of the commission with a view to reorganizing it.

This was revealed yesterday when the White House released an exchange of letters between the President and his uncle, long-time head of the agency that supposedly plans the parks and parkways of the Nation's Capital.

Delano, telling the President he wanted to retire because of "my age and increasing responsibilities," criticized the commission's present setup calling it "at best . . . somewhat cumbersome."

Lauds Fellow Members

He complained that it was given "only one important administrative duty," to purchase land for parks and playgrounds.

He paid tribute to the four citizen members of the commission and said that the ex-officio members "have in several cases given no time to the commission's work."

The four citizen members are Delano, the chairman; Henry V. Hubbard, of Cambridge, Mass.; J. C. Nichols, Kansas City, Mo., and William A. Delano, New York.

The ex-officio members are Newton B. Drury director of the National Park Service; Maj. Gen. J. L. Schley, chief of Army Engineers; Col. David McCoach, jr., District Engineer Commissioner; Earle H. Clapp, acting chief of the Forest Service; Senator Reynolds, until recently chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

Recites Grievance

"There has been no direct tie-in," said Delano, "with the Commission of Fine Arts, with the Bureau of Public Roads, or with the Bureau of the Budget.

"The failure at times of our relations with the District Commissioners, and the not unnatural criticism of the District government that the Park and Planning Commission was authorized to do the planning, not that it (the District government) must find the money, is easy to understand.

"And yet," Delano added, "the Park and Planning Commission has always been called before the Bureau of the Budget and the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress, and has the duty as well as the opportunity to express its views and explain its position."

The President said in reply he would take the opportunity to ask the Bureau of the Budget to reexamine the commission's administrative machinery and would defer action on Delano's resignation.

One Child Killed, 4 Others Hurt In Auto Accidents

One child was killed and four others were injured by automobiles in the Washington area yesterday.

Daisy Talbott, 7, of Landover, Md., was crossing the road from a mailbox on Central Avenue at Largo, Md., not far from Landover, The girl was brought to Casualty Hospital with a head injury from which she died several hours later.

A nickel clasped in his hand to buy candy at a store nearby, Robert E. Griffen, jr., 6, was run over by an automobile when he ran across the street in front of his home at 1020 Sixth Street Northeast.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital with head injuries, possible internal injuries and severe cuts and bruises. Leon N. Reaves, colored, 35, of 1623 S Street Northwest, was charged with driving with defective brakes.

Crossing the street in front of his home, 30 Dingmans Court Northwest, William E. Shannon, colored, 4, suffered a head injury. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Frank L. Williams, 6, of 1213 Fourth Street Southwest, and Bobbie L. Donald, 5, of 3414 Thirteenth Street Northwest, suffered minor injuries when they were knocked down by cars.

Bender Asks House to Call The Exterminator Man

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, took the floor of the House yesterday to complain about cockroaches and to request $25,000 to exterminate them from the Capitol and House Office Building.

Bender told colleagues of his encounter with "at least 50" of the insects—"not one of which was more than 3 inches long"—when he opened a desk drawer last Monday.

"You can imagine how I feel," he said in asking for a "general house cleaning to get rid of these pests that are so disturbing and distressing."

Nurses . . . . . Graduate

TWENTY-SIX nurses of Georgetown University Hospital, some of whom will soon be seeking nursing careers in the Army and Navy, were awarded diplomas yesterday at graduation exercises in Gaston Hall on the university campus by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., university president. Shown with the graduating class are the Rev. David McCauley, dean of Georgetown Medical School; and Dr. John Denby Hird, professor emeritus of the school of medicine, who addressed the graduates. Members of the class are: Sister Mary Clare Monica, of Maryland; Frances Clare Allen, of North Carolina; Frances Russ Bailey, of Virginia; Lucile Emily Barry, of Pennsylvania; Beth Barton, of Iowa; Lucille Marguerite Beane, of the District of Columbia; Edna Isabel Broderick, of Maryland; Carolyn Naomi Crum, of Pennsylvania; Kathryn Elizabeth Goucher, of the District of Columbia; Cecilia Plowden Hamilton, of Maryland; Mary Carolyn Hession, of New York; Sarah Legare Johnstone, of South Carolina; Marjory Ann Malligan, of Pennsylvania; Marguerite Nettie Money, of Maryland; Mary Elizabeth O'Brien, of Pennsylvania; Genevieve Rita Prisch, of Pennsylvania; Beatrice Anita Sirois, of Maine; Lee Ann Smith, of Pennsylvania; Hazel Anne Vogt, of Virginia; Helen Eileen Weber, of New Jersey; Frances Marie Weisbarth, of Ohio; Elizabeth Yvonne Whittier, of the District of Columbia; Mary Teresa Widmayer, of the District of Columbia; Jean Dolores Wood, of Virginia, and Teresa Lee Wynkoop.

Noble Conducts Choir Festival At Cathedral

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Thomas Tertius Noble conducts a choir festival in Washington Cathedral on Thursday night. Participating choirs: St. John's Church, Georgetown; Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Chapel of the Holy Comforter and Washington Cathedral. Program of music by Leo Sowerby, Giovanni Gabrieli, Thomas Weelkes, William Byrd, Christopher Tye and Ralph Vaughan Williams.

At evensong in Washington Cathedral last night a choir festival of unusual distinction and beauty was conducted by Thomas Tertius Noble, organist and choirmaster of St. Thomas' Church in New York. The tastefully chosen music was from the pens of the American Leo Sowerby, the Italian Giovanni Gabrieli, and the English Christopher Tye, William Weelkes, William Byrd and Ralph Vaughan Williams. The participating choirs of men and boys had been prepared by Paul Callaway, of Washington Cathedral; Sherman J. Kreuzburg, of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation and the Chapel of the Holy Comforter; and E. William Brackett, of St. John's Church, Georgetown.

BROWN

In the evensong service were incorporated Leo Sowerby's admirable settings of the "Magnificat" and the "Nunc Dimittis." The festival program began with the delightfully harmonized "Let Us Bless the Lord in His Temple" by Gabrieli, the Venetian composer, who attracted to his native city such famous German pupils as Heinrich Schuetz and Michael Praetorius in the early seventeenth century.

Dating from the sixteenth century was the interesting "I Will Exalt Thee, O Lord" by Christopher Tye, who held church positions at Ely and Oxford. From the treasury of English ecclesiastical music of the early seventeenth century came "Hosanna to the Son of David," by Thomas Weelkes, whose secular madrigals are better known to us than his religious compositions, and William Byrd's reverent setting of "Ave Verum Corpus."

The contemporary composer, Ralph Vaughan Williams, was represented by "Mystical Songs" in which the important barytone solo part was effectively sung by Edwin Charles Steffe. These songs, remarkable for the intuitive relation between text and music, are settings of four poems by that master of symbolism in verse, George Herbert: "Easter," "Love Bade Me Welcome," "The Call" and "Antiphon." In their harmonic subtlety and their lyric spirituality, the songs have an extraordinary loveliness.

Capital Area Cadets Win R. O. T. C. Awards

Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, commander of the Army's Third Corps Area, witnessed a sharp skirmish on the Georgetown University field yesterday afternoon in which a platoon of R. O. T. C. infantry cadets routed an "enemy" force bent on capturing the medical school building.

The combat problem was one of the features of the twenty-first annual Military Day exercises of the Georgetown R. O. T. C. unit, at which cadets from the Washington area surprised everyone by winning all but one of the military competition awards. Not content with this record, local students also walked off with the four silver cups offered by the university for excellence in military science in each of the respective classes.

Lieut. Col. Charles E. Ravens, commandant at the Hilltop, had prepared the military problem to demonstrate the efficiency of the infantry cadets in their field training.

The day started with a battalion parade in honor of Maj. Gen. Grant, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, and the donors of the various trophies who were among the guests. The university band headed the contingent.

Desobry Awarded Watch

A Washington boy, Cadet Major William R. Desobry, son of Col. Elmer C. Desobry, of the Adjutant General's Department, commanded the battalion and also received the award for individual military leadership. It was an officer's wrist watch, presented by Departmental Commander W. H. Hargrave, of the American Legion.

The cup offered by the president of the university for the highest standing in the second year advanced course was won by Cadet Capt. John P. Beall, of Washington.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh cup in the second-year basic course was given to Sergt. Carleton R. Sickles, of Washington; the Rev. John E. Grattan cup in the first-year advanced course was awarded to Sergt. William H. McKenna, of Silver Spring, Md., and another Silver Spring boy, Private Richard B. Grove, won the Rev. John E. Wise cup in the first-year basic course.

Company C, commanded by Capt. Sydney J. Lawrence of Washington, was the winner of the competitive company drill and was privileged to carry the battalion colors. Distinguished service ribbons were presented to First Sergt. Edward J. McMahon of Hartford, Conn., for each member of the company. Capt. Lawrence received a set of officers insignia of rank for the company officers presented by Maj. James A. Lyon, commander of the Washington Chapter, Military Order of the World War.

The coveted award in the individual drill competition was presented to Pvt. Louis J. Wimsatt of Chevy Chase, Md., as the best trained cadet in the battalion.

Bishop Makes Presentation

The silver cup donated by the Civilian Military Education Fund was presented by Lieut. Col. Ralph C. Bishop, secretary of the fund. As "runner up" in the same competition, Corpl. Martin L. Garvey of Washington received the silver medal presented by Col. James G. Townsend, District commander of the Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States.

The winner of the company commanders' competition was the same Capt. Lawrence of Company C, who was adjudged the best of the company officers. Faithful Navigator Andrew L. Oehmann presented him the silver cup donated by the Washington General Assembly, Knights of Columbus.

To the winner of the platoon commander competition, Lieut. Donald D. Donahue, of Stamford, Conn., was awarded the silver cup of the District Department, Reserve Officers' Association, by Maj. Edward A. Kane, department president. It was the only competitive award won by cadets outside the Washington area.

Three members of the university band, Joseph Giebel, William McCarthy and John Tracy, were winners of Band "G" sweaters in recognition of two or more years of service.

Silver medals to the seven varsity rifle team members having the highest average scores for the season were awarded to Edward G. Kurdziel, Victor W. B. Walse, William Offutt, John Dettweiler, James Whatton, Murray Fox and Peter Aitchison. Minor "G" certificates from the athletic association were also awarded to the aforementioned and to Sydney Lawrence, Clayton Eakle and Harry Zimmerman of the varsity rifle team.

Freshmen Given Medals

Eleven members of the freshman rifle team having the highest average scores for the season received silver medals from the Rev. Richard J. Laws, dean of men. They were John A. Danaher, James E. Doyle, John J. Adrain, Thomas S. Gries, Albert J. Kuehn, Frank a Gallagher, Charles D. Beckman, John M. Fitzpatrick, Paul M. Stewart, Richard S. LeViuex and Robert F. Phillips.

The exercises marked the close of military activities at the Hilltop

Trade Groups Study Zig-Zag Pay Plan

Businessmen Express Interest In Program for Federal Workers

Washington business leaders yesterday expressed interest in legislation sponsored by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, to stagger Federal Government pay days.

Following an informal conference in his office with three Washington bankers, Capper announced that hearings on his bill will not be held for several weeks and that all interested groups will be given an opportunity to be heard.

Capper said the bankers did not express opposition to the bill, but desired that banking interests here be given an opportunity to determine what effect the measure might have on personnel arrangements in banks.

The bankers, it was learned, believe that a change from two to four Federal pay days, as proposed by the bill, may have important economic effects and that time is needed to determine what these effects are likely to be.

Edward Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, also has expressed an interest in the measure, Capper said. In a letter to the Senator, Shaw said the proposal was being considered by the association and that it was expected that the organization would have its views formulated in time for hearings.

Motor Throws Traffic Lights Off for an Hour

Traffic lights in most of the downtown area and as far north as U Street Northwest, went haywire for nearly an hour yesterday when a piece of mechanism at the Central Office was jarred out of commission.

The first of the lights became faulty shortly before noon. Trouble shooters found that the "signal pulse" at the Central Office, 400 block Eighth Street Northwest, had been disturbed, apparently by mortar let loose by workmen demolishing a partition.

After the trouble was located, less than two minutes were needed to repair the trouble.

FCC Orders Imperil Radio's Liberty, NAB Head Says

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 15 (AP).—The head of the National Association of Broadcasters declared tonight nothing was offered by Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission to change their belief "the very freedom of radio was being endangered."

Fly charged earlier at a press conference the N. A. B. was dominated by a small monopolistic group and challenged their right to speak for the entire radio industry.

"Two men run the show," Fly asserted, "and a couple of others do the chores."

Although he did not mention names, his remarks admittedly were directly at officials of the National Broadcasting Co. the Columbia Broadcasting System and the N. A. B. organization.

Called a "Dead Mackerel"

Fly asserted the association was dominated by a "Tinker-to-Evers-to-chance combination."

Earlier in the week the FCC chief had criticized David Sarnoff, of N. B. C., and William S. Paley, of C. B. S., for allegedly wielding too much control.

He said today the N. A. B.'s type of management reminded him "of a dead mackerel in the moonlight—it both shines and stinks."

Fly said he wanted to reiterate "in all sincerity, the whole effort of the FCC is to return to the industry its freedom and to make it a truly American system."

He made the statement before leaving for Washington, declaring he was denied an opportunity to answer a blistering attack by Mark Ethridge, Louisville radio and newspaper executive, on his agency at yesterday's session of the N. A. B. convention.

He said there was a "serious question" whether the N. A. B. still exists as an effective vehicle for the expression of the radio industry's opinion.

Previously, Fly had criticized the two networks for their control of 86 per cent of radio's night time power and wattage.

Neville Miller, N. A. B. president, who is leading the fight against the FCC's recent antimonopoly report ordering drastic changes in the radio networks' set-up, replied curtly that actions at the associaton's convention here this week prove "we have made up our minds."

"We believe that Government regulation is now in danger of becoming punitive and arbitrary Government control," he said.

The convention adopted a resolution urging the Senate to give prompt consideration to a resolution introduced by Senator White (Republican), of Maine, seeking an investigation of the whole radio structure, with a view to the enactment of a new radio law. The FCC also was requested to suspend operation of its new ruling pending the inquiry.

The board of directors of the Broadcasters Association was reorganized tonight without representation of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Candidate Withdraws

Fred Weber, Mutual general manager, withdrew his name as a candidate for reelection when three of the principal Mutual stockholders bolted the N. A. B. ranks Tuesday in a split over organization policy.

Edward Klauber, C. B. S., New York, and Frank M. Russell, N. B. C., Washington, D. C., were reelected directors-at-large of the other networks.

Other new directors elected at the nineteenth annual convention are James Shouse, WLW, Cincinnati; Joe Maland, WHO, Des Moines, Iowa; John Elmer, WCEM, Baltimore, Md.; James W. Woodruff, jr., WRBL, Columbus, Ga.; Don S. Elias, WWNC, Asheville, N. C., and C. W. Myers, KOIN, Portland, Oreg.

One of three cities—New York, New Orleans or Cleveland—will be selected by the executive board as the site of next year's convention.

Daylight saving time for the Nation was urged by the association.

Radio men attending the convention said the difference in time disrupts broadcasting schedules and curtails the effectiveness of radio in keeping the public informed.

Senate Pays Tribute to Smith

The United States Senate paid its respects yesterday to the 67 years William A. (Andy) Smith, 86, gave to the Government service. Smith, Congressional Record clerk, died of a heart attack Wednesday at his home at 3817 Jocelyn Street Northwest.

Senator Henrik Shipstead (Republican), of Minnesota, took the floor to express regret at the "passing . . . of a faithful public servant" who "never complained."

Referring to Mr. Smith by his nickname, Majority Leader Barkley lauded him as a man who "rendered to the Government of the United States a service which, if measured in value, would be equal to that of many other men who became more prominent in the public eye."

Draft Board Lowers Police Record Bar

Selective Service registrants with police records of lesser law violation convictions no longer will be barred from Army training, it was announced here yesterday by the national draft headquarters.

Following a far-reaching revision of the present "Class IV-F" classification, officials said only law violators convicted of the following offenses will be barred from active service:

Certain "heinous" crimes.

Chronic offenders with pronounced criminal tendencies and convicted on at least three offenses punishable by jail sentences.

Registrants now held in custody.

The "heinous" crimes were defined by officials as "treason, murder, rape, kidnaping, sodomy, pandering, any crime involving sex perversion, or any crime involving illegal dealing in narcotics or other habit-forming drugs."

The previous reading of the IV-F classification was "physically mentally or morally unfit."

The revision also was made, draft officers declared yesterday, to allow training for many men previously banned because of youthful violations which were felonies in their State but are not generally classed as such.

No accurate estimate of men who will now become eligible for induction could be made, it was said. One official, however, thought it will be "many thousands."

The IV-F category will continue irrespective of the change as a classification, it was said, for the "physically, mentally or morally unfit" and for registrants dishonorably discharged from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard.

Following, by board number, are the 93 white District registrants to be inducted today at Richmond:

1—Raymond C. Triplett, jr.; 2—James W. Dold, John A. O'Donnell, John M. Sari; 6—Max Fishman, George K. Snyder, Milton Gabe, Aulman L. Chandler; 7—Ben M. DeVol, Howard J. Linz, Dale F. Cleric Outlines Prayer Book Study Growth

A Nation-wide Episcopal movement for deeper study and application of the basic principles of the Prayer Book has been recently effected through a program begun here five years ago, the Rev. Albert J. Dubois said here last night.

He spoke at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle, at the opening of the spring conference of the Baltimore-Washington-Richmond area of the American Church Union. He is regional chairman and rector of St. Agnes' Parish, 46 Q Street Northwest.

Father Dubois explained that the project begun at St. Paul's is now spreading to 20 cities.

Conducting yesterday's conference, at which there were three periods of Prayer Book instruction, was the Rev. John S. Baldwin, O. H. C. Holy Cross father from West Park, N. Y. In his opening message he stressed the need of "harnessing spiritual power." The parley's general theme is "Forword in Power," a phase of the Episcopal Church-wide "forward in service" movement led by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

The late evening program was marked by instruction, evensong and benediction. The Rev. William Arnold, rector of Holy Comforter Church of St. Andrew's Parish, led hymn singing. Supper was served between instruction periods.

Among American Church Union officials participating, in addition to Father Dubois, were:

Sabath Presses Agency Transfer

Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday asked the House to direct President Roosevelt to transfer nondefense agencies from Washington "to Chicago or elsewhere."

Sabath, whose home is Chicago, introduced a resolution which would authorize the President to make the transfer as a means of relieving Washington of "overcrowding and lack of office facilities . . . serious shortage in hotel accommodations, rooms, houses and restaurant facilities."

House Passes $24,846,047 Bill For Salaries, Legislative Fund

The House received and quickly passed by a voice vote yesterday a $24,846,047 appropriation bill for the legislative branch of the Government, including funds for payment of salaries of Representatives and Senators and members of their office staffs.

The appropriation, though $2,346,823 below estimates of the Budget Bureau, was still $278,817 above expenditures for the current fiscal year and marked the second increase in current spending to be approved in a major supply bill since Secretary of the Treasury Morgenothau called for $1,000,000,000 slash in nondefense items.

The largest single reduction in estimates was made in requests for funds for improvements in the Capitol, the Library of Congress and the Botanic Gardens. A total of $1,590,148 was eliminated in estimates covering, among other items, reconstruction of the Capitol terraces, repaving of roads and reconstruction of old sanitary sewers, removal of the statue of John Marshall from the west front of the Capitol to the Supreme Court building and elimination of fire hazards in the old Library building.

The committee recommended, and the House approved, expenditure of $5,000 for a complete Capitol sewer survey.

In addition to money for the $10,000 yearly salaries of Representatives and Senators, the bill carried $3,825,927 for the Library of Congress, $2,825,071 for the architect of the Capitol and $5,197,000 for the Government Printing Office.

The measure carried the usual provision of appropriation bills aimed at elimination of aliens from Government pay rolls. An exception was made for the Library of Congress where not more than ten aliens may be employed at tasks requiring special qualifications for which United States citizens or persons who have taken out naturalization papers cannot be found.

Hearings on the bill, released yesterday, disclosed that Library of Congress officials agreed with members of the Appropriations Committee to refuse to compile voting records of candidates for office for use by their opponents.

In the hearings, Representative Powers (Republican), of New Jersey, questioned Dr. Luther H. Evans, chief assistant librarian, about the library compiling the legislative record of former Senator William H. King, of Utah, during last year's campaign in which King was defeated in the primaries by Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, who subsequently won the Senatorial election.

If Run-down—
try this I.Q. check on yourself
1 How much iron in the body? A. About 3 or 4 grams—or about the amount of iron in a small nail.
2 Sources of iron for the body? A. Beef juice, parsley, fresh lima beans, canned apple butter, bran, beef liver, molasses, egg-yolk, etc.
3 How many red-blood-cells has a (a) man—(b) woman—(c) child? A. Man about 5 millions to cubic millimeter. Woman about 4½ millions to cubic millimeter. Child about 4½ millions to cubic millimeter.
4 Healthy average of hemoglobin in the red-blood-cells? A. Man—100%. Woman—90%. Child—82%.
5 How does a lowered blood count affect our health? A. Reduces energy, weakens the body, lowers resistance to disease.
6 Do our diets supply enough iron? A. Many times they do not. We then have nutritional deficiencies. This deficiency will not strike people dead. It will reduce the level of vitality, lower the living, thinking, working and enjoying capacities of a people.
7 Is iron a MUST element for the body? A. Yes.
8 How much intake iron should a body have a day? A. Adults—15 milligrams. Children over 6 years—10 to 15 milligrams. Expectant or nursing mothers—about 20 milligrams.
9 How can I tell if I need more iron? A. Paleness is often an indication, so is loss of appetite, loss of weight, lack of energy.
10 Is appetite also a factor to my health and how does it work? A. Food keeps the body in constant repair as well as furnishing body heat and energy. Appetite and stomach digestion go hand in hand. To make use of the food eaten it must be digested and to be digested, the appetite must function in a happy pleasing manner.
11 What is a good way to improve appetite and blood strength? A. Bear in mind iron absorption is dependent to a great extent upon its form and solubility in the acids of the stomach. S.S.S. is designed to attain this end.
S.S.S. is ideal for those wishing to build back strength and energy as Nature intended . . . it improves appetite . . . revives lagging stomach digestion . . . gives you the iron in a form which may be absorbed.
If you tire easily, lack a keen appetite, look pale and worn-out, have lost weight . . . a frequent sign that your stomach digestion is poor and your blood is weak due to lack of iron . . . then do try correcting these conditions—in the simple easy way—by starting a course of S.S.S. Tonic.
S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need, in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection. A trial will convince you. Begin a course of S.S.S. Tonic treatment at once and note how quickly your strength will come back.
S.S.S. is time-tested . . . scientists have proved it, too. At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. Ask for the big 20-oz. bottle . . . at a saving. Remember, S.S.S. Tonic helps to "make you feel like yourself again."

Bill Cunningham's Column

Real America Is in Small Towns . . .

By Bill Cunningham

Newport, Vt.—It does something to the United States inside a fellow to get away up in one of these towns and meet the real America. That's where it is. We haven't got it in the cities, especially in the big, teeming cities along the Atlantic seaboard.

Our focus isn't clear on any major international issue in these great centers where so many different nationalities are massed. Maybe, from one way of looking at it, ours is the truer picture of the knotted tangle of backgrounds, racial streams, conflicting ideologies and ancient atavistic hatreds and suspicions that are the problem, and possibly the picture of a challenged United States.

But one senses a definite pull-back in the cities, differing interpreations of such words as "Americanism," "democracy," and a sharp, if often sullen, variance in ideas concerning the path along which wisdom, real defense and even our national safety lie. One can sense the difference in atmospheres by riding a few hours.

Lindbergh and Wheeler are heroes to large portions of the cities. They're meddlers and mongers of appeasement to the folks up the macadam. When the voice of America really speaks, it will speak from at least 100 miles back from the coast line. I don't know what it will say, but it will come from the south and the west and the hills to the northward.

Engines With Fourth Speed

It already seems to be making up and the cry in the distance is "To Hell

SENATOR WHEELER

With Hitler," drowning out that manufactured motto, "All Aid to Britain," maybe this is good, maybe bad. I'm not opinionating, but reporting at the moment. I've been out there, and recently up there and nobody can tell me what I have and haven't heard.

But that's all something else at the moment.

I, for one, haven't given up thinking of America in terms of peaceful existence, of fine and friendly men and women who've found something pretty close to the common denominator of what life can and should be in a well-ordered world. I'm a city fellow, myself, and I have no desire for any other sort of existence, but I frankly envy those whose engines have a fourth speed they can slip into, at least providing sufficient traction to represent progress and still enough leisure to enjoy the scenery.

And it does something to you and for you to hear a guy such as Dan Branon, Newport real estate man, with the evidences of comfortable, successful and friendly living all about him, say, "I left Vermont as a kid because they told me there wasn't any future here. I roamed the wide world, and made a good living in all of it. When the market crashed in 1929, I had a good export-import business in Cuba and was doing all right selling insurance. But I thought I'd come back and see what happened to the United States.

Refused $16,000 Job

"Well, I traveled all the way up as far as Connecticut before I saw anybody really living, or so it looked to me. The insurance company offered me a job in Boston at $16,000 a year. I told them I didn't want to tie myself down that hard. They thought it was the town and asked me how about Philadelphia. I told them I didn't want that, either.

"I came on up to Vermont, and for the first time saw folks living as if they weren't scared to death. The end of the world hadn't come for them. I kept traveling right on through it, until I danged near got out the other end of it and into Canada, but here I stopped. This was the place I was looking for. I didn't know a soul. Nobody ever came into a place colder. That was nine years ago.

"I'm making more money now than they offered me to go to Boston, and we've got everything here you Boston fellows have. And then we've got all this . . ."

His arm-sweep took in the lakes, the mountains, the outboards, the streams, the folks fishing on the bridge, and the trails leading into Canada. Here wasn't some old, tired duffer looking for a quiet port in which to clip his coupons. Here was the insurance man who sold Babe Ruth his annuities, finding success and content in his own home State—Hard-scrabble Vermont—after ranging the world and sizing up the whole show.

That was Dan's history.

A dozen other equally happy-looking local burghers seemed to have their own. If there are only just enough of those, we're all right no matter what makes up. Maybe that means, if there are just enough Newport, Vermonts. This is a great country, after all.

Mrs. McKeever, widow of Albert F. McKeever, is survived by four children in addition to Mrs. Warthen: Porter F. McKeever, Kensington, Md.; Galen McKeever, Silver Spring, Md.; Andrew O. McKeever, Fairmount, W. Va.; Mrs. Neel M. Massey, Glenbrook, Conn.

Rites Tomorrow For W. K. Weaver, Victim of Crash

Funeral services for William K. He suffered head and chest injuries, police said. Also injured was his brother-in-law, Woodrow Tolson, of the Meridian Place address, recently released from the hospital.

An employe of the Potts & Callahan Construction Co. here, Mr. Weaver was a native of Calverton. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Weaver, and a young son, both of Washington. Also surviving is his mother, Mrs. Addie E. Weaver, of Calverton.

Daulton Mann, Grace Officer, Dies

Daulton Mann, 48-year-old executive vice president of the Grace Steamship Line, died yesterday at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, Mass., it was learned by friends here yesterday.

Mr. Mann, who was well known in local shipping circles, had been ill several months. He was a director of the American Merchant Marine Institute, American Bureau of Shipping and the American Steamship Owners' Protective and Indemnity Association.

Wheeler Urges U. S. Peace Plea

Copyright by New York Times

Under the assumption that the flight of Rudolf Hess to Scotland had shaken morale in Germany, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and leader of the Senate non-interventionists, proposed yesterday that President Roosevelt seize the opportunity to try to negotiate peace out of the European war.

The Montana Senator accompanied his suggestion with an attack on "bloodthirsty warmongers," and added that if it was "appeasement" to propose peace at this time, he was perfectly willing to be called an "appeaser."

Contract Bridge

A pretty trick to provide for adverse trump distribution was noted by the Cleveland expert, Edwin T. Randall, on these cards. The contract was five diamonds, but declarer managed two extra tricks due to a favorable opening lead and his own clever playing. Neither side vulnerable, South was dealer:

	♠ A K J 5 3 ♡ 9 3 ◇ Q 10 5 3 ♣ 9 6
♠ 10 6 4 ♡ J 10 6 5 ◇ 8 6 4 2 ♣ 8 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 9 8 7 2 ♡ A K Q 7 ◇ 9 ♣ J 5 4
	♠ none ♡ 8 4 2 ◇ A K J 7 ♣ A K Q 10 7 2

West made the poor opening lead of the four of spades; declarer took the spade ace and threw off a heart. Next he played a low spade and trumped with his ace of diamonds.

Provided the club suit would split favorably, he had assured himself of 13 tricks even though four diamonds were lodged in one hand against him. He drew trumps, throwing a second heart on dummy's fourth diamond, and his last loser in the suit on the spade king.

If the diamonds had divided 3-2 in the opponents' hands, declarer could have drawn trumps, discarded dummy's hearts on his good clubs and ruffed a heart to make the same number of tricks, but his plan was certain.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

MODERN QUARTET VOCALING is nothing like that in grandpop's day, says Harry Mitchell, leader of Mayfair's new Chordsmen, who both sing and play as a foursome. "Old-time quartets always bore down on the lower register," says Harry. "We find that 1941 tunes go better with a high tenor, tenor, barytone and bass. There's more lightness and melody in the combination" . . . The Chordsmen felt at home in Washington during their first Mayfair afternoon. Friends who'd met them in other cities immediately telephoned and called. A verra clubby evening resulted . . . That single silver lock in Maestro Mitchell's hair is an heirloom. His father had an exactly similar lock at the age of 18.

Mary Jane Brown, brilliant little tap stepper, who's been featured in George White's Scandals and other big musicals, will open at Paul Young's next Tuesday. Jerry and Turk will be held over until June 9.

TONY PASTOR, who spark-plugged the original Artie Shaw band, will bring his own orchestra to Turner's Arena on Sunday night. No less an authority than Benny Goodman, king of swingsters, has called Tony's tenor saxophoning the greatest in the world. Since the Pastor band was organized two years ago, it has made a name for itself via records and one-nighters. Turner's Arena will be arranged for dancing for the Tony Pastor visit and it should be a wonderful night for the rug-cutters.

THE VERSATILE CHAPEAU. The Troika's Emil Boreo twists his pale gray, black-banded felt hat into the semblance of a cook's cap, the headgear of a French lawyer and a soldier's cap. In each case the illusion is perfect. . . . Helen Hamilton is planning a big party for the Troika closing on Saturday, May 24.

HOOPS AND HAND BALANCING are on the diversion menu at Casino Royal. The hoop dance of Shannon and Mein is a thriller and how they avoid tumbling on their noses is beyond guessing. The Two Valois, a pair of boys who look as though they're barely out of their teens, are the last word in acrobats, perform modern feats of strength and skill that earn ovations at every show. The svelte Clair Rae Girls are prancing in a military cape number that makes soldiering seem glamorous.

Hal Yates, prominent Victor recording artist, arrived in the Carlton cocktail lounge yesterday in place of the originally booked Three Debs who had to drop out at the last minute. His songs and piano-ing, both sleekly polished, registered immediately. Hal comes to the Carlton direct from Manhattan's snooty Hotel Lombardy in the Park Avenue sector.

GORGEOUS RAIMENT. Milton Davis and his orchestra will bloom forth in their new summer uniforms today—tan suits, green shirts and cravats in a melange of tan, green and bois de rose . . . Most beautiful gown we've seen this year is the cloud-like pale pink chiffon with a floating border of pink ostrich worn by Dancer Mignon at the Shoreham . . . The girl half of Lotus' dancing Chadwicks looks like a Vogue cover in a sinuous formal of jersey in two tones of gray, with silver belt and a huge brilliant clip . . . Hi Hat's Carmela Lazari is shopping around for a beige sports outfit to harmonize with tan and brown summer uniforms of Jimmy Summerville's Four M's.

METRONOMES NEW GREETER is Alex Youman, who replaces blonde Boris, now doing squads right in some Army camp. Alex was with the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels for several years, later with the Mayflower. He's among the most efficient and agreeable of our town's head waiters.

GLEN ECHO'S ROOF GARDEN is now open for dining. You can enjoy all the life and color of the amusement park scene while taking your best girl to dinner before enjoying an evening of dancing to Paul Kain's music in the Spanish Ballroom. Echo's Crystal Pool opens on May 24, making possible a three-way big evening of swimming, dining and dancing.

Joe Collins, leader of the Neptune Room's Mad Hatters, is a whiz at selecting rarely pretty and appropriate tunes for anniversary, birthday and farewell parties. He suits them to the person honored. Thus, at a recent goodby party for a charming girl, he played "To You, Sweetheart, Aloha."

THOSE SATURDAY LUNCHEONS. When you take off for that gala Saturday luncheon that's such a smart weekend start for all Government girls—remember that Cafe Caprice is glamorous (and so are its French pancakes), that Don Carper's Four plays from 1 to 4 . . . That the King Cole Room is dim and cozy and Evelyn Knight will be singing from 1 to 2:30 . . . That luncheons in the Mayflower Lounge are verra swank and something to write home about . . . That luncheons in Olmsted's Grill are planned by a celebrity, Eugene Bianchi, former chef of the Archduke Otto of Austria . . . That Ciro's luncheons feature authentic Italian cuisine, very savory.

JUST FARM BOYS are both Carl Fink and Charles Braden, owners of the new Plymouth. They both worked their ten hours a day on Virginia and Maryland farms before they were graduated into the restaurant business.

PERSONAL COLUMNETTE. Lounge Riviera's attractive cashier is named Margaret Cease. With that name she shouldn't have to say "Now, you stop!" . . . The handsome action photograph on the back of Madrillon's new menus is the work of Adolph Klein, of the Madrillon staff . . . Esther Zimmer, Anchor Room's beauteous blonde, is quite the horseback rider. Her pet mount is "Bill," the big bay belonging to mixer "Chuck" O'Donnell, who's a farmer on the side . . . Joe Moser, the 6-foot, 4-inch saxophonist of George Stein's River Bend band, is the tallest musician in town. He's only 19 years old and is still growing.

Evelyn Knight of the King Cole Room will be the guest of honor as well as the prize singer there tonight at a party celebrating her third anniversary as K. C. R.'s star entertainer.

KAVAKOS' WEEK-ENDING begins tonight, with the usual explosion of good times. The new show features a group of Baltimore's zippiest entertainers, will remain over Sunday night. There'll be country dancing on Sunday from 5 to 8, with a real hill billy band.

SWEET 'GALE. Tommy Lawrence, singer with Rodd Raffell's Nightingale band, popped in remarking, "Just say the 'Gale is sweeter than ever. The honeysuckle is in bloom and the place smells like a florist's shop."

Burroughs School Fair

A May fair will be held at the John Burroughs School, under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association from 3:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. today. Refreshments and novelties will be sold at booths in the school auditorium.

Browns Blank Nats, 7 to 0; Ferrell Traded

This Morning

With Skirley Povich

Bedwell luck, synonymous with long shots romping home at box car figures, seems to be holding out nicely. Around Maryland tracks, beware of Bedwell has long been a treasured axiom. The suspicion has been that his entries carried not only saddles and jockeys, but alarm clocks. They had a habit of waking up so opportunely, especially when the odds were very worthwhile.

POVICH

The veteran trainer's luck didn't fail him the other day in the high councils of the Maryland Racing Commission. Bedwell was under investigation. The commission veterinarian testified that Ginoca, a Bedwell horse that won a race at Havre de Grace, had been stimulated by benzedrine. Was Bedwell suspended "indefinitely," as have been other trainers who figured in similar cases? He was not.

Bedwell drew a mere 60-day suspension. He was not ruled off the track. He was not denied the privileges of the course or the clubhouse. His owner's badge was not taken up. The entry of his stable of horses was not refused. His suspension, announced on May 5, was made retroactive for 7 days, for some reason. The old line, beware of Bedwell, was taken sort of literally by the Maryland Racing Commission.

Member Voted to Exonerate Bedwell

One commission member voted to exonerate Bedwell on the evidence offered despite the fact that the chemist to whom the saliva taken from the Bedwell horse after the race was submitted, testified that his analysis "indicated conclusively the presence of a drug or chemical compound known as benzedrine."

No quack is Chemist Charles E. Morgan, who since 1935 has been the consulting chemist to the New York Racing Commission. Before saliva tests were introduced in America, Morgan was sent to France at the expense of President Joseph D. Widener, of the Belmont track, to study the operations of the saliva tests on French tracks. The reports he brought back led to adoption of the tests on American tracks.

Benzedrine, the drug used, according to Chemist Morgan, has been widely hailed in recent months as a potent relief for migraine headaches of humans, incidentally. The ironical twist is that it has resulted in a headache of a sort for Bedwell.

Ironical also is it that Bedwell came to his small measure of grief on an occasion when it was no long-shot winner that he put across. Ginoca returned no fancy mutuel. The horse was, in fact, the popular favorite in the race which he won and in which he was found to be stimulated.

It was a flimsy sort of line that the commission seemingly drew in refusing to deal harshly with Bedwell and rule him off indefinitely. They did rule him off as a trainer, but it seems that he is also the owner of his horses and it has not been the custom to rule off owners. The reasoning seems to be that whereas Trainer Bedwell was guilty to the extent that one of his horses was stimulated, Owner Bedwell was innocent of any wrongdoing. It is all very simple, huh?

Wasdell Going Great Guns

Incidentally, it would seem that the taking of a saliva test would not be remiss in the case of Jimmy Wasdell, the former Nat who is now the slugging hero of the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers. Something or somebody seems to have stimulated Wasdell very suddenly. When last seen, as an American League flop, he was hitting an anemic .187 and no American League club would have him at the waiver price.

Last May, Clark Griffith staggered to his chair for support when General Manager Larry McPhail of the Dodgers offered him $20,000 for Wasdell. The Nats' owner's extreme hope at the time was that some silly American League club would take Wasdell off his hands at $7,500 waiver figure. Griffith accepted McPhail's offer in such haste that McPhail blinked at the speed of modern telegraphic communication.

Advised by newspapermen that McPhail had bought Wasdell for the Dodgers, Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn club also blinked. When he was told that McPhail had bought a .187-hitting first baseman to play the outfield for the Dodgers, Durocher delivered this classic crack: "Can he cook?"

No joking matter, however, has been Wasdell's work for the Dodgers this season. Currently he is the leading hitter on the club. He has either reformed completely, or his case is a sad commentary on the National as a big league. The Griffith Stadium flop has become a Flatbush hero and that's just fine, for he is a nice sort of lad.

Just an Old Cowhand at Heart

New York, May 15.—You must go back to a lustier, hardier day in boxing to find a bloke as free of rein as Lew Jenkins, the sunken-eyed Texas Maverick who fights tough Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia Negro, tomorrow night at the Garden.

CONSIDINE

He's a rootin'-tootin' guy whose antics recall those of Harry Greb and Mickey Walker, more than they recall the sassiety horseplay of Max Baer. He is burning both ends and the middle also. Fighting is a lark to him, a more savage department of the perpetual party he has been on ever since he first got a little change in his pocket.

Free for the time of the restraining hand of Hymie Caplin, Jenkins has been setting a dizzy pace, which is the reason why Montgomery is favored over him. Lew's perfectly named "supervisor" at the moment is Willie Ketchum. That's a question which Willie himself would like to be able to answer. The night before Lew's last fight against Lou Ambers Willie and Lew were taking a walk around the block. When they completed a circuit, Lew said idly, "You go inside, Willie, or you'll catch a cold. I want to walk around once more."

The next time the frantically searching Willie saw Lew was the next night, when Lew arrived at the Garden with some alarmingly convivial friends, just in time to get dressed. Lew was never better than that night. He knocked Ambers into retirement with a crushing 2-fisted attack, and thus became a little more firmly convinced that all this talk about conditioning was just talk.

A good proportion of the scars on Lew's seamy face weren't put there by gloves. Lew is more bottle-scarred than battle-scarred, including one circular scar around his left eye—put there by an ever-loving pal who broke a beer bottle over the edge of a cheap bar and stuck the jagged remainder in Lew's face.

Lew Fiddles While Handlers Burn

Willie ketchum, who is doing awful penance for his sins right here on earth, set some kind of a record for persuasion the other day when he finally managed to get lew's motorcycle away from him. Other champions want sleek, streamline autos. Lew wanted a motorcycle. So he got one, drove it like a mad man and from Florida to New York, and petrified the promoter and his henpecked handlers by desperate tricks on it, around his Pompton lakes training quarters. His favorite was riding around those bumpy neighboring roads on it, standing up on the seat. He's going to learn to ride it, standing on his head, after this fight.

Lew's idea of a nice evening out is to make the rounds of tough tenth avenue pubs where the juke boxes are loud and the beverages strong and cheap. He likes to break out his git-tar, too, and twang away at the heartbreaking songs of the Lone Pray-ree. He picks up weird companions on these jaunts. He brought one of them over to Lindy's one night, after calling up about 3 a. m. to hold a couple of fight writers there. Lew and the stiff arrived at 3:45, had a couple more and Lew got his friend to do an imitation of Edward G. Robinson and one of "the Polish count what was drunk."

The Champ's a Thespian, Too

Jenkins watched transfixed while the boon companion went through his clumsy routine, and roared appreciatively. Then the companion fell back in the chair and said, "Lew. Give 'em Jimmy Cagney going to the electric chair in 'Angels Wit' Doity Faces.'" So Lew performed, screwing his leathery face into a look of agony that even the Broadway hams who infest the joint at that time of morning recognized as awful acting.

Lew isn't training much for Montgomery, even though Bob

Bloodworth's Single Ruins No-Hitter; Chase, Masterson Routed by St. Louis

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats made a hit yesterday—but not with Griffith Stadium fans. They made one lonesome, solitary hit against the pitching of big Dennis Galehouse and took a 7-to-0 beating from the Browns.

Jimmy Bloodworth thrust a center-field single between Galehouse and no-hit fame with two out in the seventh inning. The Nats' batting attack began and ended with that blow. Galehouse, with a reputation for mediocrity in his six years in the big leagues, was having the peak afternoon of his career.

The big right-hander's baffling assortment contained tantalizing curve balls, a blazing fast one on occasion, and a confusing side-arm pitch that wrecked the Nats' right-handed hitters. The Nats were popping up his pitches or beating them into the dirt for easy outs. St. Louis outfielder did not have a difficult chance.

With Galehouse pitching the way he was, it was no contest. The Browns were belaboring Ken Chase, and his successor, Walter Masterson and the Nats were unable to advance a runner past second base. Only three Washington athletes reached second, in fact, and on each occasion they were helped along by a St. Louis error.

Esty Pours It On

Little Bobby Estallela, one-time Cuban favorite of Washington fans, poured it onto the Nats yesterday in his debut here in St. Louis uniform. Estallela staked the Browns to their first three runs, driving in two and scoring the third himself.

Galehouse walked three batters and hit one, but he was always in control of the ball game, and exceedingly unperturbed by three errors behind him. Neither was he unsteadied by the fact that First Baseman George McQuinn and Shortstop Alan Strange suffered leg injuries during the game and were forced to retire in favor of substitutes.

Galehouse, whose record showed only 34 victories against 39 defeats in the big leagues during a six-year career with Cleveland and Boston, was held in such low esteem last winter that he was sold to the Browns by the Red Cox at the $7,500 waiver price, or less.

There were scattered boos for Bloodworth when the Nats' second baseman interrupted Galehouse's bid for a no-hitter in the seventh, and throughout the late innings the big pitcher was applauded by the once hostile Griffith Stadium fans.

Galehouse removed all doubt of his ultimate triumph when in the sixth inning he cleaned the loaded

Boston, May 15.—The Cleveland Indians captured the opening tilt of a three-game series with the Boston Red Sox today, 6-4 but were forced to rush Ace Bob Feller into action to quell a dangerous ninth inning uprising before they salted the game away.

Lou Finney started the ninth by batting for relief hurler Mike Ryba and belted a clean single into right field off Relief Pitcher Joe Heving. Dom Dimaggio drew a base on balls

Rippy, Burnett Lose In Chevy Chase Golf

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Claude Rippy, the tournament favorite, and Volney Burnett, the defending champion, are back selling clothes and fighting fires toda as the thirty-first annual Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament reaches the semifinal round without their expected presence.

Rippy went out late yesterday afternoon when M. Parker Nolan, the reigning Maryland amateur champion, knocked in a 30-foot putt for a birdie on the twentieth hole to win a match which included good and bad golf, 1 up.

Burnett was eliminated a few minutes before Ralph Bogart, his final-round victim last year, who took advantage of two Burnett lapses and a birdie of his own making in the space of six holes on the back nine to win, 2 and 1.

The other faces in the semifinals are new ones, George Coleman, a resident of Miami, Oklahoma and a club champion in Miami, Fla., and Ken Lafferty, Manor's good-looking middle 70-golfer who was as surprised as anyone else to find himself in the thick of the title scrap.

Bogart Near Par

Thus this morning it will be Bogart, the District Amateur champion, against Lafferty, the tournament dark horse and Nolan, one of the ranking simon-pures here for years, against Coleman, the out-of-town threat, for the President Taft Trophy. The winners will meet in the finals at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and the nineteenth hole choices are Bogart and Nolan.

Lafferty was the first to reach the round of four. He required 20 holes in the morning before cutting a 9-iron shot over a pine tree to beat Bob Morris with a par four, but Ken didn't dally in the quarter-finals. He won the first five holes over George Miller and coasted to a 5 and 3 triumph. Lafferty has qualified several times for championship flights but never before

Chisox Hand Yanks Fifth Loss in Row

By the Associated Press

New York, May 15.—The Chicago White Sox humiliated the Yankees with a 13-to-1 shellacking today for New York's fifth consecutive defeat.

Home runs, which cost the Yanks both their most recent games with Cleveland, again were prominent as Joe Kuhel, Taft Wright and Billy Knickerbocker smacked out round-trippers in the 14-hit assault on Pitchers Ernie Bonham, Charles Stanceu and Norman Branch.

Knickerbocker and Myril Hoag, both former Yankees, each accounted for four of the Chicago hits. The attack was so widespread the Sox scored in all but two innings.

Their big inning brought four runs on two hits in the seventh, while the one-time invincible Yanks looked as helpless as anyone could remember.

The victory lifted Chicago back into second place in the American League.

Catcher Goes To Browns For Kenned y

St. Louis Also Sells Radcliff to Tigers; New Nat Hurler Is 32 Years Old

Rick Ferrell, Washington's No. 1 catcher since 1937, was traded to the St. Louis Browns yesterday in a deal that brought Pitcher Vernon Kennedy to the Nats.

The trade was announced following yesterday's ball game between the two clubs. Earlier in the afternoon, Owner Donald Barnes of the Browns spent an hour in session with Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats.

It was the Crowns' second deal of the day. During the morning they announced that Outfielder Rip Radcliff, fourth leading hitter in the league last year, had been sold to the Detroit Tigers for a cash consideration after other American League clubs have waived on him.

Nats May Have Got Cash

It was not announced that cash passed between the St. Louis and Washington clubs in the Ferrell-Kennedy deal, but Barnes was quoted earlier in the day as saying that "the cash received in the sale of Radcliff would be used to swing another deal on which the team is working."

Ferrell's departure from the Nats breaks up the famed knuckle-ball battery of Dutch Leonard and Ferrell and the task of receiving Leonard's knuckler will now devolve on Catcher Jake Early.

In Kennedy, the Nats obtained for the 35-year-old Ferrell, a one-time sensational pitcher who won 21 games for the White Sox in 1936, including a no-hit performance. A former intercollegiate pentathlon champion, Kennedy is 32 years. He has been a fast-ball pitcher with a tendency toward wildness.

After being traded to Detroit in 1937 in the deal that brought Gerry Walker to the White Sox, Kennedy a year later was shipped by the Tigers to the Browns in company with four other players and cash for Buck Newsom. With th Browns his losses far outweighed his victories in the last three seasons. He won only nine games in 1938 while losing 17; he lost 20 while winning only 19 in 1939, and last season he collected 17 defeats against 12 victories.

Deal Is Surprise

Thus far this season, Kennedy has won three games and lost three.

A tall right-hander, Kennedy was unique among big leaguers during his term with Chicago, living in a luxurious trailer. Last season he figured in a fistic episode when he was challenged by Catcher Birdie Tebbetts, of the Tigers, in the Browns' dressing room. The two players fought for several minutes.

Ferrell had generally been deemed a fixture with the Nats, especially after the failure of Rookie Al Evans to justify training camp promise this season. He was Leonard's choice as the receiver of his knuckle ball and was credited with much of the success of the knuckle pitch. He was batting 281 and was among the club's leaders in driving in runs until he

177 Horses Entered in Washington Show Opening Today

$500 Jumper Stake Today's Feature; Competition Seen As Unusually Stiff

By Anne Hagner

With the content value of the Meadowbrook show grounds increasing at the rate of many thousand dollars an hour while horses arrived yesterday and early this morning, the Washington Horse Show will begin at 9 today with competition that has been estimated by officials as "twice as stiff as any in the past ten years of the event." Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to attend tomorrow.

A record entry of 177 hunters, jumpers and ponies has packed the show barns to capacity for today's, tomorrow's and Sunday's sessions at the picturesque Chevy Chase, Md., location.

Early arrivals at Meadowbrook yesterdy, composed mostly of exhibitors and their employes, were frankly amazed at the unusually long entry lists that faced them in the various classes. Lolling about informally on fence rails, overturned buckets, bales of hay or anything else in lieu of chairs, riders declared that ribbons were going to be harder to win than the Irish Sweepstakes.

500 Class Featured

As stable attendants arranged colorful tackrooms, groomed their charges, and generally made final preparations for the next three days, owners compared freshly printed programs to point out the size of most of the major events.

The $500 jumper stake, feature of tomorrow afternoon's performance, has attracted 35 horses, including such widely known leapers as Mrs. Elizabeth Correll's Lew Dunbar, C. V. Henkel, jr.'s Red Sails and Tar Boy, from North Carolina, Salmo, owned by Billy Steinkraus, winner of the American Horse Show Association's medal for horsemanship in 1940; Gordon Wright's Capt. D'Arcy, Virginia-bred open horse now stabled in Westchester County, N. Y.; Mrs. Altemus Whitney's First Knight and On Trial, Springsbury Farm's Big Boy and Billy Do, Janey Briggs' Marina and Hillcoin, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, Robert R. Egan's My Girl and Port Light, the Fort Myer Horse Show team's High Time, Smacko, Black Beauty, Enterprise and Clipped Wings, Dr. E. J. Laing's Foxy Morn and Florismart, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jonas' Sonaj, Joseph Vansrio's Jack Frost, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Samuel Bogley's Ringmaster, and Hi-Rock's Lady Dimmes and Hi-Rock Pompo.

Largest class of the entire show, surprisingly enough, is the limit hunters' outing, in which 43 confirmation horses will meet. The event, scheduled for 10:15 this morning, will be preceded by the coveted model hunters' class, the warm-up jumping and the limit hunters.

Open jumping fans today will have two chances to witness the early division of ribbons among the stratosphere-minded, first at 1:30 in the opening phase of the three-day jumpers' event, and later in the afternoon in the knockdown-and-out. Both count toward the jumper championship, which will not be awarded until late Sunday afternoon.

Two important hunter classes also are scheduled for this afternoon—the open-to-all, in which confirmation counts 40 per cent, and the open working hunters, judged only on maners, pace, way of going, performance and suitability.

Gee Ray Bee Entered

Among the conformation mounts are Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle's Gee Ray Bee, Deborah Rood's Moving Picture and Dublin Venture, Mrs. Sally Jones Sexton's Muffin Man and Jitney Jingle, Mrs. Correll's Dalchoolin and Scotchwood, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr.'s, Demas, Mrs. Whitney's The Bear, Robert S. Waters' Royalty II, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Renwick's Pamuck, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Glamour Man, Charles Lang's Post Meridian, Nancy Marie Shaw's Sanamore, Marbert Farm's Red Haste, Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Linder's Beau Perk, Betty Couzens' Repulsion and Point O' View Farm's Bourbon Lad.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE FOR WASHINGTON HORSE SHOW

9 a. m.—Model hunters, warm-up jumpers, limit jumpers, limit hunters, open working hunters, lightweight hunters, middle and heavyweight hunters, luncheon recess.

1:30 p. m.—Three-day jumper event (first phase), open hunters, officers' jumpers, green hunters, local working hunters, knockdown-and-out, open working hunters, suitable hunters, troopers' jumpers.

Fishing with JACK BELL

SPECIAL WEEKEND WEATHER REPORT

Winds becoming fresh, southwest, and partly cloudy weather Friday. Outlook Saturday fresh southwest winds probably shifting to northwest by afternoon with scattered showers.

Kip Farrington, well-known big game sportsman and writer, established a new world's record with his catch on Saturday, May 8, of a 425-pound striped marlin, largest ever taken on a 9-thread line. The prize haul, taken on a 6-ounce rod, was made in the waters of Tocopilla, Chile, known as one of the best fishing grounds for marlin and other big game fishing.

JACK BELL

In addition to taking the 425 pounder, Farrington also caught a 322-pound marlin, using the same tackle, cabled advices received here stated.

Until it was broken by Kip Farrington, the previous world's record for striped marlin was held by Robert Mankowski, who caught a 348 pounder on a 9-thread line off the coast of Catalina, Calif., in 1933.

We've been trying to encourage in-shore fishing from row boats or nearby piers for early season hard heads. It looks like we are getting some results, from reports coming in.

Tom Heyoh and George Holland, Washington anglers, fished from the pier at Chesapeake Beach early this week. Notwithstanding the high wind and rough waters, they had very good luck compared with other anglers on the pier. They caught 38 large hardheads and one rock fish. In order to get 'em though, it seems they pulled a trick out of their bag, for the other fishermen were using handlines and short rods. Tom and George, using long surf rods, making long casts and blood worms for bait, were able to catch them when the others could not.

Recently we heard a discussion that a water snake cannot catch a trout. The procedure is very simple. A snake can hang over a limb in a trout pool and strike lightning quick at any passing trout. When they are really hungry, they do it even more efficiently.

A hungry water snake merely drops into a trout pool, watching the trout go into hiding under a rock or bank. It selects a trout of proper size and enters the trout's lair where the trout, feeling safe, stays quiet until nabbed. Many times we have seen snakes coil around a rock, strike in the water—and come up with trout in their jaws.

We state without fear that water snakes right now, under present low water conditions on our nearby trout streams, are a trout's worst enemy, not excepting man, because man only fishes occasionally, while a water snake fishes every day, all summer long, in or out of season.

Therefore we say to anglers, kill at least two water snakes a season and you will save more trout.

Phils Score Four in Ninth, Beat Reds, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 15.—The Cincinnati Reds blew up like a penny balloon in the ninth inning tonight, giving the Philadelphia Phillies four runs and their third straight victory over the world champions this year. The score was 5 to 4.

For the 18,814 fans the only relieving feature of the game was the slugging of the Reds' newcomers, Ernie Koy and Chuck Aleno. Koy, bought from St. Louis for $35,000 last night, banged out a double and a single, and Aleno, recalled from Indianapolis to give third baseman Bill Werber's trick knee a rest, got a pair of singles.

Young Bill Crouch of the Phillies kept the Reds fairly well in line for his eight innings of pitching, although they piled up a 3-1 lead on him with the aid of Frank McCormick's sixth home run of the year.

Rally Starts

Come the ninth and Thompson, counted on as a 20-game winner this year, started handing out singles like politicians' cigars. Bob Bragan and Ben Warren got two of them and moved up on Harry Marnie's sacrifice.

Tom Livingston batted for Crouch and singled in two runs to tie the score, then stole second. Merrill May and Danny Litwhiler got safeties to send Livingston in. Joe Marty walked and May scored what proved to be the winning run on Nick Etten's fly to right.

Ernie Lombardi ended the nightmare by picking Litwhiler off third. With two out the Reds made a try in their half with Pinch-hitter Jimmy Ripple doubling and scoring on Lonnie Frey's single, but Eddie Joost struck out and Thompson had his third straight defeat and the Reds their fifth.

Hillbilly Act Wins Again On Arena Mat

Elvira Snodgrass, the white hope of Tennessee's Smoky Mountains, defeated Betty LaVerne, New Mexico feminine wrestler in 12 minutes at Turner's Arena last night before 2,000 customers.

The ultimate victim, clad in red and blue tights, used her teeth as her main weapon of attack, chewing briskly on Elvira's feet, ears and arms during the match.

Elvira, by means of a quick backdrop, finally eluded Betty's bicuspids long enough to claim a victory, but it was a rough evening—earlier she had hit a referee over the head with a shoe during the match in which her husband, Elmer, downed Wild Man Zim with a double arm stretch.

In the secondary feature, Len Macaluso, former Colgate all-American, wrestled to a 30-minute draw with Paul Boesch, of California, but the final whistle blew just in time to save Boesch, whose shoulders were on the mat for the count of three when the match ended.

Andy Meixner gave up to Fred Grobmaier after 12 minutes, due to the somewhat pressing demands of the figure 4 scissors, and Hans Kampfer wrestled Milo Steinborn to a 30-minute draw.

Star Beats Civil Service Ten, 13 to 9

Evening Star softballers scored a 13-9 victory over Civil Service last night at Washington Softball Stadium, sparked by two home runs each of Fuchs and Hurley.

Civil Service, which protested a decision at second base in the fourth inning when the Star scored six runs and locked the game, played the remainder of the game under protest, Manager Darrell Bills stated.

The second game, also in the National Night League, was called after the first half of the fifth with Giant Food Stores leading Community Businessmen, of Mount Rainier, 7-3, when rain interrupted.

Tonight another National Night League double header is scheduled with Christian Endeavor meeting N. & G. Barbeque at 8 p. m., and Greenbelt meeting the debuting Census Bureau ten at 9:15 p. m.

Western High Engages Tech Nine Today

Today's Schoolboy Schedule
Western at Tech (Interhigh).
Wilson at Central (Interhigh).
Georgetown Prep at Gonzaga.
Rockville at Coolidge.
National Training at Blair.
Stanley High at Washington-Lee.

Originally scheduled to face Tech three days ago, Western High nine, barring further errors in the interhigh schedule or a downpour, finally gets a chance at its big public school foe today, topping a schoolboy card of six games. The clash at Tech will be supplemented by Wilson's meeting with Central.

Though the possibility of its gaining a berth in the championship playoff is decidedly remote, following an 8-2 beating by Eastern Tuesday, Tech's force could scramble the standings considerably by tripping Western. Wilson likewise has little hope of entering the playoff, but it could ruin Central's fine effort to date with an upset.

At the moment only Central, Western and Eastern are in the running for the top two places in the standings which will earn a place in the 1941 championship series. Eastern is out front, a half game ahead of Central, which leads Western by the same margin. A loss for any of the three will virtually toss it out of consideration.

Of the four other games on the card, Georgetown Prep's invasion of Gonzaga will be featured. Orrel Mitchell, who is coaching the Little Hoyas nine fo rthe first season, has been coaching Gonzaga football in the fall.

Colonial Nine Defeated by Villanova, 7-1

Associated Press Writer

Villanova, Pa., May 15.—Villanova's Wildcats registered their sixteenth victory in 19 starts today, trouncing George Washington, 7 to 1 behind four-hit pitching by Connie Nicholas.

It was the big left-hander's fifth consecutive win of the season, against no defeats. He didn't allow a safety until the sixth.

Villanova put the game away in the fourth when four hits yielded six runs. The frame saw ten Wildcats at bat, four of whom hit safely, with three others walking.

George Washington's score came in the eighth without the aid of a hit, Redinger coming home on three errors and a fielder's choice.

Yale Nine Deals Georgetown U. Second Straight Loss, 9 to 7

Elis Chase Wixted, Get 15 Safeties

Joe Wood Goes Route, Though Hoyas Make 13 Hits; Dieckelman, Ghecas Star at Bat

New Haven, May 15.—Georgetown University's touring baseball team suffered its second defeat in as many games today when Yale outslugged the Hoyas, 9-7, as Capt. Joe Wood went the route to outpitch two foes.

The Elis early opened fire on big Bill Wixted to score twice in each of the first and second innings and finally drove the Georgetown starting pitcher from the mound in the fifth when they counted three runs. Vinnie Powers relieved Wixted and was touched for six hits in four innings.

Georgetown, fighting uphill all the way, twice deadlocked the score, at 4-4 and 7-7, but lost to Yale's counterattack of two tallies in the sixth.

Dick Dieckelman, with a triple, double and a single, and Lou Ghecas, with three singles, headed the Hoyas' 13-hit attack, while Harrison banged out four of the 15 hits credited to the winners.

It was the fourth defeat of the season for Joe Judge's Hilltop nine which concludes its three-day road trip tomorrow against New York University.

Schumacher Breaks Jinx, Beats Cubs, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 15.—Hal Schumacher, breaking through a barrier of tough luck that has plagued him all season, pitched six-hit ball for victory today as the New York Giants edged out the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1.

New York was held to eight safeties by Claude Passeau, but bunched three of them for all their runs in the third when Morrie Arnovich opened with a single, stole second and scored on a double by Johnny Rucker, who in turn raced home on a single to center by Burgess Whitehead

Schumacher, in spite of a blister that broke on his right thumb during the game, fanned six men and shut out the Cubs except for the second stanza, when a walk, Lou Novikoff's single, a fly and an infield out counted the Cubs' only run.

Nice Going Wins 200-Mile Race

Averaging approximately 55 miles per hour, Nice Going, a yearling homing pigeon from the loft of James B. Lyons, won the second race of the current old bird series being sponsored by the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club from Pittsburgh, Pa., an airline distance to this city of 200 miles. Entries from the Mundie, Pennington and Burke-Holmes loft closely pressed the winner all the way, the first four birds, all diploma winners, being only a few seconds apart at the finish.

There were 129 choice birds from 16 local lofts. Liberation was made at 8:45 a. m., the winning bird being timed at 12:18 p. m.

Buddy Baer, Louis Meet Today; To Be Examined for Title Bout

This subtle method of getting publicity photos in the papers was adopted yesterday by Buddy Baer's brain trust out at Steve Cochran's Olney, Md., farm. That's Buddy leaning on his Washington Post mailbox reading—guess what—The Post. Incidentally, Buddy fights Joe Louis May 23 at Griffith Stadium

Principals in Fight Here May 23 to Face At Boxing Commission; Both Said in Trim

Buddy Baer and Joe Louis will come face to face today for the first time since they came to Washington ten days ago to start training for their 15-round fight for the world's heavyweight championship a week from tonight in Griffith Stadium.

They'll meet in the offices of the District Boxing Commission, where both will undergo a complete physical examination by Dr. Marvin McLean, commission physician.

Louis, whose fighting weight usually is around 203, has said he expects to hit 200 for the Baer fight. Buddy, a hefty 247 when he reported here, has toned down to 238 and expects to weigh 235 next Friday. Both will cease training routines on Wednesday.

Ticket sales for the latest "Bum-of-the-Month" venture of the champion took a zoom skyward yesterday as $7,000 worth of business was transacted out at Griffith Stadium, according to Mike Jacobs' agents. The total advance sales to date is $42,000, leading Jacobs' men to predict a $150,000 gate. Jacobs will come to town Monday to set up headquarters and will remain in Washington the remainder of the week.

Braves Stop Cardinals by 6-to-3 Score

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 15.—Ninety-degree temperature proved too torrid for hurlers in the St. Louis-Boston game today and after seven pitchers saw service the Braves wound up with a 6 to 3 victory.

Four Cardinal pitchers gave up 14 hits while St. Louis was rapping out 12 base blows off three Braves moundsmen.

Max West, of Boston, suffered a sudden nose bleed in the second inning and was replaced in left field by veteran Lloyd Waner who enjoyed a successful batting spree of three straight hits.

Clyde Shoun, Cardinal workhorse, was charged with his second loss of the season and before the game was concluded Hank Gornicki, Sam Nahem and Ernie White, in that order, took their turn on the mound.

Manuel Salvo started for Boston. He was replaced by Frank Lamanna who made his exit in the eighth in favor of Arthur Johnson but received credit for the triumph.

Boston's victory cut the current Cardinal winning streak at three games. It was St. Louis' fourth loss in the last 16 games.

Boston scored twice in the first inning when Babe Dahlgren knocked in Carvel Rowell and Eddie Miller singled to bring in John Cooney.

The Cards earned one run the same inning. Enos Slaughter singled in Don Padgett who got on base by a fumble. The score was tied at 2-all in the fourth on an error, walk and a hit.

Boston bunched hits in the sixth and seventh for four more runs and from then on out had things its own way.

Macks Bow To Newhouser, Tigers, 10-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 15.—Harold Newhouser pitched seven-hit ball today while each of his Detroit Tiger teammates except one hit safely to swamp the Philadelphia Athletics, 10-2.

The victory ended a six-game losing streak for the Tigers and marked the team's first triumph of the year away from home. Outfielder Pat Mullins led the 18-hit attack with a triple, a double and two singles.

The only Tiger who failed to get to two Philadelphia pitchers for a safety was Frank Crouch.

Catcher Birdie Tebbetts, of the victors, hit for the circuit with one aboard in the ninth inning.

Montgomery Faces Jenkins Tonight; Given Edge in Odds

Philadelphian Promised Shot at Zivic If Victorious Against Sweetwater Fighter

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 15.—Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins becomes a "front man" for welterweight boss Fritzie Zivic tomorrow night when he tangles in a 10-round over-weight tussle with Bob Montgomery, a serious youngster who has been tabbed here and there as a "Philadelphia Henry Armstrong."

In other words, if young Bob can knock Jenkins' ears off when they start pitching at 9 p. m. (E. S. T.) in Madison Square Garden, he'll get a shot at the welterweight title, rather than at Jenkins' 135-pound crown. At least Promoter Mike Jacobs has promised him that.

Some 14,000 of the cash-paying citizens are expected by "Uncle Mike" to sit in on the fun, after contributing to a gross gate of about $40,000.

Drilling Hard for Bout

This corner, remembering how close Montgomery came to putting the Sweetwater Swatter away in their last meeting about eight months ago, picks Montgomery to do that thing this time. The Philadelphia Negro, a sharp right-hand puncher with a crowding style made to order to bother Jenkins, has been working like a drayhorse for weeks training for this fight, while up to 20 days ago Skinny Lew was putt-putting around the landscape seeing the sights from his motorcycle.

For some reason which has baffled even our best regarded scientists, the gambling fraternity has installed Montgomery a 5-to-7 favorite to take care of Jenkins in the approved manner. Just why that is, inasmuch as Jenkins won a decision over Montgomery the last time, you can't quite figure out at first glance.

Indians Beat V. M. I., 6 to 3, For State Title

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., May 15.—William and Mary Clinched the "Big Six" baseball crown today with a 6-to-3 victory over the V. M. I. Keydets, as big Vic Raschi, who relived Lefthander Tommy Crane in the fourth, turned in his fifth "Big Six" win.

The 215-pound Indian sophomore, a righthander, struck out 11 men in the six innings he pitched and was never in trouble.

Howard Smith, another sophomore, hit safely three times in four trips to the plate and drove in three Indian runs. John Korczowski batted in two more runs. Wray, V. M. I. shortstop, hit a homer in the third, scoring after P. Williams, second baseman, had singled.

It was V. M. I.'s sixth "Big Six" defeat of the season.

Bob's Pass Wins Charles Town Feature Race to Pay $13.60

Kelly Gives 3-Year-Old Strong Ride

Last Bet, Favorite, Is 2d, Vee Pee, 3d; Time of 49 3-5 Is Near Track Record

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 15.—Jockey Willie Kelly, a Pennsylvania boy, gave the Virginia-owned Bob's Pass a strong ride here today to win the Martinsburg (W. Va.) Purse, feature of the program. Kelly drove the 3-year-old son of Passerby to the wire a length and a half in advance of Last Bet, the favorite and in the colors of G. G. Waugh, jr. Two lengths farther back came Mrs. V. P. Noyes' Vee Pee to be third in the limited field of eight.

Bob's Pass was only lukewarm in the betting and paid a $13.60 mutuel. The race was one of the fastest of the meeting over the abbreviated four and a half furlongs, the winner being clocked in 0:49 3-5, only a fraction over the track record set by Irene's Bob. A crowd of 6,000 saw the action conducted over a fast track. Depite overcast skies this morning, only a few drops of rain fell and the sun was working full blast early in the program.

Last Bet, ridden by Jockey Beverly Hacker, forged to the front in the opening furlong. Bob's Pass, on the rail, was second with Vee Pee running third. Hacker did his best to keep Last Bet ahead of the ultimate winner but Kelly pushed him to the front in the stretch and Bob's Pass was going away at the end. Last Bet, however, held the place position safe from the tiring Vee Pee.

Claude Feltner, the Berryville, Va., trainer, sent Wandering Hero postward in the second race and the Grand Time gelding surprised by coming home in front of Ida Time and Baby Mowlee to pay a $22 mutuel. Those who teamed Wandering Hero with Westing in the third race collected a $57.40 daily double. Westing, well-handled by Jockey Martin Bletzacker, was the favorite at $4.20.

Jockey Buddy Root won the fourth race with E. K. Hillman's Adhelmar. Root kept the Ladkin mare going long enough to stave off the closing effort of Buffoon. Palumbo, riding the latter, appeared to make his move too late to be effective. Seplin was third in the field of seven.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al,

Two jockeys here are on the injured list, Joe O'Malley suffered a dislocated bone in his right wrist and Patsy Grant hurt his knee. Grant's injury showed signs of infection so he was ordered to the Charles Town Hospital. Arthur Hullcoat is shipping nine horses here from Narragansett Park, among them being the handicap performer, The Fop. E. Renaldi's Allene, injured here last Tuesday, was found to have broken a coffin bone and had to be destroyed. Jockey Sammy Palumbo has signed a contract to ride Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business in all handicaps and allowance races at this meeting. Jackie Bosley has been granted a license as an assistant trainer and will help his father, John Bosley. Jackie is a star gentleman rider and is a thorough horseman despite his youth. Jockey F. Kiniry has quit the saddle and will train for J. Wynkoop. Lou Cappo denies he has been drafted but admits it won't be long now. Johnny Shanks, down to 108 pounds, is resuming his saddle career here. The Washington boy has been dogged by injuries in recent years. Jockey Don Driscoll, who underwent an appendectomy here last December and was forced to spend his Christmas in the local hospital, is plying his trade again. Dick Floyd, Virginian who joined the owners and trainers here at this meeting, is a five-goal polo player. Beverly Broun, chairman of the West Virginia State racing commission, has been visiting here since the start of the meeting. Goes home to Charleston at the end of the week. If you want reservations for box seats on Memorial Day and July 4, you had better get busy. They are going like hot cakes. They tell me the flamingoes here are going to parade on Saturdays and holidays. See you on the rail. ILL.

First race—HI-BLAZE likes this track and the short sprint course. Appears to have found the right spot. GAY PRANK has worked well and belongs with these. CAT'S CRADLE has beaten this kind.

Second race—SCARLET FLAME gets in light and probably needed the last. Deserves the top call. GOLDEN KEY is an honest plater and will be close with these. PUSKIN'S last was encouraging.

Third race—JUSTA JIMMIE is a doubtful starter but is fit and ready and will be a keen contender if sent postward. BUTCHER BOY probably will see action and is ready for the best. TROSTAR for the minor award.

Fourth race—WAY OUT is the speed of this party and needs only the right handling. WAUGH SCOUT fits nicely in the gang and will be a strong factor. MISS WING probably will be the third one.

Fifth race—RANDLE QUEEN is far down the list. She is the class however, and would take it all if placed in the action. SCULLERY MAID'S last left little to be desired. COMMANDERESS may have needed that last as an educator on the curves.

Sixth race—CLOCKS came from behind to win at a shorter distance and seems well placed in this. NAVIGATION and CAIDON have been frequent winners over this oval and deserve attention.

Seventh race—BLOX gets an inside post position and will be hard to beat at this route. That last was a sharpener. MAMIE'S LAD encountered poor racing luck last out. TRANSDAY closed like the wind recently.

Eighth race—PENNY ARCADE showed a fine effort at Pimlico and looks like the best bet of the day. BIG STEEL and SINGING STEEL for the place and show.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take IVONIA, HIGH BUD and CONNAMISTA.

Loan League Hears Endicott

Paul Endicott, president of the United States Savings & Loan League, yesterday told 700 Southeastern group representatives from ten States that taxation was the "only completely noninflationary way to pay our national defense costs."

Endicott's address opened the eleventh annual conference of the sectional group in Baltimore. Speaking on the "Management Responsibilities in 1941," the national president termed present conditions a "challenge to management in all lines of business."

"Less money for saving means a restricted flow of funds into our associations, especially when coupled with the defense bond sales program," Endicott said, but declared the duty of the savings men was to cooperate in rather than oppose increasing taxation.

Delegates to the two-day conference represented approximately 100 savings and loan associations, including many in Washington. They received first-hand information on the armament program from Lieut. Charles R. Madary, of the Southeastern District of the War Department.

Home Building Record

Residential contracts during April in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains were the highest since July, 1929, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reported yesterday.

April volume was $166,462,000, an increase of 38 per cent over April, 1940, the corporation said, attributing the gain chiefly to the building of one and two-family houses. It added that 83 per cent of the total was private-ownership construction.

All April building and engineering contracts totaled $406,675,000 compared with $300,504,000 in April of last year, the report said.

Analysis of Middle Europe Natural Resources Removes Smoke Screen of 'Biological Kinship'

Rich Raw Materials, Industrial Assets Acquired by Grab

(Fifth in a series on Germany's economic spoils.)

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
International News Service Staff Writer

In acquiring Austria and the Sudetenland of Czecho-Slovakia, Adolf Hitler tried to pull the wool over the eyes of the outside world by emphasizing biological kinship with Germany. But in addition to similarity of blood, the grasping Reich also got control of significant raw material and industrial resources. These latter, it is now plain, were no mere incidental by-product.

Likewise, in grabbing the western half of Poland, the Nazis built up a smoke screen of justification around the Polish Corridor and the Free City of Danzig. But in addition to eliminating the wedge between Germany proper and East Prussia, the Reich also got valuable Polish coal, zinc and pork production.

The changing economic geography of middle Europe gives a clearer revelation of hidden motives behind overt acts in power politics than the honeyed and reassuring words of subtle propagandists.

Iron Ore From Poland

In addition to the ballyhoo about reuniting Germans, the absorption of Austria, which had been admittedly mangled by the Versailles treaty, brought into the new Germania iron ore, timber, magnesite, graphite, talc and lead. Austria's iron ore is of value because it is of low sulphur and phosphorous content, comparing with the best Swedish ore and producing a fine quality of steel. Austria is able to meet Germany's full graphite requirements, and, potentially, Austria can also make the new United (captive) States of Europe self-sufficient in respect to talc. Austria likewise produces 5 per cent of Teuton lead requirements.

Czechoslovakia can satisfy 7 per cent of Germany's need for zinc. It also has iron deposits in the Slany district of Bohemia and the Spis Gener territory of Soyakia. However, the country is important for industrial skill rather than for mineral resources. Industrial tools are to be found primarily in the Sudetenland, Bohemia and Moravia.

The Czech Loot

Besides a well-rounded iron and steel industry Czecho-Slovakia also has an advanced chemical industry at Aussig, which is of some military significance, and also the famous Skoda Armament Works, with affiliated deposits of coal, iron ore and limestone. Skoda also produces industrial machinery, automotive products, railroad and airplane equipment, and steel products.

The Bohemian industries are also equipped to make consumer goods, including textiles, gloves, shoes, and fashion apparel, as well as household items, especially glassware.

Western Poland has important coal deposits, which, of course, the old Germany did not lack. Nevertheless, Polish coal is currently useful for swapping for Swedish and Italian products. Though striving for industrialization with state aid before the war, Poland was still primarily agricultural.

Mineral Resources

Poland's mineral resources are largely bunched together in Upper Silesia on the southwestern border between Poland and Germany. The principal products include coal and coke zinc, lead and iron ore. In normal times the country has to add to its domestic raw material supplies through importations of iron and zinc ores and slags. After processing the ores, it has had available for export 300,000 tons of iron and steel products and 70,000 tons of zinc and zinc dust.

The Corridor Value

The Polish Corridor, the dispute over which was the immediate cause of World War II, is unimportant in an economic sense. It was largely undeveloped before World War I, when it was German.

Germany regained the autonomous territory of Memel on March 22, 1939, as a result of a demand based on the self-determination of the inhabitants. Memel was taken from East Prussia by the Versailles Treaty, and awarded to Lithuania. It not only served as the chief seaport for that country, but, unlike other Baltic ports, it is also of strategic economic and military importance because it never freezes.

The city also has iron foundries, shipbuilding yards, and various food and industrial plants.

Leaders in War Materials

Nowadays, power in mechanical warfare depends on raw materials, human muscles and tools. The distribution of essential raw materials among the principal nations, based on pre-war data, is shown in the subjoined table. Since the war, Germany's relative and absolute position in respect to raw materials has been strengthened.

Delay Sought In Revamping C. & S. Setup

By the Associated Press

Chairman Edward C. Eicher indicated yesterday that the Securities Commission would decide next week whether to issue immediately a recapitalization order against the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, as proposed by the SEC staff, or to defer action until it has heard valuation data on the billion-dollar system, as requested by company counsel.

Attorneys for both sides argued their proposals briefly before the commission, which postponed the hearing one week and granted five days for the filing of briefs on the question.

George Roberts, C. & S. counsel, insisted that it would be improper to issue a recapitalization order without complete valuation data on companies whose securities are held by C. & S. He said that Jay Samuel Hartt, valuation engineer, was ready to begin testifying on Central Illinois Light & Power Co., and that later Hartt could testify on all companies in the system.

Paul Davis, SEC attorney, objected to Robert's motion on the ground that "valuation data would be inappropriate at this time."

He cited cases previously decided by the commission which he said were precedents for immediate issuance of an order and subsequent submission of the valuation data necessary to the working out a recapitalization plan.

The SEC staff has urged that C. & S. be required to simplify its structure by having a single class of stock. It now has both common and preferred stock, on the latter of which there are dividend arrearages in excess of $27,000,000. This proceeding is in addition to a geographic integration action also pending before the SEC in which the staff has suggested that the holding company may retain only one of its major subsidiaries.

United Gas Files $75,000,000 Issue

The United Gas Corporation filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering the proposed private sale of $75,000,000 of 3¼ per cent first mortgage and collateral trust bonds, due 1958. The company previously had filed an application covering the proposed issue under the Holding Company Act.

The statement disclosed that the bonds would be sold to institutional investors at 99.34 per cent and at accrued interest. The prospective purchases were not named.

Pan-American Airways Plans Big Expansion

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, May 15.—Juan J. Trippe, president of Pan-American Airways, told a stockholders' meeting today that the big international flying organization was devoting every possible assistance to the United States defense.

Looking to the future, the airline chief said that services in prospect included:

1. A ten-hour daily service from New York to Lisbon.
2. A daily service from San Francisco to Honolulu.
3. A daily service between Seattle and Alaska.
4. A daily service on all lines throughout Latin America.

"We strongly hope our country will continue to occupy first place in world affairs," said Trippe, "and to that end our company will continue to assist in the maintenance of that position."

He described the operations of the Pan-American Navigation School at Miami, where, in addition to its own flying staff, the line teaches aerial navigation to Army and Navy fliers. He said about 1,800 of these navigators will be graduated from Miami this year.

"The company," he said, "is also training mechanics in its San Francisco school for employment in the active West Coast Aircraft Factory."

In a broader field, Trippe pointed out, the airline, with its 75,000 miles of operations, is rendering a "great service to Western Hemisphere defense," through the use of its lines and airports throughout Latin America and Alaska by the United States Army and Navy, and also by the air fleet of the Latin-American republics.

"The system," said Trippe, "is being utilized more and more by the air forces of our sister republics."

The stockholders reelected the board of directors and approved a new pension plan for employes.

New Transport Planes Delivered

New York, May 15 (AP).—Delivery in the past two weeks of new equipment to airlines has relieved the threat of shortage in domestic operations.

American Airlines has received six new Douglas DC-3 transports and United Air Lines four with promise of two more in June. Eastern Air Lines expects to get five new Douglas ships by September after receiving five last January. Transcontinental & Western already had received nine new planes before there was any talk of curtailment of service.

Bank Excess Reserves Off $20,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks declined $20,000,000 to a total of $5,690,000,000 in the week ended May 14.

The decrease was attributed to technical factors.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 14 member bank reserve balances increased $18,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of $13,000,000 in gold stock, $10,000,000 in reserve bank credit and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency and decreases of $42,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $9,000,000 in Treasury cash, offset in part by increases of $55,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and $4,000,000 in money in circulation. Excess reserves of member banks on May 14 were estimated to be approximately $5,690,000,000, a decrease of $20,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended May 14, 1941, were reported as follows:

Stocks Retreat Fractions to 2 Points; Labor Trouble in Three Fields Is Factor

New York, May 15.—Stock led financial markets in a general backslide today as war worries deepened and fresh labor apprehension chilled speculative sentiment.

The share list got off to a slight rally which failed to follow through. Late selling steels, rails, aircrafts and specialties put prices in a definite retreat and, at the close, losses ranged from fractions to around 2 points. Bonds trailed with stocks and recently buoyant commodities softened.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .5 of a point at 39.4, biggest decline in this composite since April 18. Volume, exceptionally light for a while, picked up as offerings began to come out and transfers totalled 495,990 shares compared with 322,540 the day before.

While business news was helpful to individual issues, speculative forces inclined to turn bearish, brokers said, over the Marshal Petain speech which was interpreted by some as meaning France would collaborate with Germany. The persistent mystery surrounding the Hess flight from Naziland was also seen as a chilling influence.

On top of this, labor unsettlement in automotive, coal and shipping fields, combined with the threat of an imminent railway wage battle, served to depress even those who have been in the optimistic ranks.

In the light of the outlook for mounting costs if carrier union demands prevail, a contra-seasonal jump in last week's freight loadings was a negative prop for stocks in this group.

Chrysler and General Motors each fell 1¼ points, the former to a new bottom since last june. Other prominent losers included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, Goodyear, United Aircraft, Western Union, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Kennecott, Westinghouse, General Electric and du Pont.

Continental Baking "a" went to a new 1941 high but ended with a small decline. Oils kept minus signs to small proportions. Montgomery Ward was up a shade, along with American Telephone.

In the commodity section wheat at Chicago was off 1¼ to 1⅞ cents a bushel and corn was down 1⅛ to 1⅜. Cotton conceded 35 to 75 cents a bale. Rubber, cottonseed oil, coffee and hides were substantially lower.

Among Curb stocks in arrears were Gulf Oil, Colts Patent Fire Arms, Babcock & Wilcox, Humble Oil and New Jersey Zinc. The turnover here was around 99,000 shares versus 90,000 Wednesday.

United States Government bonds acted completely indifferent to the Washington story about Secretary Morgenthau coming into the bond market next week with a program involving more than $1,000,000,000 "unless something unexpected happens in financial markets."

Of the amount mentioned $834,452,000 would be for refunding of the 3¼'s maturing in August and $500,000,000 "new money" would be added to dwindling Treasury cash. The expiring 3¼'s did not sell on the stock exchange but the closing bid-asked was 101 24-26/32, indicating holders regarded the new securities they will be given in exchange (unless they take cash at par) with favor. Some sales were made over the counter at 101 23/32.

Other Treasury Issues showed only negligible changes either way on the "big board" and over the country. Some Government experts expressed the opinion the new vehicle the Treasury would use in the coming operation would constitute a 12 to 16 year bond with coupon of 2¼ or 2½ per cent.

Wholesale Index Hops 1% in Week

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday reported an increase of 1 per cent in the level of wholesale commodity prices for the week ended May 10.

The bureau reported that the "tight shipping situation," and the heavy demand and anticipated higher loan values for certain crops contributed largely to the widespread price increase. There were marked advances in crude rubber, grains, meats, oils and fats and coke.

The bureau's wholesale price index now stands at 84 per cent of the 1926 average as compared with 78.4 per cent a year ago.

Refinancing To Mean Rate Cuts by V.P.S.

By the Associated Press

William A. Wood, president of the Virginia Public Service Co., Alexandria, Va., told a Securities Commission examiner yesterday that rate reductions amounting to $300,000 a year would be possible if his company's refinancing plan was approved.

The company proposed to redeem all of its outstanding long-term debt, which, on May 1, 1941, totaled $37,087,000, through the sale of $28,000,000 of 3¾ per cent first mortgage bonds to six large insurance companies and $8,500,000 in serial debentures.

On January 1, 1941, the company's fixed assets, less depreciation, were listed as $46,109,000.

Under questioning by T. Justin Moore, Richmond attorney for the company, Wood said that in his opinion the rate reduction would be made "as a result of savings" from the refinancing program.

He urged approval of the plan by the commission in the interests of the company's consumers and investors.

Wood became president of the Alexandria company April 1, coming from a similar position in New York City. The Virginia company does 95 per cent of its business in Virginia.

Wood said that his studies of the Virginia company since April 1, indicated "considerable public distrust in its existing financial setup;" inadequacy of the company's power distribution system, and some "bad service."

He told of heavy impositions on the company resulting from the defense program in Virginia and expansion of Alexandria and Arlington Counties as residential centers for governmental workers, and added:

"The trend of Government today almost assures" continued growth of these two sections for some time and no diminution of population.

N. J. Standard Oil Plans Pipe Line To Montreal

New York, May 15 (AP).—The Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), is considering constructing a pipe line from Portland, Me., to Montreal, 200 airline miles, to further conserve shipping space for the national defense effort.

Such a line would expedite by about eight days the delivery of crude oil from the Texas Gulf Coast or South America.

Standard owns the majority of stock of Imperial Oil, Ltd., the leading factor in the Dominion oil industry.

The Portland-Montreal project is one of several being studied by oil interests as a result of the transfer of 25 United States registry tankers for use in the British war effort.

Oil Men Elected To Vultee Board

Downey, Calif., May 15 (AP).—Vultee Aircraft, Inc., reports the election of three oil men as directors in a policy of replacing operating members of the board with industrialists from outside the aircraft business.

The new members are J. Mason Hougland, president of Spur Distributing Co., Nashville, which sells petroleum products along the Atlantic seaboard and through the South; William C. McDuffie, of Los Angeles, formerly president of Pacific Western Oil Co. and formerly in charge of production for Shell Oil Co., and Henry Dalzell Wilson, of Pasadena, president of the Wilson-Snyder Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., until its sale to Oil Well Supply Co.

Retiring directors are P. A. Hewitt, Vultee's representative in Washington, D. C.; R. W. Palmer, vice president in charge of engineering, and T. C. Sullivan, secretary.

Copper Sold to U. S. Below Market Price

New York, May 15 (AP).—Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation is selling to the United States Government all but a small part of its current copper production at 10 cents a pound, Harold Kingsmill, vice president, said at the annual stockholders' meeting.

Output is running at 5,500,000 to 6,000,000 pounds a month, he said, and about 5,000,000 pounds is going to the Government. In 1940 the company got an average price of 11.16 cents a pound for the copper sold in other markets.

10-Ton Gun Carriage Delivered to Army

Dunkirk, N. Y., May 15 (AP).—The American Locomotive Co. delivered to the Army today the first modern 155-mm. gun carriage to be commercially produced in the United States.

First of a $5,000,000 order awarded August 8, the carriage is equipped with pneumatic tires, weighs 10 tons and is capable of being drawn at more than 30 miles an hour.

Commodities Depressed on Profit Taking

By the Associated Press

Profit cashing brought a steep fall yesterday in commodity futures prices from recently established bull market peak levels.

The retreat was general in major trading centers. Dealers reported the reaction stemmed from a more cautious attitude of buyers in view of the exceptional rise in prices since early March, and the effect on trading sentiment of repeated warnings from the Agriculture Department against too free speculation in farm staple futures.

Chicago wheat culminated a long upswing with a drop of 1¼ to 1⅞ cents a bushel. Corn declined 1⅛ to 1⅝.

New York cotton futures for a time extended the forward sprint to new four-year highs but later bowed under heavy profit taking and closed 3 to 75 cents a bale lower.

In the later stages of their rapid climb cotton and wheat had been heavily influenced by Washington steps to permit Government loans at 85 per cent of parity prices. These were carried to fruition by Senate approval of the measure Wednesday.

Force of the reactionary trend was indicated by the following price changes in representative New York futures markets:

Santos coffee, down .21 to .29 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, down .17 to .24 of a cent; world sugar, down .01½ to .03 of a cent; rubber, down .14 to .20 of a cent; silk, down 1½ to 3½ cents; hides, down .22 to .29 of a cent.

Cash markets for key staples for immediately delivery were apparently unaffected by the sweeping decline in futures. The Associated Press weighed index of 33 wholesale spot commodities climbed to a new four-year high at 84.32 per cent of the 1926 average compared with 84.61 per cent Wednesday.

Rail Loadings Up 5.4% for Week, Set 7-Month Top

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 837,149 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 42,848 cars, or 5.4 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 156,521 cars, or 23.0 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 282,505 cars, or 50.9 per cent, compared with 1939.

Loadings were the highest since the week ended October 26, 1940, when they totaled 837,651 cars.

The coal classification showed a sharp bulge following settlement of the coal strike. Miscellaneous freight and forest products declined substantially. The rise in total loadings was counter to the seasonal trend.

Bankers' Group Urges Shelving of 'Reforms,' Asks Senate Body to Help Avert Inflation

Better banking is to be expected more from improved bank management and improved bank supervision than through changes in the organization of the banking system, it was stated by the American Bankers Association in its reply to the Wagner study questionnaire filed with the chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee here yesterday.

The A. B. A. reply suggested that concentration on present national objectives is now more important than details of the banking system. It recommended consideration of action dealing with the problems of bank credit expansion and activity, fiscal policies, as related to taxes and borrowing, and prices and wages that will prevent inflation developing out of the national defense program.

It also recommended, among other things, the continuation of the dual system of national banks and State chartered banks, and the preservation of the present dual system of bank supervision by State and Federal supervisory agencies as the best means of serving the diverse requirements of American economic life and preventing too great a concentration of power.

It recommended the continuation of unit banking and that the regulation of branch banking be left within the control of the States.

The reply suggested that the relations between the Federal Reserve Board and the reserve banks might be made more effective by a greater concentration of the powers of the reserve system in Federal Open Market Committee.

It stressed the importance of maintaining the present ownership of stock of the Federal Reserve banks as conforming to the principle described by Woodrow Wilson as a "democracy of credit."

Emphasizing the importance of considering the banking problems arising out of the war emergency, the A. B. A. reply says:

"There is nothing in the foregoing requiring legislation at the present time, when men's minds should be engaged in dealing with great national objectives rather than with details of the banking system. It is not a time when people's energies and attention should be taken away from the major task by nonessential readjustments in the banking machinery.

"No discussion of the banking system at the present time is complete, however, without a careful recognition of the particular problems arising directly out of the emergency. It, therefore, seems desirable to outline briefly the major elements in the situation which relate to banking and the sort of action which should be considered.

"In World War I, and in other great wars, this and other countries experienced severe inflation. In the absence of appropriate preventive policies the forces now at work will lead to a like result.

"Preventive action is necessary in three areas:

"(a) Bank credit expansion and activity.

"(b) Fiscal policies as to taxes and borrowing.

"(c) Prices and wages.

"The Congress, the banks and others should therefore give timely consideration to the proposals for dealing with these problems, made jointly by the several bodies of the Federal Reserve System. . . ."

The A. B. A. reply is a book of 140 pages. It was prepared under the supervision of a "special banking studies committee" of five and the research council of the association in collaboration with many bankers and bankers' groups who were asked to participate.

Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, chairman of the A. B. A. economic policy commission and its research council and vice chairman of the National City Bank, New York, is chairman of the special committee. He succeeded Col. Leonard P. Ayres to that post when Col. Ayres entered the Army last fall.

Friends School Downs Anacostia, 9-5

Newmeyer Proves Star Of Victory

Armand Newmeyer turned out to be the man of the day while his Friends School team was defeating Anacostia High, 9 to 5, on the Friends diamond yesterday afternoon—he was the winning pitcher after 5 innings' work, and he also collected two home runs.

Starting off brilliantly, the Friends Nine scored 4 runs in the first inning, 3 in the second and 2 in the third, while Anacostia could do no better, than 3 in the first, and one each in the fifth and sixth stanzas.

American Hockey League Extends Greeting to Uline

Michael J. Uline was given an unexpected welcome into the American Ice Hockey League last night by President Ed Danahy, of the Buffalo Club.

Danahy, here for several days, received a telephone introduction to Uline, who recently was given a franchise in the league, and extended the local ice magnate his good wishes.

Chase surrendered a run to the Browns in the second inning when Estallela led off with a single to right. He walked McQuinn and Heffner fetched the run home with a single to left on which Ben Chapman did not distinguish himself.

His wildness put Chase in trouble in the third inning when the Browns came up with two or more runs. He walked Strange to open the inning, and Cullenbine doubled to left. Estallela contributed his second straight hit at this point, a single to center, and the Browns had a 3-0 lead.

They upped it to 6-0 in the sixth when Chase was forced to retire. He pitched a single to Cullenbine and walked Judnich and Heffner, with one out, to fill the bases. Masterson appeared on the scene at this point, and appeared slated for some sort of heroism when he fanned Grube for the second out. He had a count of two strikes and no balls against Galehouse when the pitcher slugged an inside curve ball down the left-field line to score everybody.

The Browns touched up Arnold Anderson in the ninth for three straight hits and their seventh run. You wouldn't be interested in the full details of how the Nats did not score.

Nats Trade Rick Ferrell For Kennedy

Ferrell was the last relic with the Nats of the three players they received from Boston in the five-player deal of 1937. In that trade, Washington sent Pitcher Buck Newsom and Outfielder Ben Chapman to Boston in exchange for Ferrell and his pitching brother, Wes, and Outfielder Mel Almada. Small as catchers go, Ferrell had always been one of the better backstops in the league.

Catching had been the Browns' chief weakness for two seasons, and Manager Fred Haney was elated at the deal that brought Ferrell to his club.

The Radcliff-to-Detroit deal was a startling sort inasmuch as every club in the league had waived on the hard-hitting outfielder who, after an early slump this season, was again hitting in powerful style for the Browns.

The Tigers sought Radcliff, a 3.42 hitter last year, in an effort to offset the loss of power suffered when Hank Greenberg was drafted.

Rooney Won't Buck President's Speech, Changes Fight Date

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 15.—Remarking "the President is a bit too much of an opposition to face these days," Fight Promoter Arthur J. Rooney tonight moved up his all-star boxing card from Tuesday, May 27, to Monday, May 26.

Billy Conn, the lightweight champion, and Buddy Knox, of Dayton, Ohio, will clash in the feature 15-round event, which Billy hopes will be a good tune-up contest for his clash next month with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

President Roosevelt last week canceled one speech and announced he would give a "fireside chat" on the night of May 27. Rooney said he thought many fans would want to hear the talk.

Watwood, Frazier Post 648 Pin Total

Closest score to a new high in last night's rolling in the annual City of Washington duckpin tournament at Lucky Strike was 648, posted in Class E doubles by Lynn Watwood and Charles Frazier. They took second place.

In Class A doubles Willard Brown and Clayton Brown shot 745 for fifth place, while Louis Norris and Harry High took over seventh place in Class B doubles with 739.

Frank Pitila, with 388, gained fifth position in Class B singles.

Giants Sign Bartell

has he advanced past the first round. He won the Dubsread Club title in Orlando, Fla., in 1939, his only victory to date. Miller also won in 20 holes in the morning, over Redskin End Charley Malone.

Bogart was near par as he ousted Ray Swearingen in the morning, 6 and 5, and then after losing the tenth hole and going 1 down to Burnett he didn't lose another. The 21-year-old shotmaker won the eleventh when Burnett three-putted, the twelfth with a birdie and the thirteenth with a par, holding his lead on the sixteenth with a great chip shot out of the mud to halve the hole.

Nolan also breezed through the morning round, dropping George Vass, 6 and 4, but he struggled all the way against Rippy. Nolan once held a 2-hole lead but he dropped the next three in a row, 14-15-16, and won the eighteenth to square the match when Rippy was trapped in two and down in five. Nolan, stymied and with two putts to send the match the extra holes, hit Rippy's ball with his 50-foot putt and nearly knocked it in the cup. They halved 19 and then Nolan holed his winning birdie effort on the twentieth.

Coleman was not pressed in advancing to the semifinals. In the opening round he put out the only host club representative, Landra Platt, 3 and 2, and in the afternoon he was about 74 again in ousting Southpaw A. H. Sears, of Army and Navy, by the same score. Sears played fine golf in defeating Jess Dowling, 4 and 2, the round previous.

Burnett played the best golf of the day in winning his match over C. W. Birch, Stamford, Conn., in the first round. Birch, who holds a dozen assorted titles in and around the Nutmeg State, watched Burnett play the back nine in 32 strokes and lost out, 3 and 2.

and that was the signal for Feller's entry.

The Cleveland fireballer forced Stan Spence to pop up but was blessed with plenty of luck when he faced Ted Williams. The lanky outfielder drew a bead on Feller's delivery and sent a screaming liner down the first base alley. Hal Trosky leaped high in the air and snared the ball with upflung arm, then whipped it to Lou Boudreau at second base for a game-ending double killing.

Al Milnar, who was credited with the victory, started for the league leaders against Earl Johnson, youthful left-hander, who received slipshod support in being charged with the defeat.

Giants Sell Daffy To Sacramento

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 15.—A day after his famous brother, Dizzy, dropped out of the Chicago Cubs' pitching staff, Paul Dean passed on to a minor league berth.

Dean was sold today by the New York Giants to the Sacramento, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast League. There he will join his old teammate of the St. Louis Cardinals Gas-House days — John (Pepper) Martin, manager of the Sacramento club.

Dean was drafted by the Giants from Columbus in 1939 and has been used as a relief pitcher.

is a fine puncher and floored Lew for a 9-count in their fight at Philadelphia last summer. Lew's philosophy is something to hear. "What's the use? No sense training for a long fight. It's going to be over quick. He's either going to belt me out in a hurry, or I'm going to belt his brains out in a couple of rounds."

Lew's ever-loving spouse, the beauteous Katie, has been on hand at Pompton Lakes, but she's either getting tired of slugging him into paying more attention to his training, or she's just getting tired. For Lew has gone hog-wild this time. Caplin's not there to pick up a rock and make him do what he's told. Fred Browning, his other manager, never had any control over him.

This new freedom has delighted Lew. He's in fine spirits, even when old timers go to him and tell him what happened to young Stribling, who was another daredevil, and who was killed on a motorcycle. "I'm gonna get me an airplane one of these days," Lew enthuses. "I'm gonna try everything, before I die. Why not? Answer me: Why not? I'm gonna wind up driving a cab anyway, ain't I?"

Listen! with Glynn

Time was, as I distinctly recall it, when a week was just a week, nothing more and nothing less.

But those days, or weeks, seem to have gone the way of all wasted time. And nowadays it's pretty hard to find a week that's satisfied to be just a plain, ordinary, everyday, so to speak, week.

A week or so ago the week was National Restaurant Week. The one before that was National Baby Week, whatever that implies. Not so long ago, if memory serves correctly, we had something called National Doughnut Week. And, no doubt, an enterprising young man could discover a lot more, if he wanted to make a week of it.

So it comes as no great surprise to get the information from Robert Baker, an indomitable young man in WJSV's sales promotion department, interested in seeing that WJSV's sponsors are properly represented, that this week is nothing less than Opportunity Week.

Now Opportunity Week is a week fraught with great interest to grocers throughout the Nation, he tells me, and to housewives, too. For a certain WJSV sponsor who sells a well-known brand of soup is selling it at a price which is lower than ever before. Hence the housewives' opportunity, get it?

We think it's appropriate, in view of the grocery angle, to point out that the dramatic show put on by that sponsor over WJSV tonight at 8:30 is titled "Alien Corn."

The Post Radio Highlights

7, WOL—Double or Nothing switches to Fridays from Sundays and pushes around local boy Walter Compton's travel schedule

7:30, WRC—Choicest Manhattan row of the decade is Humorist Frank Sullivan's feud with Press Agent Richard Maney concerning the profits of "Arsenic and Old Lace." The double pundits battle in the open on Information Please.

8, WJSV—Now begins the Story-Hour-and-a-Half: John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" is the choice for the Great Moments from Great Plays. At 8:30 comes Ruth Chatterton playing "Alien Corn," which the late Sidney Howard wrote for Katharine Cornell. And at 9, Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper play "Her First Beau" for Columnist Louella Parsons.

10:30, WOL—Bundles for Britain offers James Hilton's stirring tribute to a British schoolmaster, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Versatile Dennis King plays the role.

Taft Accuses Administration Of Using Defense to Gain Power

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, accused the Administration last night of using the defense program "to remove all the brakes on the steady expansion of Government power and the steady expansion of Government spending."

"Today," he told the Yale Club of Washington's annual banquet at the Metropolitan Club, "there is no limit on the spending and there is no limit on the expansion of Government power—very little limit."

The candidate for the 1940 Republican Presidential nomination predicted an expenditure of $24,000,000,000 next year—$5,000,00,000 more than Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's estimate.

Little effort is being made, he asserted, to reduce nondefense expenditures, with the result that Government spending will have risen from $500,000,000 a month in March to probably $1,000,000,000 by June.

Purely Inflationary Boom

"We're going to see in the next year or so probably the biggest boom that the country has ever seen," he declared. But, he added, it will be a "purely inflationary boom" with "a tremendous reaction afterwards.

"We are likely to run up against the biggest depression you ever saw, or else continue spending, which means inflation."

He declared continued spending would be the choice, and CCC, NYA, WPA or other nondefense activities would not be cut substantially during the emergency, "because the New Deal is still dominated by the theory that spending is a good thing in itself."

Commenting on the "tremendous effort to expand every possible Government activity," he asserted:

"I don't think it's necessary in order to defeat the totalitarian powers of Europe to build up a totalitarian system in the United States."

A Lynching Is Forecast

Senator Taft's comments comprised one of the few serious moments of the banquet, which was given over largely to levity. The Senator himself, a Yale graduate of the class of 1910, was introduced by Toastmaster Turner Catledge, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, as "a man who came very near being defeated for President of the United States."

Catledge also told about how Wendell Willkie got 77 votes for President in the toastmaster's home county in Mississippi, and how "there'll be a lynching as soon as they find that Republican who voted 77 times."

The Senator's brother, Charles P. Taft, former Governor of Ohio and now assistant coordinator of health and welfare and related defense activities, was introduced as "the Alpha and Omega of keeping the boys in the straight and narrow."

Coordinator Taft told the club that one of the problems of his job was to convince local communities near defense concentrations that it was not cricket "to make as much money out of the boys as possible, and as rapidly," which seemed to be the idea in some towns.

Dogsful of Bombs

Harvey Bundy, special assistant to the Secretary of War, disclosed that "there's a lot of free advice given to the War Department on how to run the war."

Recently, he said, somebody sent in an idea for mobilization of dogs from public pounds, the canines to be equipped with radio-controlled bombs, disguised as first aid kits.

The dogs would go into enemy territory and enemy soldiers would whistle to them and pat them "by way of relaxation."

"I have now learned how to win the war," Bundy commented.

Dormitory Hotel . . .

FOR UNCLE'S NIECES—Architect's drawing of the dormitory-hotel to be erected at 2131 O Street Northwest for single girls who work for Uncle Sam in the expanding defense program here. Construction of the housing unit, to be known as Scott Hotel, is expected to start June 1. The 250-room, five-story structure is part of a 1,000-unit program recommended for the District by the Division of Defense Housing Coordination. Harry P. Scott, Washington boarding house operator, will build the units at a cost of $400,000. Rooms will rent for $7 a week. Applications for residence will be taken after July 1 at the Scott's Club, 1426 Twenty-first Street Northwest. The building is expected to be ready by October 15

By Gerald G. Gross

At daybreak the first of the four-train sections rolled in from Baltimore. Walter McClain, boss of the bull herd, immediately put his 50 elephants to work unloading wagons and equipment. An appreciative crowd watched the pachyderm parade from the Benning freight yards to the show grounds a mile distant.

"Nice girl, honey," McClain cajoled Modoc, the No. 1 elephant who is a dancer in the ring but who doubles willingly in harness when there's work to be done.

Simultaneously, canvas was going up on the lot. Roustabouts pulling at the ropes. Sledges swinging. Soon the sweet perfume of coffee boiling and bacon frying.

Wait, there's trouble in the cook tent, where a boiler's gone on the blink. A matter of minutes and the trouble is fixed. Over there, a canvas boss grumbling because the show's short-handed of laborers. The draft and too many other good jobs available now.

The matinee was three-quarters of an hour late starting because of so much equipment to install and erect in so little time. Remember, this was the Ringling-Barnum show's first trial of the new season at taking down the big top one night—as it did Wednesday in Baltimore—and putting it up the next morning in another city.

The opening matinee crowd of about 6,000 greedily devoured the "spec"—"Old King Cole and Mother Goose"—a pageant of beauties and beasts and clowns in a dazzling incarnation of childhood rhymes.

They gasped at Alfred Court's wild animal act, looked upward admiringly at the Flying Concellos, rocked with laughter at the scores of clowns, cheered the dainty Elly Ardelty as she did a headstand on a swinging trapeze three stories above the red, white and blue sawdust.

At last night's performance the laughs and applause carried even greater volume because the crowd was larger. Ticket sales indicate that today's and tomorrow's performances, afternoon and night, will be sellouts.

Corcaita Cristiani, baby 14-year-old member of the Cristiani equestrian troupe, came a cropper yesterday—but not in the ring. Because of her years and the District's child-performer laws being what they are, she had to confine her activity to playing the role of "Mistress Mary" atop an elephant in the "King Cole" pageant. Bareback riding is barred to her in the Capital.

Innovations which captured the crowds' imagination yesterday included the revival of the calliope and bell wagon; the radically changed menagerie, in which Gargantua and his gorilla girl friend M'Toto are the headliners; a rash of neon lighting, and a totally different midway setup.

"Doggone if the big show ain't goin' too modern for me," mused a zebra keeper in the menagerie tent as he contemplated the streamlined improvement.

D. C. Churches May Adopt Retirement Plan

The District of Columbia Baptist Convention of churches is expected to adopt the ministers' retirement plan inaugurated by the Southern Baptist Convention's 18 States, the Associated Press reported yesterday from Birmington, Ala., scene of the Southern parley.

Among local Baptist leaders there are Dr. Rufus B. Weaver and George B. Frazier, executive secretary and president, respectively, of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; Dr. Edward Huges Pruden, First Baptist pastor and former Federation of Churches' president; Henry L. Sweinhart, and the Rev. Mike Elliott, associate editor and editor, respectively, of the National Baptist magazine; E. Hilton Jackson and Howell D. Young, of First Church, and others.

Jackson is expected to present a report on the committee on public relations of the Northern and Southern Baptist conventions.

'Temporary Housing' Plan Outlined to Home Builders

J. C. Nichols, Office of Production Management official, urged home builders yesterday that in constructing modern permanent housing for defense, thought be given whether further blighted areas will be created and competition to older houses set up, thus interfering with eventual rebuilding of existing urban areas.

Addressing the opening session of the Home Builders Institute of America, new professional branch of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at Mayflower Hotel, the veteran developer and planner said: "Let us have the courage to look things in the face and where permanently built housing would only further emphasize the decentralization of our cities that is going on dangerously fast, let us go into temporary housing for the defense emergency and have the courage eventually to tear this housing down."

Nichols, for 15 years a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, also warned that "we are dangerously near losing the sacred governmental character of our city." Already, he reminded, defense concentration of some 3,500 new employes per month in Washington is overloading water and sanitation systems, schools, playground facilities, public utilities and creating traffic congestion far beyond street capacity.

Advises Removal

He expressed belief that an effort should be made now to move out of the Capital, where the Government already rents some one-fourth of its space, certain nondefense activities into cities where ample vacant office space and public utilities are ready to serve governmental needs.

Regarding Nichols' suggestion, Administrator John M. Carmody, Federal Works Agency, another speaker, said he had suggested moving agencies that could be transferred from Washington before there was an Office of Production Management, but described the difficulties of transplantation as enormous, like tearing up not only the roots of a tree but of a forest. Persons come to Washington, buy homes and send their children to school here, he said, and since there is no important industry here other than governmental work, the children naturally enter that activity.

Insured Mortgages Popular

Federal Housing Administrator Abner H. Ferguson informed the institute that approximately half of the single-family houses being built in this country are financed under the insured mortgage system. As indications of continued growth, he explained that 1940 saw the largest volume of both modernization loans and insured home mortgages that FHA had recorded; that the first quarter of 1941 was the most active of any corresponding period and that April was the record month in small-home applications and number of new houses started under FHA inspection.

Public welfare in the defense emergency period calls for an approximately 20 per cent increase in home construction to care for worker migrations and stabilize rent conditions, Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, told the meeting.

Kniskern emphasized that whatever priorities and restrictions may be required for ordinary activities and business by the defense effort, it is important for public interest that home building and reconditioning not only proceed but increase in volume.

Outlines Program

In outlining the program of the institute, David D. Bohannon, San Francisco, its president, said home building in America not only is faced with a challenge to meet speedily and efficiently housing needs of unprecedented industrial mobilization but also may well be destined for cushioning a post-defense letdown, since there is constructive use, in needed homes, for billions of dollars and millions of workers.

Program of activities adopted by the institute included aid in development of legislative and administrative conditions needed for sound action in home building, both for the present emergency and for long term urban development; fostering development of fair modern building codes; collaboration with groups of manufacturers in developing specifications of products and materials used in home building which will be more adaptable to changing conditions, and which will reduce costs; investigation of the possibility of obtaining mutual or cooperative arrangements with respect to liability and other types of insurance; study of the possibility of cooperative arrangements for purchase of supplies, locally or nationally, where such arangements would seem to be economically sound and advanta-

Tonight Gov. James F. Twohy, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, will speak on "The Federal Home Loan Bank System—An Instrument for Home Builders," at a dinner closing the meeting. Tomorrow members of the group will inspect local and Baltimore housing.

Citizens Oppose Beer-License Plea

A resolution opposing the granting of an on-and-off-sale beer license to Florence, Inc., a store in Clifton Park, was adopted by the Four Corners (Md.) Citizens' Association at a meeting Wednesday night.

The association feels that such a business would create a traffic hazard and lower property value in the neighborhood.

The following nominating committee was named: Dr. William Randall, chairman; Mrs. Ira Laws, Mrs. Philip Brown, Mrs. John Hamilton, Joseph Buscher, M. O. Kidwell and Charles Clements.

N. U. Debaters Beat Kentuckians

The debating team of National University, now on tour, triumphed over the University of Kentucky team yesterday afternoon in a debate at Lexington, Ky. The Washington team took the affirmative of the subject, "Resolved: that there should be a permanent union between the British Commonwealth and the United States, effective immediately."

Miss Anne Murphy and Harry Gaberman, who are the members of the traveling team, will debate today with the team of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, Mich. The Washington students defeated Carnegie Tech's debaters Monday.

Independence Day Committee Named

Preparations for Washington's annual Fourth of July celebration got under way yesterday with selection of a committee to make plans.

Fred A. Smith, president of the Board of Trade, was named general chairman of the group. L. P. McLachlen, banker, was appointed chairman of the finance committee and William Press, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, was made vice chairman.

Commissioner John Russell Young announced that each chairman would select his own committee members and the program probably would follow the same pattern as in past years, with fireworks on the Monument Grounds.
